JUDGE'S RULING IN LIQUOR CASE PUZZLES POLICE

Defendant Freed Because He Was Caught When Anonymous "Tip" Was Investigated.

WAS FOUND BOTTLING WHISKY IN YARD

Decision by Provisional Judge Grodzki Based Entirely on Manner of the Discovery.

A case in which the police rum squad had caught a man filling whisky bottles, after they had arrived on the scene while investigating a complaint about an adjoining pool room, was dismissed by Judge Grodzki in the Court of Criminal Correction, Friday, because the complaint about the poolroom—not the bootlegger—was anonymous.

The dismissal was ordered before the first witness, Officer Everett Fischer, had completed his testimony, and while other witnesses, including Detective - Sergeant Coakley, head of the squad, were waiting to take the stand.

On Sept. 5 the squad went to a pool room at 919 North Ninth street to investigate a complaint, and they inspected the premises by permission of the manager. The rear door was open and looking out, the officers unexpectedly saw a man and 13 bottles in the adjoining yard, No. 921.

Testimony of Policeman.

Officer Fischer testified 12 bottles had been filled with "moonshine" and the man was siphoning the contents of a can into the thirteenth bottle, when interrupted. Fischer said he asked the man, Joe Crochaiolo, who has a grocery at that address, what he intended to do with the whisky, and the grocer replied, "Me no speak English."

"You say you went to the pool room on some complaint?" asked Judge Grodzki, at this point in the testimony.

"Yes, sir," replied Officer Fischer.

"On whose complaint?" "We received a letter."

"Have you the party in court that made the complaint?" "No sir."

"I am tired of people sending in these letters that haven't the courage to sign their name to the letter, or to face the defendant in court. The complaint was lodged against the poolroom man, and not against this defendant who conducts the grocery store next door. The defendant is discharged."

Detective Sergeant Puzzled.

Detective Sergeant Coakley later told reporters he failed to see why it was necessary to have the complainant in court, inasmuch as the complaint referred only to the poolroom and not to the whisky.

The evidence rejected in court had been deemed sufficient by Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Fania to justify a warrant charging Crochaiolo with possession of liquor. The usual fine for that offense is $20, the proceeds going to the Board of Education.

Grodzki is serving as provisional Judge in the absence from the city of Judge Calvin Miller, who appointed him with the approval of Circuit Judge Landwehr.

LEAGUE SESSION ADJOURNS AFTER ANNUAL ELECTION

Resolution Introduced by Venezuela Delegate on Rotation Memberships Adopted.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, Sept. 26.—The annual election by the League of Nations Assembly by the six nonpermanent members of the league council today resulted in no change in the composition of that body. Belgium, Brazil, Spain, Sweden, Czecho-Slovakia and Uruguay continue as nonpermanent members.

The assembly adjourned sine die at 5 o'clock this afternoon.

China received 26 votes for a place among the nonpermanent members of the council and just failed of election. The assembly adopted a resolution introduced by Venezuela declaring that the principle of rotation of the nonpermanent seats should become effective next year.

10-Minute Snowfall.

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Ok., Sept. 26.—The first snow of the season in Ottwa County was reported today by residents of Picher as having occurred there last night. Tiny flakes fell in that city for 10 minutes, beginning at 10:40 o'clock, several residents reported.

BUGLE CORPS LEADS PARADE FOR MITCHELL IN WASHINGTON

Barbecue Preceded by March Down Pennsylvania Avenue With Colonel in Open Carriage.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—The welcome accorded Col. William Mitchell upon his arrival here last night from San Antonio was continued tonight at a barbecue in his honor arranged by friends. The feast was preceded by a march down Pennsylvania avenue. The Colonel, former assistant army air chief and an outspoken critic of American air policies, rode in an open carriage, with a bugle corps from American Legion Posts leading the way. A group of marchers in civilian garb brought up the rear. Seated with Mitchell in the carriage were four members of the Forty and Eight, of the American Legion playground.

The parade started from the municipal building, near the treasury and continued to the Peace Monument at the foot of the capitol, in one of whose chambers, the Colonel will appear Tuesday as a witness before the President's air board.

The Colonel and Mrs. Mitchell planned to spend tomorrow at their country home near Middleburg, Va., returning here Monday.

COW HORSE WINNER OF COLORADO ENDURANCE RIDE

Defeats Army Mounts and Those of Millionaires With 97.5 Points of a Possible 100.

By the Associated Press.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., Sept. 26.—United States army mounts, trained to the dot, Arab strain, and millionaires' horses alike were defeated in the fourth annual Colorado endurance ride by Ranger, a cow horse, which today was adjudged winner of the contest with a total of 97.5 points out of a possible 100. Condition counted for 60 points and speed the other 40 in the judging. Ranger, half thoroughbred, is owned by Ed Pring, local ranchman, and ridden by Ted Flynn, cowboy.

Vamp, owned by Capt. H. N. Beeman and ridden by Private Del Harris, and which paced the Fort Riley (Kan.) entries, won second place. Tomahawk, owned by Sergt. T. Garrity of Fort D. A. Russell, Wyoming, won third, and Norfleet, owned by Maj. Henry Leonard of Broadmoor and ridden by George Snurr, a cowboy, 64 years old, was fourth.

CONFESSES KILLING WEALTHY WOMAN WITH HAMMER

Daughter of San Antonio (Tex.) Rooming House Keeper Declares She Will Plead Self-Defense.

$10,000 WORTH OF JEWELS MISSING

Mother of the Confessed Slayer Says She Found Latter Fighting With Millionaire Recluse.

By the Associated Press.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Sept. 26.—Mrs. Mabel Longworth Sheridan signed a statement here today in the presence of District Attorney C. M. Chambers, confessing the hammer killing of Mrs. Ada McCobb, 59-year-old millionaire recluse, who died in a hospital yesterday, after being found in her home suffering from wounds on her head. The statement says she will plead self-defense in her trial.

The District Attorney refused to divulge the details of the statement but said it was 10 pages long.

Jewels Are Missing.

Officers also found Mrs. Sheridan in an unconscious condition in the apartment of Mrs. McCobb. Jewels valued at $30,000 were in a trunk in the room.

Officers are attempting to locate other jewels said to be valued at $10,000 which the dead woman is said to have worn. These jewels were not found in the room.

Letters found among Mrs. McCobb's effects bore the name of Thomas Churchill of San Francisco. A message from Mrs. Churchill said Mrs. McCobb was a friend of her family and gave the information that the dead woman's husband had been dead many years. He was a New York financier with offices at 20 Wall street, New York.

Mrs. McCobb had spent the winters in San Antonio for many years. She always was well supplied with funds and wore many jewels. There are no relatives here and officers have been unable to find anyone in whom the woman had confided.

Hammer Found on Floor.

When officers entered Mrs. McCobb's room, in a rooming house, they found her on the floor with her head crushed and bleeding profusely. Near her Mrs. Sheridan was lying. Nearby was a carpenter's hammer smeared with blood and hair. Splotches were on the walls and the furniture was disarranged as if a struggle had taken place.

Mrs. W. M. Longworth, mother of Mrs. Sheridan, and keeper of the rooming house, and Mrs. Emma Jeanette Pullian, a maid, were taken to the District Attorney's office for questioning.

The maid said that she had taken Mrs. McCobb's lunch to her room and that Mrs. Sheridan was sitting on a trunk talking to her. Mrs. Longworth had sent word by her to Mrs. Sheridan to come to her lunch, the maid said, and when she delivered the message Mrs. Sheridan told her to tell her mother she would be down soon.

Screams Heard From Room.

A short time afterward she heard screaming, the maid said, and was told by Mrs. Longworth to accompany her to Mrs. McCobb's room. The door was locked, she said. Mrs. Longworth went through an east porch and tore a screen off and entered the room. Several minutes elapsed before the door was opened, the maid said, and she then saw Mrs. McCobb on the floor with her head crushed and Mrs. Sheridan lying near her. Mrs. Longworth called the Sheriff's office and an ambulance.

SIX MEN LOST IN CAPSIZED SHIP

Captain and Five Seamen Drowned —Two Reach Shore Safely.

By the Associated Press.

NORTH SYDNEY, N. S., Sept. 26.—Capt. Joseph Vatcher of the 55-ton schooner Inez G. Burgeo, Newfoundland, and five seamen were drowned last night when their vessel capsized about three miles off Lingan, while making for North Sydney for shelter.

There were two survivors, Kenneth Bragg of Burgeo and George Bungay of North Sydney, who reached shore in a dory which Bungay managed to get afloat when the schooner went down. Besides Capt. Vachter those lost were Robert Strickland, Ward Harris, John Hiscock and R. Strickland of Burgeo, and James Wheeler of North Sydney.

CROWD OF 9000 ACCLAIMS REVIVAL OF HORSE RACING

Continuous Heavy Rain Fails to Dampen Ardor at Opening of New Fairmount Track.

GRANDSTAND WAS PROMPTLY FILLED

Betting System Popular With "Customers" After They Become Familiar With the Way It Worked.

By RALPH COGHLON.

When Seth's Alibi, the heavily played favorite, sloshed past the judges' stand yesterday to win the feature race of the program, a very wet and slightly delirious crowd gave the winner and his rider, L. Geving, a furious ovation and then stampeded the cashiers' windows to collect $4.70 for every $2 invested in the horse's winning chances. That was the high moment in St. Louis' first racing day in 20 years. But for an audience starved for a sight of the bangtails, there were many other joyous emotional peaks as the Fairmount Jockey Club opened its new track near Collinsville, Ill.

No worse day for the sport could have been chosen. The sky dripped constantly throughout the seven races, the rain increasing in intensity as the afternoon progressed. In none too good condition early in the day, the track melted into soft slop, in which the horses sunk above the fetlock. Because of this very heavy going, the time for all the races was 10 seconds or so slower than the average. As the horses plowed through the morass, they aroused a cloud of yellow, blinding spray which acted as a further handicap both to riders and their mounts.

Crowd Arrived Early.

Despite the bedraggled condition of the sport, a crowd of 9000 showed great enthusiasm for the new toy. By 2 o'clock, the time of the first race, the grand stand, seating 5800, was filled, and a milling, jostling mass packed the betting shed underneath. In disdain of the weather, as the horses went to the post for the first race, spectators who could not find places in the grand stand gathered three deep for the entire length of the rail while the rain drenched them.

As the first barrier was sprung, and the animals strained at their task, there was that peculiar throaty gust of sound, "They're off," and then a babble of excited gibberish rising to a deep crescendo as Fast Time and Music Shop came neck and neck past the grand stand far ahead of the pack. It was as exciting a finish as could possibly be desired, Fast Time sticking out his nose to win. No blase racing audience would so shamelessly exhibit its delight as did this one.

Arrangements Admirable.

Aside from its festive air, the crowd displayed some bewilderment as to the ritual of racing, which is exceedingly complicated. Where and how to bet, where to cash tickets, how to read the racing program, how to ascertain probable odds and such important matters were at first puzzling problems. But, as the afternoon progressed, the customers quickly caught on to the system.

This was simplified by the admirable arrangement of the plant. All the business of betting goes on beneath the stand. There is a long line of booths, on one side, and a long line of cashiers' windows to correspond, on the other. At the end of the betting shed is a board headed, "Probable Refund," which before each race lists the horses about to run and the odds in which they are being favored in the early betting. These odds are not entirely accurate, but merely approximated.

Betting System Popular.

Because of the Illinois law prohibiting gambling, the subscription system is employed. Each person who buys a "certificate" of $2 or more makes a "vlountary contribution" to be used as part of the purse awarded to the owner of the horse winning first, second or third place. In other words each ticketholder owns an interest in the horse's chances to win. If he does win, all the money contributed to losing horses is divided among those who contributed to winning horses, minus a percentage of 5 per cent retained by the Jockey Club to pay purses and expenses, this being called a "refund."

The crowd at Fairmount yesterday got a good deal of amusement out of the terms employed to disguise what is, in actual practice, the pari-mutuel system of betting.

1000 GALLONS OF WINE IN BASEMENT OF HOME

Henry Denger, Former Brewer, and Visitor Who Calls During Raid, Arrested.

Prohibition agents, with a search warrant, yesterday raided the home of Henry Denger, 66 years old, at 3257 Minnesota avenue, and arrested Denger after finding about 1000 gallons of wine in the basement.

While the raid was in progress, Rudolph Knoll of 310 Kingshighway Park, a carpenter, came to purchase a bottle of wine, he said, and was arrested. The agents reported they found a bottle of whisky in Knoll's pocket.

The Federal forces were told of the wine in Denger's cellar by neighbors who complained that he was selling it. Denger was formerly a licensed maker of sacramental wine, but his permit was revoked two years ago for failure to make a report. The search warrant on which yesterday's raid was made was obtained by an agent who had previously purchased wine at the Denger home. Denger was formerly an employe of the Stifel Brewing Co.

GERMANY FORMALLY ACCEPTS SECURITY PACT INVITATION

Paris and Berlin Not Yet Agreed as to Location of Parley to Be Held Oct. 5.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Sept. 2.—The German Ambassador, Herr von Hoesch, today called at the Quai d'Orsay and formally accepted the allied invitation for Germany to attend a conference to discuss the proposed security pact.

It is not yet settled that the conference will open Oct. 5 at Locarno on Lake Maggiore, Switzerland.

The French and German Governments are encountering difficulties in agreeing upon the city in which to hold the security pact conference. The French are holding out for Locarno, while the Germans insist that some other Swiss town be chosen, preferably Zurich.

RADIO 200 FEET UNDERGROUND

World Record Believed to Have Been Broken by Mine Set.

By the Associated Press.

HASTINGS, Neb., Sept. 26.—Westinghouse Radio Station is believed to have broken a world's record in underground reception last night while broadcasting a program furnished by talent from the Kearney State Teachers' College and broadcast from the Hotel Clarke studio here.

Milo F. Lee, radio operator at the Colorado Flourspar Mine, at Cowdrey, Colo., wired the station at 9:30 p. m. Central standard time, that the program was being received very plainly on a receiving set 200 feet underground in the mine and that the miners were listening in between shots of blasting powder.

Earth Shocks Felt in France.

By the Associated Press.

LIMOGES, France, Sept. 26.—Two sharp earthquake shocks were felt here between 5 and 6 o'clock this morning, the second movement lasting 10 seconds. The shocks also were felt in several other places in this vicinity, notably Chateauroux.

EDITOR MAGEE'S SON AND AVIATOR KILLED IN PLANE FALL

Albuquerque (N. M.) Oil Company Secretary Was Taking Flying Lesson in Oklahoma.

TULSA, Ok., Sept. 26.—Carl C. Magee Jr. of Albuquerque, N. M., son of Carl C. Magee, Albuquerque editor, and secretary of the Noble Oil and Gas Co., was killed in an airplane crash near Broken Arrow late today. Dick Phillips, Tulsa aviator and proprietor of the Phillips-Bowman Air Field here, was killed in the same crash. Phillips was piloting a "Swallow" plane and was instructing Magee to fly.

The accident occurred five miles from Tulsa. According to spectators the plane failed to come out of a dive before it hit the ground. Phillips was one of the best known aviators in Oklahoma.

Editor Magee of Albuquerque is still suffering from injuries received Aug. 21 in an encounter with David J. Leahy, former District Judge. John D. Lassetter, a bystander, was shot and killed by the elder Magee during the scuffle.

Young Magee has been with the Noble Oil and Gas Co. at Tulsa for the past five years. He was manager of the company and had charge of its holdings in Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas and New Mexico. It was for this purpose that he took up flying, his father said. The younger Magee attended Kemper Military Academy at Booneville, Mo., Oklahoma University at Norman, Ok., and Iowa University at Iowa City, Ia.

3 HERRIN MINERS KILLED, ONE INJURED, IN EXPLOSION

Bodies of Dead Recovered Several Hours After Blast in Consolidated Coal Mine.

By the Associated Press.

HERRIN, Ill., Sept. 26.—Three coal miners were killed and a fourth was slightly injured today in a gas explosion in Mine No. 7 of the Consolidated Coal Co. near here.

The bodies of the dead miners were recovered late today after they had been entombed several hours.

The dead are: John Fulkins, William Druzinski and James Galligan, a cousin of Sheriff George Galligan. Pete Serena was injured when hit by falling coal, but hospital attendants said he would recover. The mine normally employs 500 men, but as today was a holiday only a few were in the mine.

DIXIE FLYER IS WRECKED

MACON, Ga., Sept. 26.—Several passengers were injured when the locomotive and seven cars of the southbound Dixie Flyer, a Chicago-to-Jacksonville train, was derailed tonight at Orchard Hill, Ga., five miles south of Griffin, Ga., according to reports received by Central of Georgia Railroad officials here. No one was reported killed. Seven Pullman cars turned over, it was reported. The derailment occurred in front of the Orchard Hill station. The accident tore up 550 feet of track.

Engineer Gregory, Macon, was reported to have been badly scalded.

Air Craft in Fight on Rum Row.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Rum Row is to be fought with aircraft. One seaplane has been used with telling effect by the coast guard and Congress will be asked to provide for others. Traffickers fly over coast guard ships and deliver supplies of liquor. With a fleet of seaplanes this source of rum can be stopped. Moderate-sized appropriations will be requested.

DIVERS FIND NO SIGN OF LIFE ON SUBMARINE SUNK WITH 33 ABOARD

ST. LOUISAN TELLS OF RESCUE WHEN SUBMARINE SANK

Michael Lira, Awakened by Crash, Became Entangled in Radio Antenna.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, Sept. 26.—Michael S. Lira, 22 years old, fireman first-class, of St. Louis, brought ashore the only injury of any of the three survivors, a scratch on his shoulder and a banged up left leg, where the radio mast caught him and dragged him down 20 feet with the stricken submarine S-51.

He brought in, too, the last picture of the heroic "Captain," Lieut. Rodney H. Dobson, commanding officer of the ill-fated craft.

"The thing that sticks in my mind," Lira said, as he sat in his B. V. D.'s in a stateroom bunk of the City of Rome, wrapped in a blanket that was furnished him by the officers of the boat that rammed the submarine, "is the Captain pleading with the Rome to throw us a line. 'For God's sake throw us a line,' I can hear the 'Cap' yet, demanding that line. But there was no time in the dark for the Rome to get out a line.

Caught in Radio Antenna.

"We sank fast; in a moment after I had climbed the conning tower beside the Captain and three others I could not recognize, we went down. I got caught in the radio antenna and dragged down 20 feet or more. When I came up I was 100 feet astern and the Rome was sailing away from us fast. I never got a sight of the Captain or any of the other three of the conning tower after I went down. They had heavy clothes on. I was just in my B. V. D.'s as I jumped out of bed.

"They say I was in the water 45 minutes before a boat picked me up. I don't remember much about it. For awhile the boys were shouting for help, for a line, for a buoy, for a boat.

"No, I'm not extra as a swimmer. I guess it was endurance a good deal and I didn't have clothes to pull me down. The water was terribly cold, but I don't seem to remember that sensation until I was pulled out.

"It was awfully dark. The Rome didn't have any searchlights on the water. But it was a clear night. The water was very rough. Everybody just swam around until the Rome pulled around and sent out boats.

No Answer From Shipmate.

"I remember one fellow was swimming 20 feet ahead of me. I shouted, 'O shipmate, O shipmate,' but he didn't answer, and just before I was picked up, I lost sight of him."

"Was it you shouting to me and grabbing hold of me, that I kept kicking off?" his fellow survivor, Dewey George Kile of Natchez, Miss., asked.

"No, it wasn't me, it must have been——," said Lira laconically.

"We were on a variability test," Lira said, continuing his story. "We had been out since 10:30 o'clock that morning. There wasn't anything the matter with the submarine. It was fit as pie. Almost new, just commissioned in 1922.

"I went off watch at 8 o'clock and had been in bed an hour before we were struck. I must have been just barely asleep by that time.

"I ran up on deck and to the conning tower where the captain was with three others. We all stayed there until the boat sank under us. Everybody stuck on the boat, except Kile, who was washed overboard.

"The Rome stayed about for about an hour and a half, until midnight, searching for survivors, and they have all been great to us on board. The steward has taken care of us. The officers gave us blankets and some clothes.

"Kile, oh he's perfect. I'm the only one hurt, and mine's nothing. That black eye of Ueler's he got before."

Lira is positive the submarine was lighted when he woke up, with a blue all-night light, burning in the sleeping compartments.

Kile, one of the three men rescued, is an engineman, first-class. He said he was awakened by a piece of cork hitting him in the face and then saw the water pouring through the torpedo and battery rooms where nearly all of the crew were at the time of the disaster. He was swept beneath a conning tower. He then tried to close the hatch, but was swept overboard.

Repeated Efforts to Rai the S-51 by Means Compressed Air Are U successful.

LARGE HOLE IN HER PORT SID

Three Survivors Float Out of Conning Tower— Chlorine Gas Release After Steamer Hit Vess

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Sept. 26.—The submarine S-51, struck and sunk by the steamer City of Rome, 16 miles east of Block Island, last night, lies in 125 feet of water, while men from other ships of the Navy are doing their best to learn whether any of the 33 men believed to be entrapped within her hull are alive.

A message received at the Navy Yard late tonight described unsuccessful attempts by divers to raise the S-51 by means of compressed air and said that repeated efforts to communicate with the submarine's crew had proved unsuccessful.

The divers had verified reports that the vessel had been pierced near "frame 44" of her structure.

Air Applied Without Success.

"Air was connected to the compartment and ballast tank and the air was applied with no success, the message said. "Will continue to apply the air and will endeavor to pass slings under the stern and attempt to raise clear for rescue."

The communication said that operations were still directed toward rescue only.

The local office of the United States Hydrographic Bureau has asked all shipping to keep clear of the sunken S-51, in order that there might be no interference with the work of raising her.

Steamer's Officers Summoned.

Capt. John Diehl of the City of Rome, those of his officers, who were on duty at the time of the collision and members of the crew of the steamer, have been ordered to report tomorrow morning at the office of the United States Steamboat Inspector to give testimony regarding the accident. Counsel for the Ocean S. S. Line, owners of the steamship City of Rome, tonight made public a statement by Capt. Diehl, in which the captain declared that everything possible was done to rescue survivors of the S-51 crew.

The statement follows:

"The log of the City of Rome shows that the collision occurred at 10:24. By 10:32 lifeboat No. 1, in charge of the first officers, had been launched and was searching for survivors. Lighted ring buoys had been lowered. A ladder had been lowered to the water's edge and seamen with ropes were standing ready. All of the other lifeboats were ready for launching. The lifeboat, which had been launched, found three men and they were brought in.

"No other survivors were found or seen. Oil was seen on the surface marking the spot where the submarine sank.

"The location of the collision was plotted and sent to the Navy Department. After standing by and seeing no signs of life the ship proceeded."

The only members of the crew of 37 rescued by the steamer were three seamen who were landed in Boston late today. Those three men held out little hope that their comrades would be found alive because they said chlorine gas had been released in the submarines. They owed their escape to the fact that they were near the conning tower and floated out.

Diver's Efforts Unsuccessful.

A diver sent down from the U. S. S. Camden reported that he had been unsuccessful in his attempts to communicate with the crew of the submarine. He found a large hole in her port side aft the conning tower. The possibility that the imprisoned men might survive for considerable time gave the crews of several naval vessels on the scene every incentive to speed up the task of trying to establish communication and make the necessary preparation for an attempt to raise the submarine to the surface.

"The S-51 came from the sea," said the graphic report sent by Capt. Diehl of the City of Rome, "with no sidelights showing. We nearly into ship when sidelights were switched on. Backed full speed but sub did not change. Struck forward conning tower. Sub sank at once. Only three men saved. Being taken off. All passengers and crew of Rome O K. Ship little dented."

Aircraft Rushed to Rescue.

In an earlier message Capt. Diehl said the submarine went down at 10:24 o'clock last night, 14 miles from Block Island.

That was all that was known of the circumstances of the collison before the City of Rome was warped into her berth in the Charlestown district late this afternoon.

The S-51 left the submarine base at New London, Conn., Sept. 20, on a practice cruise in command of Lieut. Rodney H. Dobson. The City of Rome, scheduled to leave Savannah for Boston Monday, was delayed for 24 hours and sailed Tuesday. On board were 29 passengers.

As soon as word of the collision was flashed on the air in the early hours of this morning, naval vessels were hurried to the scene from every port within reach. Aircraft also rushed to the rescue, and it was a naval seaplane, piloted by Lieut. C. S. Hawkins, which located the submarine early this afternoon through air bubbles coming to the surface.

The submarine S-1 quickly marked the position and as soon as possible divers were sent down. The destroyer Putnam was out from Newport and was one of the first vessels to reach the place where the S-51 had gone down. The Camden, lightship of the Atlantic fleet, arrive' soon afterward. The navy salvage ship Falcon went from the Brooklyn navy yard with three deep sea divers on board. The submarines S-1, S-3, S-49 and S-10 helped in the search, as well as the tenders Chewink, Vincent Astor's yacht Nourmahal, and A. Merritt Chapman, salvage lighter.

Capt. Diehl had sent word that the City of Rome would reach Boston about 2 p. m., but it was not until 3:30 o'clock that she docked. The three survivors of the submarine, Alfred Geier of New Bedford, Dewey Kile of Peoria, Miss., and Michael S. Lira of St. Louis, were the first to come ashore.

They were able to walk, but one of them was said to have been in a serious condition when picked up by the steamer because he had been partly overcome by chlorine gas and had considerable water in his lungs. Another of the men also had water in his lungs, but the third suffered merely from cold and was floating on his back when rescued.

Sank Within a Minute.

All three were wrapped in blankets and taken to the Naval Hospital at Chelsea.

They were in their bunks when the crash came, they said.

Lying nearer to the conning tower than the other members of the crew they were floated out into the water.

Capt. Diehl, after the arrival of the steamer, said he sounded his whistle, cut his speed and then reversed his engines immediately after sighting the S-51 on his starboard bow close in.

Lighted ring buoys were thrown into the sea at once, said the captain, and in six or seven minutes a boat had been launched. The three men rescued were the only ones in sight. The survivors said, however, they thought others may have been forced out of the S-51.

Slight Damage to Steamer.

The only evidence of damage to the City of Rome when she docked here was the appearance of scratches on the starboard side. Inspectors will examine her, however, before she sails on her return trip to Savannah.

Passengers said that it was a clear night. Some of them were in their staterooms and others on deck. They did not see the submarine before the collision. Three blasts on the ship's whistle were followed almost immediately by the crash and cries for help.

"The steamer," said C. H. Tinkham of Medford, "keeled over slightly as if it had run up on some obstruction."

Miss Margaret McAloof of Bangor, Me., a nurse, who was a passenger on the City of Rome, gave first aid to the three survivors.

She was assisted by Frank Easley of Dalton, Ga., a Harvard medical student.

Twelve of the missing members of the submarine's crew have their homes in New England. The others are from various parts of the country. Several of them were married and some had children.

Lieut. Dobson's home is in Brockport, N. Y. Frank C. Wiseman of South Boston, a torpedo man, was one of three brothers—in the navy.

The steamer City of Rome is owned by the Ocean Steamship Line. Capt. Diehl has followed the sea for 40 years, for the most part as master on vessels of this line. His home is in Everett. Twice previously steamers which he commanded were in less serious accidents, colliding with fishing schooners.

As Many as 25 May Be Alive, Says Air Station Commander.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LAKEHURST, N. J., Sept. 26.—Commander Jacob H. Kline of the Lakehurst air station said that as many as 25 of the 34 men in the S151 might be alive below the waters off Block Island. "I doubt if more than 25 are alive," he said. "Some would have been lost in the wreckage and drowned. I imagine the submarine was struck in a fog, without warning, and this would predicate calm water, as there is no fog with wind and seas running. Smooth water would have given the crew a much better chance to close watertight compartments. The collision must have put the door-closing equipment out of commission, so they could not have all been closed at once.

"Individual men would have to jump to nearest doors, give them a swing shut and turn the wheel. If, say 25 escaped drowning, they would probably have enough air for two or three days on the bottom. They do not have oxygen tanks, but they might have additional air, which they could release slowly.

Bound to Be Oil Arising.

"The question is, how was the submarine struck. She may have been struck squarely amidships on the beam, and been sheared in two. In this case she became two ships, and there are the equivalent of two ships on the bottom. Men could be alive in either end, but I doubt if very many are.

"In steamship lanes vessels usually are going the same or opposite directions and not cutting across, in which case the likelihood is that the submarine was rammed on the nose or struck astern, or on the quarter.

"If on the nose that is the strongest part and damage would have been least. She would have had a chance to get doors closed and keep many men alive. The same is true of the stern, but the hull amidship is weakest and would cut through easily, doing great damage and leaving little hope of rescue.

"There is bound to be some oil arising from a rammed submarine. Water rushing into opened sections would pick up oil, off machinery, and a small quantit yof grease makes a very wide patch. If the oil tanks were opened up the oil streaks would be continuous and cover large areas."

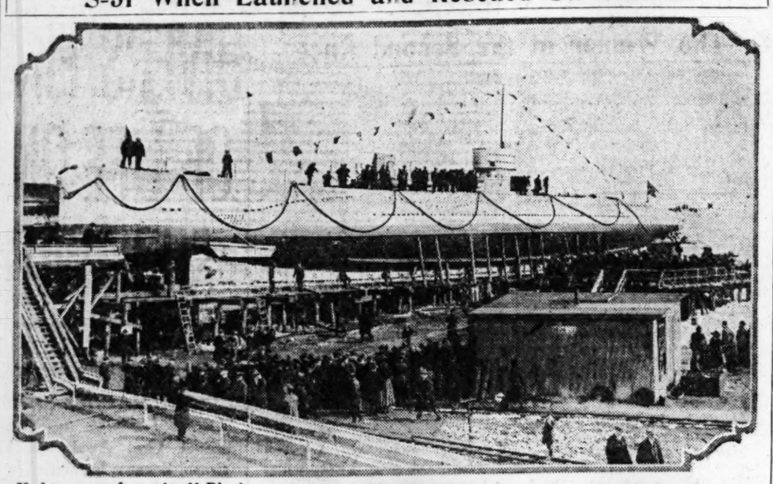
Wilbur's Statement Untrue, Says Steamship Line Manager.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept 26.—E. K. Richardson, vice president and general manager of the Ocean Steamship Co., in a statement given the Associated Press tonight, said that the City of Rome stood by the submarine S-51 until the captain was certain he could render no further aid. His statement follows:

"Secretary Wilbur's statement to Washington that the City of Rome did not stand by after colliding with submarine S-51 is unfounded. The master of the City of Rome states emphatically that his ship stood by until he was satisfied that no further rescue could be made and that he could do nothing more."

S-51 When Launched and Rescued St. Louisan



Under sea craft, sunk off Block Island, carried crew of thirty-seven officers and sailors.

MICHAEL SECUNDA LIRA of St. Louis, one of the three men of the crew of the submarine S-51, who were saved when the submarine was rammed and sunk by the City of Rome, was a fireman, first-class. His home was with his mother, Mrs. Jennie Lira, a widow, at 2309 Clark avenue.

Lira enlisted in 1919 and was sent to the Great Lakes Naval Training Station near Chicago. After three months' instruction he was sent to New London, Conn., attending the submarine school there for nine months. Following this he was assigned to the submarine O-12, spending five months on the craft and making a trip through the Panama Canal. At the conclusion of this trip he was transferred to the battleship Wyoming, but upon request was changed back to the submarine service, serving on O-1 until the vessel was junked.

At this time he again attended school, receiving an intensive course in submarine engines at Norfolk, Va. On June 1, 1925, he was assigned to the S-51.

SUBMARINE DISASTERS, NOT INCLUDING LOSSES DURING THE WORLD WAR

By the Associated Press.

FOLLOWING is a list of submarine disasters of recent years. This does not include the submarines sunk during the World War.

March 23, 1912.—British submarine sunk by destroyer in practice manuevers off Gibraltar; 23 men lost.

March 24, 1915.—United States submarine F-4 sank off Honolulu, 26 men lost.

Aug. 21, 1923.—Japanese submarine sank at dock at Kobe; 86 lost.

Oct. 28, 1923.—United States submarine O-5 collided with steamer Abangares at the Atlantic entrance to the Panama Canal; three drowned.

Jan. 10, 1924.—British submarine L-24 sank off Portland, England, in collision with British battleship Resolution; 43 lost.

March 19, 1924.—Japanese Submarine 43 sank in collision off Sasebo, with Japanese battleship Tatus, 49 lost.

Jan. 13, 1925—S-19 went aground on outer bar off Orleans, Mass.; crew safely landed; boat removed 2 days later.

Aug. 31, 1925—Italian submarine Sebastiano Veniero lost in maneuvers off Sicily; 50 aboard.

THOSE MISSING ON SUBMARINE S-51

J. M. Schofield, radio man, first-class, Bridgeport, Conn.

J. J. Sheehan, motor machinists' mate, first class, Croton, Conn.

Charles Carrell Thomas, fireman, second-class, El Paso, Tex.

Three Saved.

The three men saved by the steamer City of Rome are:

Michael Secunda Lira, 2309 Clark avenue, St. Louis, first-class fireman.

Dewey George Kile, first-class engineman, Peoria, Miss.

Alfred Geier, electricians' mate, second class, Bedford, Mass.

Searchlight Failed, Steamer Captain Says, Telling of Collision.

BOSTON, Sept. 26.—Capt. John H. Diehl of the City of Rome, on his arrival here late this afternoon, gave the following statement:

"I had been in the cabin, writing and making up my log. I came up on deck and saw a white light off the starboard. I watched it for a minute and called it to the attention of the lookout who thought it was a tug going west. I had about come to the conclusion that it was a rumrunner when I observed that it was coming toward us rapidly.

"Suddenly a red light flashed from the other vessel, meaning that she was going to cross our bow. There was only one thing to do. I ordered the steamer way over to port and the engines reversed, and at the same time sounded the warning whistle.

"It was too late. Forty-five seconds later we crashed into her. In 15 seconds more the submarine had sunk. We threw over lighted ring buoys and had a boat down in six or seven minutes. Our search light failed us after a moment, evidently burned out. The three men rescued were all we sighted."

Passengers on the City of Rome confirmed the captain's statement of the suddenness of the collision and the speed with which the submarine sank. They did not even see the submarine, but they heard cries for help.

The steamer was in no danger. An examination of her hull after she had docked showed only a slight identation on the starboard side below the water line, and a corresponding slight bulge on the port side and a few scratches.

Informed that Secretary Wilbur of the Navy felt that the City of Rome should have remained on the spot, Diehl said he would willingly have stayed all night and day at the scene had there been any indication that his remaining there would have served a useful purpose.

"I couldn't do any good," he said. "I did everything possible, circled round and round. I didn't start ahead until 11:45.

"I circled around the spot on slow bell. I didn't dare to sail over it. I drifted over the spot once, but nothing came up and nothing happened.

"I was going to lay to and assemble a buoy with some sort of anchor, but I thought the oil on the water was sufficient. I could see the oil spot on the water for a quarter of a mile. I feel there is not the need for the least bit of criticism. I did all in my power."

Salvage Ship With New Devices to Attempt to Raise Craft.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26. — The salvage ship Resolute, with several deep sea divers, left New York late today for Block Island to attempt to raise the sunken submarine S-51.

The ship was placed under naval orders from Washington, after the owners, Merritt Chapman & Scott Co., had been requested to dispatch the boat to the scene of the disaster by Rear Admiral De Steur, commandant of the Boston naval district, who believed that fast work might save the men in the S-51.

The salvage workers aboard the Resolute included the man who brought the F-4 to the surface from a depth of 306 feet in Honolulu Bay several years ago. The S-51 is submerged at about half that depth.

The salvage vessel was hurriedly equipped with several new diving devices which are expected to aid in the task of bringing the submarine to the surface. One contained a mixture of helium and oxygen to be breathed by the divers instead of ordinary air, enabling them to stay down longer and to come to the surface more quickly. Another device was an underwater pressure resisting light which throws a beam about four times as strong as that of a locomotive headlight for a distance of approximately 40 feet and which enables the divers to work in light which is described as being as good as ordinary daylight.

Use of this light officials of the salvage concern said greatly aided in the underwater examination of the steamship Lakeland in Lake Michigan. The Resolute Commander expressed confidence that the S-51 would be quickly located and raised to the surface by means of cables.

Seaman Reported on Sunken Craft Left Six Hours Before Crash.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Walter S. Harmon, member of the crew of the submarine S-51, reported as on the sunken craft, was located tonight at the home of his uncle, Richard Blees, in Jamaica, N. Y.

He had been called there by a telegram from his uncle telling of the serious illness of his father and had left the submarine on a five-day furlough just six hours before the sinking occurred.

SURVIVOR TELLS OF SHENANDOAH GAS DEFLATION

August C. Quernheim Saw Cell Flattened in Rear of Ship Before He Heard Cracking of Frame.

By the Associated Press.

LAKEHURST, N. J., Sept. 26.—Still more directly conflicting stories as to the condition of the helium gas cells in the airship Shenandoah just before she broke up in a storm on Sept. 3, were told today to the Naval Court of Inquiry here at the single session held before adjournment until Monday.

The testimony of James H. Collier, chief rigger, that there was a failure of several of the gas bags, was supported in part by the statement today by August C. Querenheim, another survivor, that he saw one cell in the afterpart of the ship deflated before he heard any crashing of girders.

A hissing sound as of the tearing of the fabric just before the Shenandoah foundered was testified to by Fred J. Tobin, aviation pilot. He said he could not say whether it was in a gas cell or the fabric of the ship as the tearing of these cloths would sound very much alike.

Cells Aft in Good Shape.

Standing out sharply against this testimony was that of Mark J. Donovan, boatswain's mate, who told the court that all of the cells aft appeared to be in good shape and that he was very positive that cells Nos. 1 to 8 were intact before the ship broke up and even after she finally hit the ground.

Testimony of a somewhat similar character was given by Henry O. Boswell, a rigger, and Joseph Shevlowitz, a machinist mate. Boswell said he felt of one gas bag after and found it in perfect condition and that there was nothing to indicate to him that any of the others were in bad shape.

Telephoned Command.

"All of the cells appeared to be in perfect condition," Shevlowitz stated. "I was walking along the cat-walks and it was not possible for me not to observe the condition of the bags as I went along."

A rather dramatic moment was furnished just before Court adjourned as Donovan told of a telephone conversation he had with Commander Zachary Lansdowne, dead Captain of the ship, while the craft was having her death battle with the storm.

"I was nearing Frame 60 when I saw a light on the telephone indicator at Frame 60," Donovan said. "I answered the signal and heard a voice which I took to be that of Captain Lansdowne. He asked 'How are the cells aft?' I told him they were all right aft of frame 60. He then said 'Pass the word along forward to all hands to be on their toes; we are going through together'."

Donovan's voice broke as he concluded the quotation.

Weather Map Testimony.

"A moment after that," he resumed, "I met O'Sullivan (one of the crew who was killed) and he said he would pass the word along as he went forward."

Three of the surviving officers still are to be re-examined by the Court and a fourth, Lieut. Joseph B. Anderson, still has to tell his story. It is the hope of the Judge-Advocate to hear all of them Monday.

Lieut. Anderson has been in Ohio studying meteorological conditions at the time the Shenandoah broke up. He is expected to be able to reconstruct the weather map for the court and describe just the character of the storm which destroyed the Shenandoah. This has been referred to generally as a line squall, one of the most deadly of all storms to aircraft, but whether it was that remains to be developed for the record of the inquiry.

DAVIS REGARDED AS CERTAIN CHOICE FOR CABINET POST

St. Louisan Made Favorable Impression by His Manner of Handling Mitchell's Charges.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent for the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Indications today pointed strongly to the early promotion of Dwight F. Davis of St. Louis from the post of Assistant Secretary of War to the full secretaryship. In the absence of Secretary John W. Weeks on account of ill health, Davis is now the acting Secretary at the head of the War Department.

Information which has come recently from Weeks, now at his summer home in New Hampshire, has led to the belief in administration circles that he will formally announce his retirement within a few weeks, possibly as early as Oct. 1. Weeks is said to have become convinced during the summer, following an operation in Boston, that it would be disastrous to his health for him to resume work in Washington.

Hilles Out of Running.

Small importance is attached to the fact that the President has not yet directly indicated to Davis that he is slated to be Weeks' successor. The President is habitually close-mouthed with respect to appointments even in talking with those most concerned, until he is ready to make them. There is good reason to believe, however, that he has settled on Davis and that the appointment will be announced simultaneously with the news of Weeks' resignation.

The belief that the choice has narrowed to Davis is strengthened by the known unwillingness of Charles D. Hilles, Republican National Committeeman for New York, to leave his business affairs to enter the Cabinet. Hilles was urged for the war portfolio by Senator Wadsworth, and until recently was regarded by some observers as the man most likely to be chosen. Though the President has high respect for Hilles' ability and a natural regard for a recommendation from the influential New York Senator, it is now believed that Hilles has definitely put himself out of the running.

New Not a Candidate.

Likewise, a rumor that Postmaster-General New would be transferred to the War Department has been squelched by word from New that he preferred to remain where he is.

On top of these signs of improvement in Davis' chances is the fact that the Acting Secretary has made an extremely favorable impression by the manner in which he has handled the War Department's case against the recent charges of Col. William Mitchell of the Air Service. Davis had already shown his ability to take care of the routine business of the War Department. His clear-cut statement at the opening of the hearings by the President's air inquiry board is believed to have cleared away any doubts that Mr. Coolidge may have entertained regarding his ability to deal with emergencies.

Politically, the qualifications of the Acting Secretary are fully up to requirements. He is a regular Republican and comes from a doubtful State. The Missouri Republican organization has strongly indorsed him for promotion.

In the belief of those most familiar with the situation, only one contingency could now wreck Davis' chances. This would be the development of a public sentiment against the present administration of the War Department in consequence of the testimony that Col. Mitchell will give before the air inquiry board next week. In other words, Mitchell might "blow up the War Department" to an extent that would cause the President to go outside the department for a new Secretary. In view of the expressed determination of the board neither to "crucify" Mitchell nor to glorify him, but to hold the inquiry down to a judicial examination of the facts, it is not believed by Davis' friends that the testimony of the fiery Colonel will have any ill effect on his prospects.

FORMER POST-DISPATCH MAN IS SPOKESMAN FOR MINISTER CAILLAUX

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.

ONE of the 12 French newspaper men accompanying the Caillaux debt finding delegation is Henri Dumay, Director-General of the Quotidien and the Progres Civique of Paris, who about 20 years ago was a teacher of French in St. Louis and later became a member of the editorial staff of the Post-Dispatch.

Dumay is in the confidence of the head of the French Mission, Joseph Caillaux, the Finance Minister, and acts as his spokesman in daily conferences with American newspaper men. He speaks English fluently. After his return to France from America, Dumay became managing editor of the Petit Parisien and later founded his own daily paper the Quotidien, which helped to bring the present French Ministry into power. The paper, a radical organ, has the fourth largest circulation in Paris, and is said to outrank all the rest in present political influence.

EIGHT KINDS OF HOME BREW FOUND IN A SALOON

Two Arrests Made in Raids on Bars in Which No Search Warrants Are Produced.

The police yesterday reported two arrests in connection with raids on saloons made during the day. In neither case was a search warrant produced before the search for liquor was carried out.

At 7 a. m. the police entered a saloon at 2715 DeKalb street, where eight different kinds of home brew were found. The proprietor, William Bainerberger, was arrested.

A saloon at 2301 Morgan street was raided at 1 p. m., and on finding two quarts of whisky in the ice-box a policemen arrested Edward Dell, 28 years old, a bartender.

MRS. BYFIELD WANTS DIVORCE

Wife of Atlanta Auto Dealer Charges Him With Cruelty.

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 26.—Mrs. Clyde K. Byfield filed suit for divorce today in Fulton Superior Court, charging her husband with cruel and inhuman treatment.

The Byfields recently were plaintiffs in a $100,000 damage suit against Walter T. Candler of Atlanta, which charged Candler with "improper relations" toward Mrs. Byfield while on an ocean liner. The Candler suit resulted in a mistrial.

M'MILLAN SHIP IN PORT AFTER ROUGH VOYAGE

Bowdoin Battled Continuous Gales on Trip From Arctic.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—The MacMillan Arctic ship Bowdoin has put in at Jack Lane's [illegible] north of Hopedale, Labrador, after the hardest battle of its career, having breasted storms every mile of its way from Greenland.

A picture of the fury of the storm to which the ship was exposed was given today to the National Geographic Society in a message from its correspondent with the expedition, Maynard Owen Williams.

"All the crew are well and happy in the companionship engendered by storm and danger," he said. "The only casualties are a [illegible] pound drum of gasoline [illegible] about four feet above its mate and tossed overboard by a rush of water, and the drowning on deck of a specimen of a rare northern goose brought along by Dr. Walter E. Koelz, our chief naturalist. The Eskimo dogs we unintentionally inherited from the Peary outfit through in fine shape, much to the regret of some of the crew.

The Peary, the other ship of the expedition, is at Forteau Bay, [illegible] side of Point Amor, in sight of the wreck of the Battleship Raleigh. The airplane carrier left Battle Harbor at 6 o'clock yesterday morning, but was forced into the harbor behind Point Amour by an easterly gale. As the message containing this information was sent a heavy snow blizzard set in about Forteau Bay.

"Crossing Davis strait, and braving the equinoctial storms, the Bowdoin's forecastle was awash with water," the society said. "The Koelz and John Reinartz, the Bowdoin's radio operator, risked their lives in guarding scientific instruments, specimens and camera which were being tossed about on the storm-driven boat.

"Mate Ralph Robinson stayed at the wheel for a stretch of many hours and was on deck almost uninterruptedly for 48 hours."

COURT DENIES EITHER DIVORCE IN SCOTT CA

Neither the Congressman Nor Mrs. Scott Entitled to Decree, Mich. Judge Decides.

MUST PAY HER $150 A MONTH UNTIL APPEA

Cross Bill by Mrs. Scott Alleged Drinking and Gambling Among Official Set.

By the Associated Press.

ALPENA, Mich., Sept. 26. Frank D. Scott, Michigan Congressman, and Edna James Scott, his wife, both were denied divorces in a decision handed down today by Circuit Judge Frank D. Emerick.

Judge Emerick ordered Congressman Scott to pay Mrs. Scott $150 a month for her support and maintenance "until the further order of this, or of the Supreme Court."

Congressman Scott would not say tonight whether he will appeal from the decision.

Mrs. Scott's Detroit counsel, Ward H. Peck, intimated that the next move might be made in Wayne County (Detroit) court. Mrs. Scott has maintained her residence in Detroit since her separation from her Congressman husband in 1922 and Mr. Peck indicated she would file a new suit for divorce, charging desertion.

In his brief decision, Judge Emerick said:

"It is my deliberate conclusion that neither of said parties is entitled to such a decree, with the result that plaintiff's bill of complaint and the defendant's cross bill will be dismissed without costs."

Anticipate an Appeal.

"In the meantime, until either or both of said parties perfect an appeal and until the further order of this, or of the Supreme Court, plaintiff shall pay defendant for her support and maintenance the sum of $150 on the first day of each calendar month."

Congressman Scott and his wife separated during Christmas week, 1922, after an all-night conference in the Scotts' Washington apartment had failed to bring a reconciliation of their difficulties.

It was a year later before Scott filed a petition for absolute divorce in the Alpena Circuit Court, charging extravagance and misconduct, both under the heading of extreme cruelty.

Accused Each Other.

In a cross-bill Mrs. Scott denied all the charges made by her husband and countered with allegations that the Congressman gambled "for high stakes" and that his conduct in other ways was of a nature making continued living together impossible.

Scott, in attempting to substantiate his charges of misconduct, named three men—Capt. Wilson ("Jazzbo") Summers of the air service, Harry Wyckoff a clerk at the Wardman-Park apartment hotel, Washington, and an unnamed man with whom Mrs. Scott is alleged to have become acquainted while traveling in Europe in the summer of 1922.

The hearing of the case before Judge Frank Emerick at Alpena early this year was interrupted to permit both sides to obtain additional data and was resumed early in August. The testimony was fringed with stories of liquor drinking and gambling parties in Washington and the names of several Congressmen or former Congressmen were heard.

Fast Congressional Set.

On the Congressional trip to Panama aboard the steamer Cristobal Mrs. Scott charged that her husband and other Congressmen gambled and drank. They was testimony that a quantity of liquor was taken aboard the steamer at Panama and that what was not consumed was unloaded from the boat at Norfolk, Va., and taken to the Washington homes of some of the Congressmen. It was testified that some of the liquor went to the Scott apartment, although Mr. Scott denied this.

That Mrs. Scott was "indiscreet" in entertaining men guests in her apartment during the absence from Washington of her husband was charged by the Congressman. This was denied by Mrs. Scott, for whom witnesses testified that her conduct was orderly.

The Scotts were married in 1911. There are no children. Mrs. Scott, prior to her marriage was a graduate nurse. Pending a decision on the petitions Mrs. Scott has been allowed $150 a month temporary alimony, in addition to special allowances to enable her to obtain depositions which were used at the trial.

250 Pounds of Honey in Vacant House.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Sept. 26.—Ruby Hulen and T. W. Lowery, two carpenters who were employed to remodel the country home of Frank Street, near Sturgeon, in the northern part of Boone County, found 250 pounds of honey stored between the floors of the first and second stories of the two-story structure, when they removed the flooring. The comb honey measured six feet long, 26 inches wide and 10 feet thick. Bees congregated in the house about three years ago while it was vacant.

The airplane carrier left Battle Harbor at 6 o'clock yesterday morning, but was forced into the harbor behind Point Amour by an easterly gale. As the message containing this information was sent a heavy snow blizzard set in about Forteau Bay.

"Crossing Davis strait, and braving the equinoctial storms, the Bowdoin's forecastle was awash with water," the society said. "Dr. Koelz and John Reinartz, the Bowdoin's radio operator, risked their lives in guarding scientific instruments, specimens and cameras which were being tossed about on the storm-driven boat.

"Mate Ralph Robinson stayed at the wheel for a stretch of many hours and was on deck almost uninterruptedly for 48 hours."

O PAYMENTS ARRANGED

COURT DENIES EITHER DIVORCE IN SCOTT CASE

Neither the Congressman Nor Mrs. Scott Entitled to Decree, Michigan Judge Decides.

MUST PAY HER $150 A MONTH UNTIL APPEAL

Cross Bill by Mrs. Scott Alleged Drinking and Gambling Among Official Set.

By the Associated Press.

ALPENA, Mich., Sept. 26.—Frank D. Scott, Michigan Congressman, and Edna James Scott, his wife, both were denied divorces in a decision handed down today by Circuit Judge Frank D. Emerick.

Judge Emerick ordered Congressman Scott to pay Mrs. Scott $150 a month for her support and maintenance "until the further order of this, or of the Supreme Court."

Congressman Scott would not say tonight whether he will appeal from the decision.

Mrs. Scott's Detroit counsel, Ward H. Peck, intimated that the next move might be made in a Wayne County (Detroit) court.

Mrs. Scott has maintained her residence in Detroit since her separation from her Congressman husband in 1922 and Mr. Peck indicated she would file a new suit for divorce, charging desertion.

In his brief decision, Judge Emerick said:

"It is my deliberate conclusion that neither of said parties is entitled to such a decree, with the result that plaintiff's bill of complaint and the defendant's cross-bill will be dismissed without costs.

Anticipate an Appeal.

"In the meantime, until either or both of said parties perfect an appeal and until the further order of this, or of the Supreme Court, plaintiff shall pay defendant for support and maintenance the sum of $150 on the first day of each calendar month."

Congressman Scott and his wife separated during Christmas week, 1922, after an all-night conference in the Scotts' Washington apartment had failed to bring a reconciliation of their difficulties.

It was a year later before Scott filed a petition for absolute divorce in the Alpena Circuit Court, charging extravagance and misconduct, both under the heading of extreme cruelty.

Accused Each Other.

In a cross-bill Mrs. Scott denied all the charges made by her husband and countered with allegations that the Congressman gambled "for high stakes" and that his conduct in other ways was of a nature making continued living together impossible.

Scott, in attempting to substantiate his charges of misconduct, named three men—Capt. Wilbur ("Jazzbo") Sumners of the air service, Harry Wyckoff, a clerk in the Wardman-Park apartment hotel, Washington, and an unnamed man with whom Mrs. Scott is alleged to have become acquainted while traveling in Europe in the summer of 1922.

The hearing of the case before Judge Frank Emerick at Alpena early this year was interrupted to permit both sides to obtain additional data and was resumed early in August. The testimony was fringed with stories of liquor-drinking and gambling parties at Washington and the names of several Congressmen or former Congressmen were heard.

Fast Congressional Set.

On the Congressional trip to Panama aboard the steamer Cristobal, Mrs. Scott charged that her husband and other Congressmen gambled and drank. There was testimony that a quantity of liquor was taken aboard the steamer at Panama and that what was not consumed was unloaded from the boat at Norfolk, Va., and taken to the Washington homes of some of the Congressmen. It was testified that some of the liquor went to the Scott apartment, although Mr. Scott denied this.

That Mrs. Scott was "indiscreet" in entertaining men guests in her apartment during the absence from Washington of her husband was charged by the Congressman. This was denied by Mrs. Scott, for whom witnesses testified that her conduct was orderly.

The Scotts were married in 1914. There are no children. Mrs. Scott prior to her marriage was a graduate nurse. Pending a decision on the petitions Mrs. Scott has been allowed $50 a month temporary alimony, in addition to special allowances to enable her to obtain depositions which were used at the trial.

250 Pounds of Honey in Vacant House.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Sept. 26.—Ruby Hulen and T. W. Lowery, two carpenters who were employed to remodel the country home of Frank Street, near Sturgeon, in the northern part of Boone County, found 250 pounds of honey stored between the floors of the first and second stories of the two-story structure, when they removed the flooring. The comb honey measured six feet long, 26 inches wide and 10 feet thick. Bees congregated in the house about three years ago while it was vacant.

Ex-Iceman Gets $7500 Of Mrs. Hedges' Estate

Of Sum, $2200 Is Money He Intrusted to Widow of Pope School Principal to Invest for Him as a Friend.

William Jeff, or Juelfs, of 2901A Rutger street, with whom Mrs. Margaret Barfoot Hedges used to talk over her business affairs when he delivered ice at her home, has received $7500 from Mrs. Hedges' $113,000 estate.

Part of the settlement represented money instrusted by the iceman to the thrifty widow to invest. He held receipts for $2200 at the time of her death, more than two years ago. The rest of the amount was a recognition of his kindness to the lonely woman, and of her apparent intent that he should receive a part of her estate.

A purported will, submitted by Jeff after Mrs. Hedges' death, bequeathed $10,000 to "My dear friend, William." For lack of proper certification, the will was not of legal effect, but the collateral heirs, who received the estate through the lack of a legal will, expressed willingness that Jeff should be treated generously. He has worked in recent years as a boilermaker, and has a family.

The business and personal acquaintance of Mrs. Hedges, widow of Benjamin Hedges, principal of the Pope School, with the iceman, began 25 years before her death. She was then past 50 years old, and Jeff helped her in many business matters, though it has since appeared that the chief credit for successful investments belonged to her. Her gratitude was expressed in a letter, which Mrs. Hedges left for him with the uncertified will. In her later years she lived in boarding houses, and she died at 4318 Olive street.

Distribution of the estate among 16 collateral heirs was ordered yesterday by Probate Judge Holtcamp. Public Administrator Hampe is in charge. The amount now remaining, after settlement of most of the claims, is $67,200. Thirteen heirs, nephews and nieces, are to receive $4500 each, and three other claimants, more distantly related, $1600 each. The distribution was ordered on petition of Mrs. Bertha M. Richards of Litchfield, Ill., a niece. Her petition showed details of the settlement of claims, and showed the $7500 settlement with Jeff, made out of court.

Since it avoids the evils of the bookmaker, and establishes natural and mathematically just odds instead of the arbitrary ones of the bookies, the subscription system was highly popular.

Nine horses were entered in the fifth, or feature race, called the Fairmount Inaugural Handicap, carrying a purse of $2000 added. They paraded past the grand stand at 4:15 under a driving, relentless rain. Strung along behind the lead pony, they marched to the post for the run of a mile and a sixteenth to be lined into position.

Hidden by Mist.

Since it was the first race of the day when the horses were started from a point easily visible from the grand stand, the crowd watched eagerly as Starter Snyder's assistants fought for a clean alignment of the fractious thoroughbreds. This process consumed four minutes.

When the webbing was lifted, and the pack got away to a good start, Donna Santa, George Groom and Seth's Alibi showed in front. Midwestern was fourth, and Tip Toe Inn, paired with Seth's Alibi as the Gentry and Weil entry, was last. At the half George Groom led Seth's Alibi by a length, with Midwestern fifth. Here the horses became lost in the mist. As they raced into the gloom at the other side of the mile oval, they could not be distinguished. Nothing but a dim idea of movement could be gained until they moved into the stretch, so heavy was the air with rain.

Here the crowd, on tiptoe, began urging them down the stretch. Seth's Alibi was in front, with Midwestern and George Groom as contenders. Then began in the last quarter Midwestern's heart-breaking drive for victory. Responding instantly to the demand of Jockey Vuillemot as they neared the winning post, Midwestern passed George Groom and gained on Seth's Alibi at every stride. At the finish line Midwestern, a mass of convulsive steel-like muscles, was a scant half length behind. He had managed to reach Seth's Alibi's flank, and, if the race had been a few yards longer, might have been the winner.

For a crowd new to racing, however, nothing could have been more popular than Seth's Alibi's victory. He paid $4.70 to win, $2.90 to place and $2.90 to show for each $2 bet. The small $2 bets came down on him and his stable mate, Tip Toe Inn, with a rush, and backed him into less than even money. From the enthusiasm his victory occasioned, it seemed as though everyone at the track held a ticket on him.

Largely because of the congested condition of the road back to St. Louis, the crowd began to trickle away after the fifth race. The Fairmount track is situated on Illinois State road No. 11, about 10 miles from St. Louis. There is a good road all the way with the exception of one strip of old macadam road, about a mile in extent, which is encountered upon leaving East St. Louis. This road, crossing numerous railroad tracks, will no longer be used when the underpass which is now being constructed is completed. This underpass will be open for use, according to Fairmount Jockey Club officials, about Oct. 15.

Continuous Line of Cars.

For a motorbus leaving the Jefferson Hotel at 12:45, it required an hour and a quarter to reach the track. The route, over the Free Bridge and through East St. Louis to State Road No. 11 was almost a continuous line of motor cars. The congestion in town, it being noon on Saturday, added to the confusion, but even when East St. Louis was passed automobiles just passed the strip of rough macadam road. Despite warnings of officials, two lines of machines going toward the track formed on this narrow lane.

In the meantime, St. Louis-bound traffic was much delayed while the erring machines sought a place on the right-hand side of the road. Fairmount-bound machines which experienced trouble were quickly shifted to the side of th road and progress toward the track, though slow, was steady.

Parking arrangements at the track were admirable, and it was obvious from the great number of machines that were parked that a large propdrtion of the spectators had driven their own cars. The electric line, which has a station a stone's throw away, carried a goodly number, while motor busses, taxis and private service cars accounted for the rest.

There were many exclamations of delight at the beauty of the track and at the skillful manner in which it has been arranged. The track itself is a mile-long oval, inclosed by a white fence, and marked by furlong posts gayly bedecked in green and white.

The infield is a grassy meadow. To the right are low hills and patches of woodland, to the left are the low barns where the horses are stabled. For the persons in the grandstand, a lovely panorama of greenery and open country stretches in all directions.

Constructed of concrete and steel, with the lower part cut into boxes, the grandstand is a sturdy structure. Between it and the track is a court paved with brick which on sunny days will be filled with spectators. A small stand just beyond the finish line has no roof and was not used yesterday.

Modern Equipment.

The normally glowing Caillaux was manifestly depressed last night. He was up and abroad and more cheerful at 8 o'clock this morning hauling all the Frenchmen out of their beds or away from their breakfasts to dig into the statistical interpretation of the Mellon memorandum. The French figure it resolves itself into a demand for annual payments averaging $160,000,000 over 62 years.

American officials, or one in particular who is most intimately informed, say flatly that reports of specific detailed offers are all wrong—that the negotiations have not yet reached the point of discussing reduction of accrued interest, for instance, or of interest rates save very generally and that even the hitherto stipulated 62-year period of payments may be abandoned. So far the discussion has turned on what France can pay annually, taking into consideration all aspects of her "capacity" including what she will receive in Dawes annuities, or reparations. The only figures that have come forth are the $90,000,000 that Caillaux thinks is the maximum and the $160,000,000 that Mellon thinks if the minimum—though both sides are ready for compromise in between. And the Mellon suggestion was not put forth in round numbers, but comes to that when interpreted as the French analyze it.

Long Talk in Private.

After agreement is reached on the average annual payments that France can make the matter of the number of payments will be taken up—62 if the agreement is to conform to the British and others.

The first of the private sessions, held at Winston's home last night, was attended only by Mellon, Caillaux and the respective experts Winston and Moreau-Neret. The big two of the debt conference had a long talk. It was animated, agreeable and seemed to revive M. Caillaux's spirits—though not a word of what was said leaked out.

Then there was a less private session this noon at the French embassy at which Mellon and Caillaux again got together though most of the time with the other guests who were the French ambassador Daeschner, Messrs. Reranger, Dupuy, Bokanowski, Simon and Moreau-Neret, members and experts of the French commission and Under-Secretary Winston of the Treasury.

Members of both commissions will make the trip to Mt. Vernon tomorrow forenoon, to visit Washington's mansion and his tomb, but it is intended to put the big two into one limousine and further informal negotiations are looked for subsequently when Mellon will be the host at luncheon.

M. Caillaux is understood to have discounted American argument that France got a bargain in war surplus material by saying the stacks of automobiles proved to be pretty rusty and hard to sell, not only because of French civilian poverty at the time, but because they lacked spare parts, while the mountains of canned goods proved to be chiefly fireworks since they exploded with a bang when opened.

Senator Borah's points that France ought to pay at least 3½ per cent interest on her debt since she is willing to pay $ on her private loans, brought from the Treasury today the response that the nearer a concern is to bankruptcy the more it has to pay in interest when borrowing.

To charge France anything like 6 or 8 per cent in interest would be to make money. As to Borah's argument that France might buy our Liberty bonds, paying 4¼ per cent and make enough money to pay the 3 and 3½ per cent which the Senator would charge, the Treasury asks where France would get the money to buy the Liberty bonds? Or how much interest would she have to pay to borrow the money to buy them?

CUCKOO GANG FEUD FLARES UP; ONE DEAD, TWO SHOT

Manuel Bieber, 27, Ex-Convict, Slain and His Companions Wounded at County Roadhouse.

The Cuckoos, a tribe of gangsters which has been leaderless since Roy Tipton went to Leavenworth with "Dinty" Colbeck and his mail robbers, have flared up in warfare among themselves.

One of the gang was killed and two others were wounded at the Melbourne Inn, 282 Lemay Ferry road, Friday night, in a shooting about which the police, as is usual in gangster affrays, have been able to learn little.

Three Men in Party.

Three men in an automobile drove to the inn, formerly known as the Hoffman House, entered with drawn automatics, shot down three men at the bar without words and fled. The men who were shot were unarmed.

The dead gangster was Manuel Bieber, 27 years old, an ex-convict, who first came to the attention of the police when he was convicted of theft at the age of 14 and since has been convicted several times of burglaries culminating in a Jefferson City sentence which he completed last January. A bullet penetrated his heart.

Hugh Callahan, 29, of 3544 Henrietta street, recently released from Joliet Penitentiary, where he served a term for burglary in Chicago, was shot in the left side and his condition is critical. His assailants placed him in their automobile, dumped him at the door of the Veterans' Hospital at Jefferson Barracks and drove off.

Shot in Both Thighs.

Tony Selvaggi, 21, of 1329 Pendleton avenue, was shot in both thighs, the bullet fracturing the left thigh. He is a brother of Frank and Alfred Selvaggi, being held at Edwardsville in the investigation of the murder of John Gray and his wife, whose charred bodies were found on Sept. 13 in a burned automobile near Collinsville.

The only clews in the shootings were a gray hat, marked "J. C.," another gray hat, powder burned on one side, and a light topcoat, all of which the police found on the floor of the inn. Oliver Harrison, proprietor, who was talking with the three Cuckoos when the slayers entered, declares he ducked behind the bar and did not know what had transpired. Four negro musicians have not helped the police. Between 10 and 15 shots were fired. The inn formerly was conducted by Tipton, the Cuckoo leader.

ARCHBISHOP GLENNON HEADS HOSPITAL CAMPAIGN

Honorary Chairman of St. Anthony's $500,000 Drive for New Building.

Archbishop Glennon has been named honorary chairman of the $500,000 drive for a new St. Anthony's Hospital, General Chairman Harry Scullin announced yesterday. J. Gates Williams of the Mississippi Valley Trust Co. will be treasurer.

The fund will be used to erect a new fireproof building at Grand boulevard and Chippewa street, accommodating 100 beds. Headquarters are in the City Club Building.

CAILLAUX AND MELLON DISCUSS DEBT PRIVATELY

French Finance Minister Guest of Treasury Chief at Dinner for Secret Conference.

Post-Dispatch Bureau
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Secretary Mellon and Finance Minister Caillaux are talking over the tea cups, hoping in the greater intimacy and privacy of informal negotiations to bridge the wide gap between them over how much France is to pay annually on her debt.

M. Caillaux has offered a maximum of $90,000,000 a year. Mellon has countered with a demand for about $160,000,000. That is a yawning difference. M. Caillaux is gloomier. So is the Treasury head. But both sides think common ground will be found by next Thursday at the latest. M. Caillaux sails from New York next Friday night on the liner France.

It is fairly well established that Mellon has asked France to apply the British rates to the French debt, with some modifications; notably more of a moratorium for the first ten years.

That plunged M. Caillaux into pessimism. It is understood to have wound up with a remark that France is repaying her loans to the bank of England at 6 per cent interest. M. Caillaux is reported to have thrown up his hands and exclaimed, "Mon Dieu, am I to be held responsible for the errors of my predecessors?"

Wants No Hollow Victory.

The idea in Mellon's mind was that if France can pay 6 per cent to England she ought to be able to pay 3 and 3½—the British rates—to America.

M. Caillaux is also annoyed because his proffer of payments scaling up to a maximum of $90,000,000 annually is persistently regarded by the Americans as a "feeler," therefore not representative of what he really thinks France can stand.

M. Caillaux says that it is a bona fide offer, sincerely put forth as what he considers the most France can pay without severe if not dangerous stress. He emphasizes that he will sign no agreement for the mere sake of signing. He wants no hollow diplomatic victory, but something tangible, workable, that can be ratified by the French Parliament and executed by the French Government.

Significant is the sudden decision of the big two, to dispense with their fringe of colleagues and get together by themselves to thrash this thing out—like the big four at Paris, or Churchill and Caillaux in London recently.

Dined Almost Secretly.

Mellon once refused to meet alone with Caillaux, but he has now adopted that venerable procedure. They dined, almost secretly, at the home of Undersecretary Winston last night. They lunched together today at the French embassy, they go to Mount Vernon tomorrow morning, but return to another luncheon with Mellon as host.

The next formal meeting with all commissioners present comes Monday morning at 10 o'clock. "It is France's next move," as an American official said today, "and she probably will offer a counter to our counter proposition then."

This official, who has heard almost every word exchanged between Mellon and Caillaux, observed that the retreat to the teacups was for the sake of better "atmosphere." He remarked that both sides have political situations to consider. This official is not very sure M. Caillaux will sail home with an agreement, but thinks he will—thinks France's need of private loans which wait on the adjustment of the war debt compels a settlement. But it is by no means sure.

Caillaux Depressed.

The normally glowing Caillaux was manifestly depressed last night. He was up and abroad and more cheerful at 8 o'clock this morning hauling all the Frenchmen out of their beds or away from their breakfasts to dig into the statistical interpretation of the Mellon memorandum. The French figure it resolves itself into a demand for annual payments averaging $160,000,000 over 62 years.

CRAZED MAN DIES FROM STAB WOUND

Found Fatally Injured After Seizing Knives and Cleaver in Butcher Shop.

A young man, seemingly in a frenzy from drink or drugs, ran into a butcher shop at Beaumont street and Lucas avenue at 10:30 last night, seized two knives and a cleaver, and ran out upon the street.

Several negroes were standing outside and the man attacked or threatened them. One of them struck him on the head with a chair. A few minutes later the young man was found, a half-block away, wounded below the heart with one of the knives. He died soon after.

Policemen were unable to determine whether he was stabbed by another person, or whether he fell accidentally upon the knife.

Name, "S. J. Sweatt," in Book.

A memorandum book and a garage bill, found in the man's pockets, showed the name of S. J. Sweatt, Dallas, Tex. The book contained what appeared to be a list of Sweatt's relatives, and gave a Dallas street address for his two sisters, which appeared to be "1901 Tella street."

In the excitement which prevailed in the neighborhood, it was reported that the man had stabbed or slashed two or three negroes, but this was not known to the policemen who took the man's body to the City Hospital, and no negro was sent to the hospital, or to either hospital No. 2, from that vicinity, with a knife wound.

Man Held for Questioning.

A white man, who was found at Twenty-second and Wash streets, and who said he had been struck on the neck in a holdup, was held for questioning. He denied having any knowledge of the man who died from the knife wound. It was reported that the latter had a stone-throwing fight with another man before he took the knives from the butcher shop.

The man who was killed was about 24 years old, and was dark-skinned, with brown hair and brown eyes. He wore blue trousers and a brown, pin-striped coat, neither in very good condition.

NO - CHANGE TRAIN SYSTEM

PITTSBURG, Pa., Sept. 26.—Thirty-two fast passenger trains on the Pennsylvania Railroad between New York and Pittsburg are now being operated without a change of locomotives. The road experimented with this innovation first by trying the plan on two fast passenger trains between the Smoky City and the metropolis. For 30 days the same locomotives, making the entire haul, pulled the flyers in on time.

The plan was extended to take in two trains between Pittsburg and Philadelphia, as well as two trains carrying mail and express between this city and Chicago. Again the big locomotives proved their endurance qualities, and the Pennsylvania engineers have decided to extend the no-change system to include the 32 fast trains between Pittsburg and the East. Later, they said, it would take in the lines west of Pittsburg.

White Teeth
—but what would the X-Ray show?

BEAUTIFUL, white teeth, free from decay, are not safe unless the gums are healthy. If pyorrhea attacks your gums, an X-Ray would reveal how quickly the infection spreads to the root sockets which hold the teeth in place. If pyorrhea is not checked, your teeth fall out—or must be pulled—because their support is gone.

Tender, bleeding gums
Nature's warning of approaching pyorrhea

DENTAL clinics since 1908 have proved the effectiveness of Pyorrhocide Powder as an aid in correcting bleeding gums, in strengthening tender gums, in hardening soft gums.

It keeps the teeth white and clean. Its tonic and stimulating qualities help healthy gums to keep healthy. Pyorrhocide Powder is medicated with Dentinol, a gum-tissue healing agent widely used by dentists in the treatment of pyorrhea.

The economical dollar package contains six month's supply. At all druggists. Send for free sample and booklet on causes and prevention of pyorrhea.

Sure Way To Get Rid of Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely, and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and dizzing of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy never fails.

TATE POISONING TRIAL NEARS END

Judge Agrees to Hold Session Late Into Night to Let Counsel Close Pleas.

By the Associated Press.

MARION, Ill., Sept. 26.—The fate of Robert Tate and his wife, Ruby, for the poison murder of the woman's first husband, Joseph Herrington, may be given to the jury before morning.

Acceding to a request of counsel for the defense, Circuit Judge D. T. Hartwell has agreed to go ahead with closing arguments of attorneys so the case may be placed in the jury's hands as soon as possible.

Prospects are that the case will not be given to the the jury before 2 or 3 a. m. Sunday.

Though admitting he signed a confession which he claims was forced from him, Robert Tate, on trial here with his wife Ruby for the murder of her first husband, Joseph Herrington, denied from the witness stand today that he had poisoned Herrington.

"Did you put any poison in the food of 'Jodie' Herrington?" he was asked by his counsel. "I never did," Tate replied emphatically.

"Did you poison or aid, or assist in the poisoning of him?" "I never did."

B. J. Collier, manager of a drug store at Johnston City where the poison used in the murder is said to have been purchased, testified that no poison was missed from the store during either August or September of last year.

Roger Kelly, a West Frankfort newspaperman and J. C. Randolph, West Frankfort Police Magistrate, stated they did not hear Mrs. Tate admit putting poison in the milk she gave her first husband. State witnesses previously had said that both Kelly and Randolph were present at the time. Mrs. Tate is alleged to have made the statement.

Mrs. Sarah Long, a neighbor, testified that she saw Herrington on the Saturdary before he died and heard him say that he did not like buttermilk. Mrs. Tate is charged with having admitted giving her husband poison in buttermilk.

Mrs. Long said Herrington had told her that he did not want a doctor, but wanted to "live on faith to the end."

Robert Shears, a miner and friend of Herrington, testified he had heard the dead man complain of illness both in June and July before he died in September.

CONSULS ACCREDITED TO ST. LOUIS FORM LEAGUE

Annual Visit to Governor and Mayor Planned as Part of Co-operative Program.

At a meeting of the consuls accredited to St. Louis, held yesterday at the Chamber of Commerce, a new line of co-operative activity was decided upon, to increase the usefulness of consular representation in St. Louis, both to this country and to the countries represented here.

An annual visit to the Governor of Missouri, and an annual visit to the Mayor of St. Louis were decided upon as desirable features of the joint consular program, which is intended to develop commercial and international understandings and interests through a course of practical educational procedure.

A series of monthly luncheon meetings was provided for, at which authorities will be invited, as guests of the consular body, to make addresses upon topics of international interest. The subject of public utility corporations in St. Louis, illustrated particularly by a study of the Union Electric Light and Power Co., the Bell Telephone Co., and other community service concerns, was selected for an early meeting.

"Consular League of St. Louis" was adopted as the future name of the organization, which hitherto has been of an informal nature. Hector M. E. Pasmezoglu, who is the consul of the Greek Republic, was elected president, and F. A. Cramer, consular representative of Chile and Uruguay, was chosen vice president. James A. Troy, Nicaraguan consul, was elected secretary and treasurer.

MOTHER OF 4 HELD AS SLAYER

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Mystery developed today in the murder of Marie Nicolini, pretty Asbury Park (N. J.) waitress. While Magistrate Doyle in Long Island City Court was remanding Mrs. Theresa Sicidiano, 28 years old and mother of four children, to the Queens County Jail without bail on a murder charge, policemen of the New Jersey resort declared that the body found Thursday behind the nailed-up doors of the Naples restaurant might not be that of Miss Nicolini. Detectives said the mother of the girl supposed to have been slain failed to identify the body.

In addition to searching for Miss Nicolini, who, they believe, may be in Paterson, the police are looking for Paul Sicilliano, business partner of the murdered girl. Sicilliano, said to own a $45,000 home in Long Branch, N. J., recently was released from Welfare Island.

Of Course, OWNERS LIKE THE McHENRY OIL BURNER

They don't have to heave coal or lug out heavy buckets of ashes. Just a turn of the wrist gives a small flame or a roaring fire.
The McHenry Oil Burner makes no soot or dust; no ashes, dirt or coal in the basement. It uses no electricity and has no complicated parts to get out of order.
There is a size for any warm-air furnace, or hot-water or steam boiler, which will keep the home warm and comfortable in the coldest weather.
Wouldn't you like to be free from heating troubles next Winter? Just telephone our nearest branch and one of our heating engineers will call any day or evening.

Heat When You Need It Most

Gentlemen:
In the Fall of 1924, you installed a No. 10 McHenry Oil Burner in my hot-air furnace. This purchase was made after having watched the service of one of these burners during the previous year.
During the heavy sleet storm last Winter and the severe cold spell, we were unable to heat their homes because our neighbors were unable to heat their homes because of the failure of electric current.
The McHenry Burner performed perfectly in every way for me, and I find that the small additional cost of using oil for heat, instead of coal, is far repaid by the conveniences of even heat and cleanliness.

EIGHT PERSONS HURT IN AUTO ACCIDENTS

Man, 77, Suffers Skull Fracture, Six Injured in Collision Near Nashville, Ill.

James Keogh, 77 years old, of 3127 Locust boulevard, suffered a possible fracture of the skull and bruises at 7:30 o'clock last night when he was knocked down by an automobile while attempting to cross from the north to the south side of Olive street at Compton avenue.

The machine, driven by William Allen, a negro, of 3900 West Belle place, had just turned west into Olive from Compton when the accident occurred. Allen said Keogh failed to heed the sounding of his horn and stepped from the curb directly in front of his machine. Keogh was taken to city hospital, where his condition was said to be serious.

Outfielder Flack of Cardinals and Wife Hurt in Crash.

Max Flack, outfielder of the Cardinals was one of six East St. Louisans injured when an automobile in which they were riding crashed head-on into a motorbus eight miles east of Nashville, Ill., at 8 o'clock last night.

The most seriously injured member of the party was Earl Roberts of 313 Columbia place. He suffered broken ribs and internal injuries. Flack, who lives at 1462 College avenue, and his wife suffered broken noses and cuts on the face and head. Raymond Flack, his son, was cut on the face but the ball player's daughter Maxine was uninjured. Roberts' wife, Mrs. Freda Roberts and George Yoxall of 708A Illinois avenue, the driver of the car, were cut and bruised.

The party was on its way to Carbondale and had stopped at Nashville, 50 miles east of St. Louis for supper.

Man's Skull Fractured When Knocked Down by Auto.

Henry Fischer, 31, of 4146 Delmar boulevard, suffered a fractured skull at 7:30 p. m. yesterday when he was knocked down by an automobile.

Fischer was crossing Sarah street at Washington boulevard when he was struck by the northbound automobile of Harry Skoog of 4326 West Pine boulevard. He was taken to City Hospital.

Man's Skull Fractured When He Was Hit by Auto.

Fred Brown, 50 years old, of 4479 Penrose street, was taken to the city hospital in a critical condition from a fractured skull late last night after he had been knocked down by an automobile while crossing Florissant avenue near Pope avenue at 10:30 o'clock. The automobile was driven by Elmer Vogt, of 911 Buchanan street.

The injured man, who had not regained consciousness at 1 a. m. today, is about 5 feet, 7 inches tall, weighs about 130 pounds and was dressed in a gray suit, brown shirt, brown raincoat and carried a flashlight and a dinner pail.

Aged Man Hit by Auto Suffers Fractured Skull.

Samuel Dickenson, 69 years old, of 5888 Easton avenue, a carpenter, suffered a fractured right hip, a possible fracture of the skull, abrasions of the scalp and body bruises when he was knocked down by an automobile while crossing Hamilton avenue a short distance north of Easton avenue, at 8 p. m. He was taken to City Hospital, where his condition was pronounced serious.

The driver of the automobile, which was northbound in Hamilton, was Leo A. Jutz, 26, of 5865 Garfield avenue, employed as a teller by the City Trust Co. Jutz said he did not see the man until after the machine had struck him.

MINER AT O'FALLON, ILL., KILLED WHEN SIGNAL FAILS

Order to Draw Up Elevator Cage Confused and Accident Results.

Henry A. Bertram, 56 years old, a miner working in the Taylor Coal Mine in O'Fallon, Ill., was killed yesterday morning at 10 o'clock, while engaged in pushing an empty coal car from the cage which carries the cars up and down the shaft.

The accident was caused by a confused signal. Bertram rang a bell to notify the engineer at the top of the shaft that the workers were ready to come up. The signal was mistaken for one to draw up the cage, and as Bertram was leaning over the top of it, the carrier started up, crushing him against the roof of the entry. He was dead when workers got him to the top of the shaft.

A verdict of accident was returned at the Coroner's inquest. Bertram is survived by a wife and two children.

Telling How and When to Use Trustworthy Products and Reproducing Extracts of Patrons' Letters Relating to Cadomene, Balmwort, Sulpherb, Arbolone, Su-thol, Mentho-Laxene, Minyol, Hypo-Nuclane, Vilane, Etc.

Regarding Pain Relief: A few years ago so many correspondents requested information regarding pain remedies, that my associates and self determined to explore the field and, if possible, offer an improved formula to the public, free from the usual heart-depressants and yet capable of giving quick pain relief. As a result Su-thol Tablets, pronounced "soothe-all," have attained a wide and ever increasing circle of enthusiastic users, who agree that these tablets are the best ever used for the quick relief of certain painful conditions, and without harmful after effects.

Mrs. J. G. writes: "I have been using Su-thol tablets for headache and neuralgia due to a bad cold, and have received wonderful results. May I ask if you will kindly recommend a medicine that will aid in overcoming an oily skin that is covered repeatedly with festering pimples?"

Answer: I suggest Sulpherb tablets, as a laxative, blood improving treatment. These tablets contain purified sulphur, calcium and vegetable extracts that produce very satisfactory results.

R. J. C. writes: "Owing to financial trouble, I greatly overworked myself during the past two years, and for some months have been in a nervous state and run down physically. Am quite thin and white, tire easily, have shortness of breath and severe nervous headache. Can you help me?"

Answer: The aid produced by taking Cadomene tablets should soon bring back natural health and strength. Try them!

T. A. P. writes: "I am employed as brakeman, and being out in all sorts of weather have developed muscular rheumatism which nothing seems to help. What should I do for it?"

Answer: I suggest Cardiol tablets, a non-secret formula, that has proven most effective in correcting rheumatic affections. For quick relief of the pain take Su-thol tablets.

S. A. K. asks: "Will you kindly tell me what will help to relieve a pain and distress due to poor action of the kidneys? I have backache and stiffness of joints and muscles. My sleep is disturbed by bladder irritation."

Answer: I am reasonably sure that such a condition can be greatly benefited by using Balmwort tablets and suggest that you try them.

D. L. H. asks: "Can you tell me how to reduce weight? When I married I only weighed 118 pounds. In two years I have gained and now weigh 162 pounds."

Answer: Arbolene tablets is the medicine I have recommended during the past twelve years. It is generally quickly effective, where obesity is concerned.

Mrs. T. L. writes: "My two children are subject to spasmodic croup and have such alarming hoarseness and coughing that I am worried all the time as nothing seems to help them. My husband, too, has as obstinate a cough, which the usual remedies fail to help."

Answer: Obtain essence Mentho-Laxene. Follow directions which tell you how to make a full pint of a delicious, tasting, quickly effective cough syrup. For spasmodic croup and stubborn cough there is nothing better in my opinion.

Answer to K. L., C. B. B. and R. T.: Oily scalp, dandruff and itching of the scalp can be quickly overcome by using plain yellow Minyol. Should your local druggist not supply any of the medicines I recommend, write to Spoon's Pharmacy, Fifth and Western Ave., Dayton, Ohio.

Answer to C. R.: You will find the information sought, and much more of value to your family, in my "Health and Beauty Book." Thousands rely on its pages to keep in good health.

NOTE—For many years Dr. Lewis Baker, Medical Director, The Blackburn Products Co., 312 College Bldg., Dayton, Ohio, has been recommending trustworthy medicines to millions of people through the medium of the newspapers, and doubtless has helped in relieving the ailments and minor infirmities of the public more than any single individual in the world's history; and by an inexpensive method. The medicines mentioned by him are pure and free from habit-forming drugs. They represent the combined wisdom and experience of physician and chemist. Progressive druggists can supply them. By reading his answers to others you should find a case similar to your own.

A copy of Dr. Baker's great guide book "Health and Beauty," will be mailed to anyone sending 10c cents (coin).

Thousands have written him expressions similar to the following:

Letters to Dr. Baker

BATTLE CREEK, MICH: Mr. Matt Ryan, 99 Garfield Ave., writes: "I have been using Cadomene tablets, also Sulpherb tablets and find they are doing me a great amount of good. I had been bothered with constipation and was always full of gas. I got so miserable that I did not care to work, and at night the pressure on my chest was such that I thought I would choke, but I feel a hundred per cent better now, etc."

OGDEN, UTAH: Mr. J. Collier, 146 W. 29th St., writes: "My wife was suffering with rheumatism in her hands. I purchased a tube of Mentho-Laxene Salve, from which she seems to have benefited very much. Your beautiful book 'Health and Beauty,' is splendid. It ought to be in every home, as the contents I think would be the means of saving hundreds of dollars to the poor of this country. You have my congratulations, etc."

CLEVELAND, OHIO: C. V. Mischelle, 2807 W. 25th St., writes: "Received the Health and Beauty Book and I must say it means more than money to me. For two weeks I suffered with neuralgia, toothache and great pain in my side. I took Su-thol tablets and the next day I felt like a new man. I could not imagine how such pain could disappear in one day. I recommend Su-thol tablets to be the best for such cases, etc."

FORT WADSWORTH, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.: Mrs. Anna Franceschim, Quarters No. 34, writes: "Last March after taking two bottles of Mentho-Laxene my husband's bronchial cough stopped and also catarrh of the head was gone, from using Mentho-Laxene Salve. He just completed his third box of Cardiol tablets for rheumatism, and it has left him; while at the same time, it helped his knee a great deal (he has had 'water' on the left knee for three years). Now he is going to take Cadomene for a general build-up tonic. He is a Hospital Steward and recommends these medicines to all who seem to need them. Words are inadequate to praise these good medicines, etc."

UTICA, NEW YORK: Mrs. Fred W. Lorraine, 527 Tilden Ave., writes: "Just a few words of praise for 5-strain Arbolone tablets which I started taking July 30th. At that time I weighed just 200 pounds. I now weigh 184 pounds. Have lost 16 pounds from July 30 to August 30. My indigestion has gone, also the shortness of breath and dizzy spells I formerly had, and I feel 100 per cent better in every way. I will gladly answer any letter that is sent to me by any person that feels at all skeptical, as I know what they have done in just one month for me."

BROOKLYN, NEW YORK: Mr. Patrick Dunn, 162 Prospect St., writes: "I am writing this letter to let you know what I think of that wonderful medicine, 'Balmwort Tablets.' They sure are great for kidney and bladder trouble, for after using two boxes I am entirely well. About six weeks ago a cold settled in the region of my kidneys and I suffered most intense pains—sharp, knife-like pains shot through my back until I could not sleep, eat or work. I also recommended Mentho-Laxene, as one of my children had a severe cough, and after trying numerous remedies without success, the above medicine entirely relieved her, which speaks volumes for Mentho-Laxene, etc."

INFORMATION: If your regular druggist does not supply the medicines mentioned by Dr. Baker, the following St. Louis druggists can do so: Wolff-Wilson, Walgreen Drug Co., Johnson Brothers and all good druggists everywhere.

UNION PAINTERS ON CITY WORK TO QUIT

Men Ordered to Stay Away From Jobs Pending Conference With Mayor.

Union painters employed by the city, about 100 in number, have been ordered by the Painters' District Council, central body of their union, not to report for work tomorrow and to remain away from their jobs until a complaint against nonunion painters decorating City Courtroom No. 1 has been adjusted.

M. M. Raftery, secretary of the union council, said the council ordered him to deliver a protest to Mayor Miller against the work being done by nonunion workmen and that the Mayor advised him the Eureka Paint Co., which is doing the work, was low bidder on the job by $7, which compelled award of the contract to that firm, in accordance with a charter provision which says that all contracts shall be let to the low bidder.

Protested to Brod.

Raftery said he also protested to Director of Public Safety Brod, who informed him that the contract was let to the Eureka company on recommendation of the Judge of City Court No. 1, and a man named Gray, who accompanied the Judge. Judge Harry Rosecan presides over this court.

Had it not been for the recommendations of the Judge, Raftery quoted Brod as saying, the contract would have been awarded to one of several concerns that employ union labor and have done city painting for more than 25 years.

Judge Rosecan, when asked about the situation by the Post-Dispatch last night, described as "laughable" the statement that the contract was awarded on his recommendation.

Doesn't Know Manager.

"I don't know the owner or the manager or even the name of the painting company," he declared, "and certainly I made no recommendations as to who should get the contract.

"I have been in Director Brod's office only once, and that was when I dropped into pay my respects shortly after his appointment. I do know a Mr. Grey, but I never accompanied him on a visit to Brod's office. It is not within my province to say who shall decorate the courtroom and I have had nothing to do with it except to select the color of the paint to be applied."

A committee from the union council will seek other conferences with Mayor Miller to adjust the complaint, Raftery said, adding that the union painters will not be permitted to resume work for the city unless an adjustment satisfactory to the union is made.

ITALIAN GROCER SHOT BY NEGRO, WAS 'WRONG MAN'

Wounded Man's Brother Had Accused Colored Man of Passing Bad Check on Him.

Joe Giocopelli, 42 years old, an Italian, of 1241 North Ninth street, is in a critical condition at City Hospital with a gunshot wound in the abdomen inflicted by a negro who was looking for Giocopelli's brother, Nick, in the latter's grocery at 1243 North Ninth street, at 2:45 p. m. yesterday.

The negro, John Jenkins, 32, of 1239 North Ninth street, walked into the Carr Street Police Station a few minutes afterwards, twirling his revolver on his finger, and announced: "I got the wrong man; I wanted Nick for talking about a bad check he said I passed on him."

Jenkins had inquired for Nick in the store, but met Joe. They had an altercation over the check and Jenkins drew his weapon and fired. Patrina Giocopelli, 11-year-old daughter of Nick, witnessed the shooting of her uncle. Jenkins then ran out. He told the police he wanted to shoot Nick because the grocer had "bulldozed" him about the check.

CITY MANAGER PROPOSAL DEFEATED IN ST. CHARLES

Proposition Fails to Carry in Special Election by Vote of 1139 to 2391.

A proposition to abandon the present municipal government of St. Charles by a nonpartisan Mayor and Council and place the town under a city manager was defeated yesterday in a special election by a vote of 1139 to 2391.

MAN SEEKS DIVORCE AFTER 43 YEARS OF MARRIED LIFE

Charles Van Damme Charges Wife Occasionally "Beat and Battered" Him.

After 43 years of married life, Charles Van Damme yesterday filed suit at Clayton to divorce Mrs. Antonia Van Damme, 956 Elskine avenue, for alleged indignities. They have seven children, all more than 21 years old.

According to the petition, Mrs. Van Damme has a violent temper, quarreled and nagged with her husband over trivial things, was cold and indifferent, and treated him not with love and affection, but indifference, scorn and contempt. Further, it is charged, she occasionally "beat and battered" him, causing great physical pain, and she also "took all his money," compelling him to depend on others when in need.

They were married June 20, 1882, at Aardenburg, Holland, and separated Sept. 15 last, according to the petition. They still reside in the same house, his attorney said. Mrs. Van Damme could not be reached for a statement.

...ommunist Members of Parliament to Determine Public Opinion Before Trying Legal Test of Law.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Shapurji Saklatvala, communist member of the British Parliament, barred from this country by the State Department has cabled the American Civil Liberties Union that he would "follow the advice of lawyers, and public opinion" as to the advisability of making a legal test case of his rebarment following an offer of the union to furnish him legal aid to fight his case.

Saklatvala also said he had mailed a "full case of documents and official reports of his action" to the union. He asserted that they "show fallacy of private reports used by the American Government" in arriving at its conclusion to bar him from the interparliamentary union at Washington.

...AIL BOND ISSUE AUTHORIZED

...t. Louis and Hannibal Road to Issue Obligations Totaling $1,050,000.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 26.—Permission has been granted by the Interstate Commerce Commission to the St. Louis and Hannibal Railroad issue $650,000 of first mortgage on advances made by John Ringling, and $400,800 in bonds to be sold at par and the proceeds used for capital purposes. The St. Louis and Hannibal Railroad was organized in 1917 and operates a line from Hannibal to Kilmore, about 85 miles, with a 17-mile branch from Rails Junction to Perry. It has outstanding a total of $839,609 preferred and common stock and equipment obligations. The last balance sheet shows the total worth of the investment, including cash on hand and materials and supplies, as $1,291,...

The application explained that John Ringling advanced funds of about $250,000 from January, 1921, to November, 1924, for the purchase of equipment and retirement of obligations. It was found by the Interstate Commerce Commission that the proposed bond issue was "compatible with the public interest and reasonably necessary and appropriate."

...WHISKY LIST CASE APPEALED

...issouri Supreme Court to Decide Validity of Publicity Law

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Sept. 26.—An appeal to the Missouri Supreme Court was granted in Cole County Circuit Court here today by Judge Henry Westhues in the whiskey list publication case which originated in February. The case is a test of the State statutes requiring the monthly filing of whiskey prescription lists of drug stores with county clerks.

The case started when the January lists for Jefferson City were published in the Daily Post here. Proctors of the city obtained an injunction preventing further lists from being made public and then Judge Westhues ruled that it was not necessary for druggists to file the lists with the county clerk. The appeal granted today was obtained at the request of Sam Haley, prosecuting attorney of Cole County.

Broke His Vow

"After trying all remedies and doctors for stomach trouble for eight long years I decided I couldn't be helped and swore I would never take another dose of any kind of medicine, but when I saw what Mayr's Wonderful Remedy did for a friend who also suffered from bloating as I did, I concluded to try it myself. It helped me at once." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. JAPANESE WELCOME ROME-TOKIO FLYER

Italian Ace Completes 34,000-Mile Journey in Hydro-airplane.

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Sept. 26.—Commander Francesco de Pinedo, Italian flying ace, completed his Rome-to-Tokio flight this afternoon, arriving at the Kasumigaura air station, near here, at 3:52 o'clock. He was welcomed by naval and military officials.

Pinedo's flight, with the idea of demonstrating the value of the hydroairplane in long-distance commercial flying, covered approximately 24,000 miles. He flew to Australia and then to Japan, having left Rome April 21.

METHODIST MINISTER IN SERVICE 55 YEARS TO GET $935

Stewards of Southern Illinois Conference Made Allotment to the Rev. Dr. F. M. Vantrees.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CENTRALIA, Ill., Sept. 26.—The Rev. Dr. F. M. Vantrees, a Methodist minister of East St. Louis, who has served the church for 55 years, will receive $935 from the board of stewards of the Southern Illinois Methodist Conference, the board's report to the conference here shows. Dr. Vantrees' check will be the largest written by the board, which has more than $33,000 to distribute among ministers on the basis of $17 apiece for each year of effective service to the church.

The board of hospitals and homes was organized with the election of Dr. C. L. Patterson of Mount Vernon as chairman and Dr. C. D. Shumard of Alton as secretary. The Old Folks' Home will be moved from St. Francisville to Lawrenceville, into a new $100,000 building.

Ministers of the conference this morning voted for unification of the churches, North and South, 116 to 26. The proposition to admit laymen to the conference was defeated, 73 to 61.

CAPTURE OF ABD-EL-KRIM'S CAPITAL RUMORED IN MADRID

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Sept. 26.—Advices received by the Exchange Telegraph Agency here say rumors that the Spanish forces have captured Ajdir, capital of Abd-el-Krim, leader of the Riffian rebels, were circulated in Madrid today.

By the Associated Press.

FEZ, French Morocco, Sept. 26.—The battle front awoke this morning preparing for a continuous general offensive by the French forces against the Riffians, of which the brilliant operations in the Kifane region Thursday night was the first act. This drive toward Ajdir, Abd-el-Krim's headquarters, culminated in the French troops occupying all objectives. The artillery this morning was bombarding enemy positions all along the front and large forces of cavalry were concentrating behind the lines ready to go into action whenever opportunity presented itself.

TRIED TO EMULATE LEANDER

By the Associated Press.

ATHENS, Sept. 26.—Richard Halliburton of Memphis, Tenn., a Princeton graduate, was surprised, to say the least, when reports reached him from America recently that he had been drowned trying to emulate Leander of Abydos by swimming the Hellespont.

Shown an American newspaper clipping, which said friends feared he had been drowned, Halliburton admitted he made an unsuccessful attempt last month to perform the feat which Leander had accomplished nightly to visit a lady love, the Priestess Hero of Sestos. Halliburton was happy, however, over a recent success in climbing Mount Olympus. Previous to his unsuccessful swim, Halliburton swam a four-mile strait starting from the European side, a feat accomplished by Lord Byron more than a hundred years ago. The swimmer failed on the reverse journey.

A Laxative The Old Can Rely On

Let Them Take Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for Constipation. Mild and Gentle. Never Loses its Good Effect.

ELDERLY people know how much more difficult it is each year as they get older to avoid the ill effects of chronic constipation. The stomach and bowel muscles relax as age advances, and as you are naturally less active, in time they work only by stimulation. You try dieting and exercise, and then take medicine.

All medicines, however, are not suited to elderly people any more than to children, so you will be glad to know of a particular medicine that acts as near to nature as has yet been found. It is a prescription written thirty odd years ago by Dr. W. B. Caldwell and used most successfully in his practice. It is known today as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and you can buy it under that name at any drug store. A sixty-cent bottle will last an average family many months, and all can use it.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin. It acts mildly, gently and without griping. It so trains the stomach and bowel muscles that in time medicine of all kinds can be dispensed with. When people learn of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and see how wonderfully it acts they realize how unnecessary it is to use drastic salt waters, pills and powders, for these do but temporary good and are weakening to most constitutions. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, on the contrary, is so natural and safe (it contains no narcotic or strong drugs) that generations of mothers have given it to their babies.

Take a spoonful the next time you feel any distress of the stomach, liver or bowels, if you are constipated, have a headache, cold or fever, if you are bilious, dyspeptic, tired. If Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin should ever fail to do as claimed, you can have your money refunded. More people use it than any other laxative in the world.

DR. W. B. CALDWELL

There are heads of families who will want to prove to their own satisfaction that Syrup Pepsin is as effective in constipation, as mild and gentle in action, as pleasant tasting and safe, as claimed. Let such write for a free sample. It will be sent postpaid. Address Syrup Pepsin, 521 Washington St., Monticello, Ill.

Has Hard Time to Feed Wife

Once Stomach Trouble—Now Big Appetite

"My wife was afflicted with stomach trouble for years. She tried everything but got no relief. Adlerika was recommended to me and I want to give my honest testimonial thanks. My wife is now in the BEST OF HEALTH and it costs me about all I make to feed her. Have recommended Adlerika to a good many and it has helped every one." (Signed) F. M. Nobel.

INTESTINAL EVACUANT.

There is now offered to the public a liquid preparation which is not only a wonderfully effective and QUICK intestinal evacuant, but which does seem to stimulate the glands of the intestinal tract and to cause expulsion of flatus GAS). The preparation, known as Adlerika, is a valuable agent for the purpose of cleansing the bowels of matter which has been in the system a long time and which other less effective means have been unable to dislodge. It is often astonishing the great amount of matter Adlerika draws from the intestinal canal—even right after a natural movement it sometimes brings out unsuspecting quantities of additional matter. Many times it brings out much GAS, thus relieving pressure in the abdomen. Adlerika is especially valuable when PROMPT action is necessary or to encourage the elimination of poisons through the bowels in cases of constipation or gas on the stomach. Just a single dose is usually sufficient to relieve sour, gassy stomach, indigestion, a sluggish liver and constipation or gas on the stomach. Just a single spoonful of Adlerika gets action QUICK. Adlerika is the only preparation that acts on both upper and lower bowel. Adlerika relieves ANY case of constipation, sour stomach, gas, bloating, etc., in 2 to 15 minutes, or it costs you nothing. Adlerika is a big surprise to those who have used the many so-called "intestinal" remedies. Adlerika is a big success in cases of appendicitis, before and after operation. Sold by Sam Goldman, Jefferson and Franklin; Liggett Drug Co., and Ambrose Drug Co.

Rules of Health

"Constipation does not cause colds but constipated people are certainly more susceptible to colds than others."—A leading medical authority.

NOW comes the season of colds, and their numerous, sometimes fatal, complications. Now come the days when the robust friend of a week ago is next heard of low and dying. A time of year for everybody's extreme caution. Certainly a time to guard against constipation.

Pluto Water, relentless foe of constipation, is of great value in cold prevention. Used judiciously, it keeps the entire system in healthy, infection-proof condition by flushing the intestines of poisonous, devitalizing waste matter. In 30 minutes to two hours after taking, results begin and it does its work gently but positively—without griping.

Don't trifle with cold weather disease germs. It may make all the difference between health and serious sickness for you to keep a bottle of Pluto Water on hand at all times this winter. It is prescribed by physicians and obtainable at all drug stores in bottles filled and sealed at world famous French Lick Springs—the "Home of Pluto Water."

MRS. SARAH CHARLINS AND FAMILY.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls, or answers by mail, cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope.

X. Y.—A streetcar was never run over the St. Louis Free Bridge.

FRANK C. S. — The Post-Dispatch issues a road guide and you can buy maps of the various highways at any of the book or newsstands.

MRS. G. D.—The telegraph companies pay a salary to employes while they are learning telegraphy. See them for further information.

MCZ-131. — The United States Navy Recruiting Station 414 is located at 222 North Third street, St. Louis. No doubt you could continue your studies in any leisure time which you might have, if you should join the army or navy.

ANXIOUS. — Alkaline liquids sometimes used for cleaning gold lace are unsuitable as they generally corrode or change the color of the silk. A solution of soap also interferes with certain colors and therefore should not be employed. Alcohol is effectual in restoring the luster of gold and it may be used without danger to the silk, but when the lace is worn off and the base metal exposed it is not so successful in accomplishing its purpose as by removing the tarnish the base metal becomes more distinguishable from the fine gold.

X. Y. Z.—Persistence in the use of any means is an important element in the work of destroying roaches or any other insects.

LEGAL INFORMATION

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

H. G. H.—See the Prosecuting Attorney at Clayton regarding the arrest and fine.

DUMMY.—Since you are not 21 years of age you are not bound by the contract with the school.

M. P.—You need not get a divorce as you were not legally married.

MRS. W. B.—The parent only could be held liable for rent, as the flat was rented in the parent's name.

MRS. P. C.—A person swearing falsely in court may be punished for perjury. The woman cannot take her daughter's baby from her in the situation described.

TWENTY-YEAR READER.—All regular life insurance policies have a cash surrender value after three years. See the agent of the company.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnosis or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

A. M.—A good quality of cold cream will not grow superfluous hair.

CLAY.—We advise microscopic examination of the discharge. The treatment should depend upon its character.

H.—The climates of New Mexico, Arizona and Southern Texas are beneficial to those who have asthma.

SAUNDERS.—We do not think that a temporary change of climate would correct the child's susceptibility to hay fever.

YOUNG MOTHER—At 24 months the child should have 16 teeth and at 30 months there should be 20 teeth.

SALESMEN

First-class men seeking permanent connection worth $3000 to $6000 or more per month will find here their ideal lineup.
WHO WE ARE!
(1) Nationally advertised, old established, highly-paid institution—the largest of its kind in the world.
(2) Field force of 300 capable, high-class men.
(3) Highly dignified, ethical business; no house-to-house, bonds, real estate or insurance.
(4) Business never has a dull period or off season; our volume has increased materially each year, which will be one of the largest in our history.
(5) Our executives, including president, were formerly field men; you cannot hide yourself in our organization.
WHAT WE DO FOR THE RIGHT MAN!
(1) Five thorough training, insuring your success from the beginning as well as ours.
(2) Contract covers local territory in Missouri and Illinois with innumerable prospects.
(3) Commission, 25 per cent commission, with monthly and yearly continuous service bonus.
THE TYPE OF MEN WE SEEK.
(1) Between the ages of 30 and 55, with a satisfactory sales record.
(2) Must be accustomed to earnings more than the average salesman.
(3) Competent and reliable men who are looking for PERMANENT CONNECTION and not afraid to work.
This is an unusual proposition. For further details see Mr. Donovan, Buder Bldg., Monday. Out-of-town applicants write.

"ACTION" SALESMAN.

Every directing executive of business today has one slim—tha: is, the highest possible degree of PIVOT MAN development in his own organization. By PIVOT MEN we mean department heads, branch managers, superintendents and foremen—in fact, anyone who supervises the work of others.

Every day in his business, Mr. President is constantly trying to get over to his Pivot Men, at a tremendous cost of his time and energy, a few simple "HOWS"—such as to control temper, not to play favorites, quit making false promises, to always issue clear instructions, to cooperate with the heads of other departments and the management, to develop understudies, stop stop work, buck-passing, grouchiness and to be alert for new ideas on the principles of supervision and management. Besides getting these same "Pivot Men to sell their workers to want to stay, Waste, Mistakes, Carelessness and the reason why they should improve the quality of the product to meet competition, isn't that true?

Every President will admit that his Pivot Men are directly responsible for these losses and until they are given the "HOWS" to analyze and stop them, he cannot expect to reduce his overhead to a minimum.

We have a simple, practical, proven Plan which, for the first time in the history of American Business, gives these Pivot Men this much desired and needed help. This Plan today is past the stage of experiment because 11,000 practical executives who have used it for two years state over their signatures in black and white, that they have made a TREMENDOUS PROFIT on their small investment in this Plan.

Our RENEWAL PLAN is just completed, and we are ready to call back on every one of these clients and thousands of others who are eagerly awaiting to adopt this Plan. We give full credit on all renewal business secured in the territory, thereby putting the Salesman immediately into an earning capacity of from $10,000 to $20,000 per year. This is the money which our average man is earning in this business. We even pay you while being trained in the particular selling knacks and methods of our business.

Are Executives willing and anxious to adopt this Plan? We'll let you answer that question when you see it.

Due to our growth, three salesmen have just been advanced to executive positions, giving us three Central West territories for men who can qualify to carry on the good work of their predecessors.

These men must be between the ages of 30 and 40 years; must be able to interview Chief Executives; must be able to dominate and sell them on the first showing of the Plan. These men must have a background showing an earning capacity of $30000 per year or more. We must have the ability to convince Mr. Executive of the big profits which can be secured through the use of one Plan, and they carry unquestionable PROOF to back up every statement or claim they will make.

To conserve your and our time, don't answer this ad unless your Sales experience qualifies you.

WANT ACTION—can you give it to us? BOX J-312, POST-DISPATCH. (c)

...ED FROM PARTY POLITICS

...s Workers in Japan Com... ...plain of Discrimination.

...dence of the Associated Press.

...GO, Aug. 28.—Religious ...s of Japan are complaining against what they term 'unjust discrimination" shown them in the field of politics. While they are given a vote, under the new manhood suffrage law, an existing police regulation prohibits all religious workers, including Buddhist, Christian and Shinto priests, from joining any political party.

There are said to be more than 20,000 religious workers in Japan and it is reported they are planning to send two representatives to the Diet in the next general election.

KSD TO BROADCAST WORLD SERIES GAMES

Co-operation of Associated Press Assures Instantaneous Play-by-Play Service.

Station KSD will broadcast the World Series baseball games this year, beginning with the first game, Oct. 7. In this event KSD will have the complete service of the Associated Press, not only the play-by-play service, but the running story of the event, including the introductory features, such as will be published in the newspapers, and will obtain this service direct from the Associated Press wire run into the KSD studio. This is the first time the Associated Press has furnished complete service in this way for the World Series, and KSD is one of several stations in the United States which will be on the air under that arrangement.

The games will start at 1 p. m., Central Standard time, and broadcasting by KSD will begin shortly before that hour. Listeners will receive practically instantaneous information as the plays are wired direct from the ball field. A noiseless telegraph sounder will be used by the Associated Press operator and a noiseless typewriter will type matter as it comes in on the wire, thus no noisy instruments will intrude upon the voice of the KSD announcer, who will read this matter as it is typed on the paper in the visible typewriter.

This service will be given to listeners each day as the games progress, and other matters scheduled for the time of the games will be temporarily set aside so that there will be no interruption in the service on the days when there are games.

TWELVE INDICTMENTS MADE PUBLIC AT GRANITE CITY

Most of Those Indicted Are Youths Charged With Burglary and Auto Thefts.

Twelve indictments by the September term grand jury in session at Granite City were made public yesterday. The cases are set for Oct. 6. Most of those indicted are youths and reside in and around Granite City.

Those indicted were: Bernard Qualls, 15 years old, and Earl Henderson, 16, burglary and larceny; Walter Hardy, larceny; Elves Jackson, attempted theft of automobile; Charles Oram, Joseph Smith and Al Dauderman, larceny, burglary and receiving stolen property; Lanister Tipton, highway robbery; Ed Holtzman, James Jones and Charles Schaeffer, burglary; Ernest Cox, Clinton Cline and William Moore, burglary; Alfred Cool, George McIntyre, James Brooks, James McKeon and William Lauren, automobile theft; Teodolo Velasquez, assault, and Sam Howard, negro, assault to murder.

No-true-bills were returned, exonerating the following: Arthur Johnson, William Jones, Charles Hamm, Ed Lang, Leo Cochran, John Chuvar and Ambro Basalaz.

TRAFFIC COUNCIL PARKING RULES CONTINUE IN FORCE

In Effect After 90-Day Period Because of Ordinance Pending in Board.

Traffic Council parking rules for the downtown section, including the rush-hour prohibition of parking, are continuing in force after the 90-day period for which they were made originally, because an ordinance has been introduced in the Board of Aldermen to perpetuate them. Police are continuing to serve violators of these rules with Police Court summonses.

The rules took effect June 23 and the 90-day period for which the council is empowered to make rules expired last Monday, but the proposed ordinance had been introduced the previous Friday, thereby automatically extending the period.

However, as is known, Judge Gayer of the Court of Criminal Correction, who hears appeals from Police Court convictions, refuses to uphold fines for violating Traffic Council rules not backed by ordinances, on the theory that the council has no legal right to make such rules.

Krupps Quit Steel Merger.

By the Associated Press.

ESSEN, Germany, Sept. 26.—The withdrawal of the Krupps from active participation in the proposed German steel merger has materially delayed the process of perfecting the organization, which has been loosely styled the "German steel trust." The decision of the Krupps apparently came as a complete surprise to the other Rhenish industrialists. They are reported to have been won over to the scheme chiefly because it was enthusiastically sponsored by Dr. Otto Wiedfeldt, formerly Ambassador to the United States, and now managing head of the Krupps works, without whose support, it was believed, a firmly organized merger could not be effected.

VULCANIZES WITHOUT HEAT OR TOOLS

Mr. Victor Guernier of 2323 Wolfram St., Chicago, has invented a semi-liquid rubber repair for tires, tubes, hot-water bags, raincoats, rubber boots, etc. Applied cold without tools, it makes a perfect air-tight repair that will outlast article itself. Sells for $1.00. He wants agents everywhere—suggest you write him for particulars.

Deaf? A post-card brings joy of good hearing again

Amazing Invention enables deaf to hear instantly Sent on Ten Days' Free Trial

Some folks imagine that deafness is merely a personal annoyance. But it's far more than that. It ruins the disposition. Upset the nerves. And taxes the health.

Now science has proven it is needless to remain deaf. A remarkable little personal hearing aid has been perfected by a group of New York scientists. Immediately restores good hearing even to the poorest ears. Results are immediate—there is no waiting—no delay—no danger. You hear at once—clearly, distinctly, naturally.

The inventors are so sure you will be elated with this wonderful little discovery that they offer to send it to you without a string of any kind—for ten days' free trial. No red tape—no deposit—no C. O. D.'s of any kind. Take advantage of this liberal trial offer; simply write to the Dictograph Products Corporation, Department 1341, 220 West 42nd Street, New York City. In justice to yourself, please do this now.

If you have lost hope through other methods, we are even more anxious to have you try this remarkable little invention. For it will not fail you; and there is nothing for you to lose. Simply send name and address now.

WIDE PRICE MOVEMENTS IN LOCAL STOCK TRADE; NET CHANGES MODERATE

ST. LOUIS STOCK EXCHANGE, Sept. 26.—The active leaders on the local market did not show material net price changes at the close of the week, despite the fact that there were a number of comparatively wide movements during the period. The closing days of the week were featured by a sharp upward swing in Wagner Electric common with subsequent reaction, leaving net gain of less than 2 points. The activity in the stock was credited to revival of discussion as to whether or not there would be change in control of the company. The president of the company stated there had been no developments of character to submit to stockholders since one original proposition was made to the company earlier in the year by a Swiss concern.

The more active securities during the week included Ely-Walker common, Skouras, Boyd-Welsh, St. Louis Independent Packing common and Hamilton-Brown. Missouri Portland gained a point on sales of nearly 500 shares.

Among the individual shares to gain on small transactions were Brude common, which sold at 61, as against 36 at which some was offered for subscription earlier in the year, and Rice-Stix common, which sold at 226 for gain of 12 points. Securities Investment common was another stronger issue. An extra dividend was declared on this stock during the week.

A feature of the week was the listing of Consolidated Lead and Zinc Co. stock, some of which was offered for subscription at 38. Following initial sale at 45 the stock rose to 46½ and at close of week changed hands at 42.

Total sales of stocks on the exchange during the past week amounted to 16,425 shares, compared with 22,861 the previous week. Bond sales were $33,000 against $28,500 a week ago.

Following is a complete list of securities traded in on the exchange during the past week, sales, highest, lowest, closing prices and net changes being given:

FOREIGN ISSUES ACTIVE IN LONDON

Special Wireless to the New York Evening Post.

LONDON, Sept. 26.—Arthur W. Keddy, editor of Bankers' Magazine and financial editor of the London Morning Post, in financial review today says:

"Some indications of increased autumnal financial activities are making their appearance. The public here undoubtedly is inclined to speculate in a large way, hence the activity in foreign issues, rubber shares and the like. Optimists maintain that in spite of the trade depression and unemployment, nothing of an untoward nature is likely to develop pending the report of the Coal Commission in the spring. Hence there is plenty of time to gamble meanwhile, especially as stagnancy in trade is likely to keep money reasonably easy. This argument, within reasonable limits is sound, but unless the future outlook improves there is likely to be sufficient nervous apprehension to restrain financial exuberance.

"Except for our industrial labor position the general outlook would not be unfavorable, for if funding of the International debt is concluded much will have been done to prepare the way for stabilization of French and Italian currencies. This will assure restoration of international financial activities.

"Moreover, our investment stocks undoubtedly will be affected by the fact that in 1927 huge amounts of Government debt will mature, and it is argued that the Government must prepare the way for the conversion next year.

Financial Outlook.

"This may be so, but meanwhile the national financial outlook here will remain disquieting because of the promised coal subsidy and other social outlays that assure a large deficit at the end of the fiscal year. In fact, although the sinking fund is not likely to be suspended, some think the present £40,000,000 conversion loan nominally for funding treasury bills may have been inspired by the thought of a possible deficit at the end of the year.

"The Government's delay in arranging for a reduction of national expenditure is a bad feature because, although Prime Minister Baldwin's peculiar difficulties in handling the labor problem are recognized there is nothing to prevent drastic economies, pending which the moral power of the Government to give the lead in other directions is enfeebled.

"This is notable as in any attempts to check extravagance by local Governments, the classic instance being the Borough of Westham, where unemployment benefits are fixed on a scale of virtually £3 weekly. Many unemployed receive better dollars than those at work.

"From many standpoints the desirability of your increased lending to foreign countries is recognized. Nevertheless much heartburnings are occasioned in financial circles and even in business circles here.

Want Embargo Removed.

"The clamor for a removal of the embargo against foreign loans has been taken up among business men, who feel that new foreign loans are required to stimulate trade. A gradual removal of embargo by the end of the year, therefore, seems probable.

"Leading rubber companies have sold their production at a profit for the next two years. Even allowing for an increased output, a great scarcity in rubber is forecast and a boom in the shares is likely.

"The perkiness of your money rates occasioned some comment here. Reliance on activity in stocks in New York has been attributed in some measure to the easier tables adopted by your Federal Reserve Board in the last 12 months. It is considered that a reaction is possible, which may partly explain the delay in the reduction of our bank rate."

Boston Wool Market.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, Sept. 26.—Fine Montana original lots sold at $1.15 to $1.20 attracted attention to the gradual stiffening of prices in the foreign markets. Montana wools continued to be the most interested. Grey, scoured cape wools were bought at 90c basis for odd lots.

Foreign Exchange

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—The Evening Post in its weekly copyrighted foreign exchange review, says:

"The market for foreign exchange was irregular and variable all through the week, movements being directed in nearly all departments by special influences, although steadily supported by £100,000 bids that were kept in the market, and, although hovering near the end of the week at £4.84 0-16, it did not go below that level. The lowest rates for cables touched entered above $4.84 1-16. French exchange was held firm and recovered above 4.73 following the proposal for an adjustment of the war debt. Quotations revolved around this level toward the end of the week when the check was given close to 4.04 a loss of more than 7 points from the rate of a week ago.

"Wide fluctuations occurred in Scandinavian exchanges. Norwegian in early dealings at 20.40 during the week yielded to 20.01 and finally closed with buyers at 20.03. Dutch exchange, after minor turns, earlier checks ranging from 40.14 to 40.22, and bankers' checks, after a slight recession early in the week, finally advancing strongly toward the final few days. There was a display of strength in Japanese exchanges, carrying yen checks to 46.50 at which units was not maintained. South American exchanges continued in urgent demand despite bullish conditions in the primary markets on Brazil following moving up from 30.40 to 30.60, one high for the year. Chile and Argentine exchanges also pronounced strength and rose up to a substantial extent.

"Canadian exchange was firm and at times commanded a small premium. There was no firm market at any time for Polish exchange, so that the slots being nominally quoted from 14.15 to 14.18.

"Foreign exchanges Saturday were quiet and irregular. Sterling was a trifle easier but received support. French and Belgian francs moved within narrow limits. Italian lire declined steadily. Scandinavian exchanges were somewhat unsettled. Norwegian rates rallying and Danish crowns falling back.

Weekly Metal Review

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—The steel market was moderately active during the week at a routine pace, but there was no definite evidence of any important change in the attitude of buyers relative to making commitments much ahead of nearby requirements. Generally, while prices were steady, they failed to display any real strength.

Pig iron was very steady with makers well supplied with orders to last into January. There were no signs of unessiness over the coal strike. Scrap steel was weak.

In copper there was no improvement reported in demand with resale metal available abroad at relatively low prices. There was a continued advance of export demand, while buyers for domestic consumption having covered the bulk of their October-November requirements apparently have shown little interest. Under these conditions prices were scaled down to approximately the 13c basis, although larger producers are showing little disposition to bid for business at the decline, owing to the early statistical position and the expectation of continued heavy consumption.

Tin has dull all the week, within a narrow range. Some reduction in tin deliveries occurred in the tin plate industry, but cable manufacturers have been busy on old orders.

Lead acted steady and stabilized around the 6c basis, while business was mostly of a routine character. Bookings for October have been fair and well distributed. Zinc has been active, with a good foreign demand and a fair domestic inquiry. October requirements are not yet fully covered.

Antimony showed firmness in sympathy with China strength, although some resale parcels came out at a discount.

Boston Wool Market.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, Sept. 26.—Fine Montana original lots sold at $1.15 to $1.20 attracted attention to the gradual stiffening of prices in the foreign markets. Montana wools continued to be the most interested. Grey, scoured cape wools were bought at 90c basis for odd lots.

MODERATE ADVANCE IN HOGS PAST WEEK

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS	Last Week.	Prev. Week.	Year Ago.
Cattle-Calves	55,967	51,143	40,083
Hogs	67,066	62,516	71,089
Sheep	10,438	11,434	10,901
Horses-Mules	2,110	1,692	1,255
Totals	115,121	111,786	124,528

Lambs and some cattle reacted downward at the St. Louis National Stock Yards last week after a period of advancing prices. Hogs closed with a moderate advance and sheep and horses and mules finished steady, spots lower. Receipts of cattle and calves and horses and mules were larger than the previous week. Receipts in other departments, however, were about the same. The combined run of all classes of stock for the six-day period was approximately 115,121 head, against 111,786 the previous week.

Aside from bulls which showed up 50c under a strong demand, cattle prices varied from steady to slightly lower. Declines of 50c to 75c were recorded in low-grade steers, including grassers, canners and feeders. Most other classes including beef cows, light steers and heifers, beef cows and canner and cutter cows sold unchanged steady, although selling was limited in some instances. Bulls were 25c, extreme cases 50c, wors reported in a few native steers and light yearlings. Quality of arrivals graded common to medium largely, with a moderate sprinkling of good consignments included. Beef steers from native territory bulked at $8 to $12.75 per cwt. and best offerings scored up around to $14. Kansas and Oklahoma grass steers, of which there were about 1300 cars here, varied from $8.50 to $8.90. The bulk of native light steers and heifers embraced common to fair consignments, sales of which varied largely from $5 to $8.25. Handy-weight steers scored up to $13.75, steers and heifers mixed reached $12.50 and straight heifers topped at $11.

Beef cows varied from $4 for a plain lot down to $5.50, $6 and up for best. Cutter cows closed at $3.50 to $4, and canners at $2.75 to $3.50. Bologna bulls advanced to $4.50 to $5.50 on best, and heavy beef animals made $5.50 to $6.50. Calves and cutters registered $3.25 to $5.75. Demand for stockers and feeder steers was not as keen as the previous week and this was responsible for the 15c to 25c loss. Sales were largely from $4.25 to $7.50. Stock cows, heifers and bulls were steady to strong. Choice veal calves closed at $11.50, against $10.50 to $14.50 a week ago. Southern canner yearlings were 25c to 50c higher at $3.75 to $4.25.

Light Hogs Lead.

Stimulated by moderate receipts and a good demand from order buying interests the market locally took on a sharp upward trend during the week, lighter grades leading in the advance. In volume receipts were about like the previous week's run, still showing a decrease from last year's corresponding week of 6,000 head. However, quality was generally good with heavy hogs comprising the bulk at the end of arrivals. Lighter weights showed strength to 50c over deals the days and in spite of a few setbacks closed 25c to 35c higher than a week ago, top reaching $14.40 for the first time since late in August and figuring 20c under the high mark for that month. Closing session found light hogs shipping order, 180 to 200 lbs. changing hands at $14.15 to $14.40, a relatively low price making the latter named figure. Medium weights from 210 to 250 lbs. while not showing as much gain as the lighter kinds, indicate a substantial advance, these selling at $13.90 to $14.10 looking 45c to 50c up. Shipping demand was sufficient to clean for the weightier kinds and although at times this class moved freely, packers were the main operators and any advance was largely loaded.

Sales of hogs from 260 to 300 lbs. at $13.25 to $13.50 are 25c to 40c higher, with some of the extreme heavy kinds averaging over 300 lbs. not more than 15c to 20c up. Sales of this class generally downward to $13.10. Pigs followed the upward trend and fully as rapidly as the light hogs, sales of this class generally 50c to 75c higher on the strong weights medium and light pigs being 25c to 50c better. Offerings averaging from 130 to 150 lbs. are quotable at $13.75 to $14.25, medium weights from 100 to 130 lbs. at $13.25 to $13.75, and lighter pigs and one to two lots of suckers at $12.50 to $13.25, according to weight and quality. While more pigs were noted among arrivals than for some time recently the supply was still of moderate size, and on the stocker order to furnish a true reflection of the market on this class the week showed weakness late and close with some sales 25c lower. Prices, nevertheless, show a substantial gain over the previous week's close sales at $11.90 to $12.50, largely out of the smooth light kinds higher. Slags advanced generally 50c during the week, closing sales this class being 50c to $1 higher, with some sales upward to $11.75. Choice quotations on the different classes are as follows:

Top $13.40 to $13.60 medium weight hogs, 210 to 250 lbs. $13.60 to $14.10, lighter hogs, from 150 to 200 lbs. $14.10 to $14.40, strong weight pigs, 130 to 150 lbs. $13.75 to $14.25, medium weights, 100 to 130 lbs. $13.25 to $13.75, lightweight and pigs, 90 to 100 lbs. $12.50 to $13.25, roughs, $11.90 to $12.25, stags $10.50 to $11.75.

Lamb Prices Down.

Bearishness on the part of packer buyers blasted the lamb market on a sharp decline last week, even though receipts were material light, being about one-half the six-day period. At one time during the week prices were as much as $1.25 on best lambs, slight strength developing late in the session however, partially recovering the decline. As a result of this late advance the market closed generally 75c to $1 lower top at $14.50 as against $15.25 a week ago. Butchers were active buyers early in the week and sold well up to $15.50 for some choice sorts and holding the top to $15 for kinds up to the Wednesday session. Bulk of sales for the week ranged from $14 to $15, with packer buyers inflicting a 50c cut in this class during the last half. Feeder lambs held well up until the close, when prices declined 50c to 75c, closing sales largely from $13.50 to $14.25, with some choice yearlings at $14.50 a week ago. Southern canner yearlings were 25c to 50c higher at $3.75 to $4.25.

COTTON CLOSES EASY WITH MIXED PRICE CHANGES

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Apprehension of unfavorable weather developments in the Southwest over Sunday led to a sharp advance in the cotton market today. After selling up to 24.11c for December contracts, or 29 points net higher early and with a good demand reported, however, the market turned easy, net 5 points higher to 10 points lower.

The opening was steady at an advance of 1 to 8 points and after a little while, the market ruled upward on reports of a low barometer over the Gulf and western portions of the Cotton Belt and apprehensions that this might develop into a tropical storm threat. Subsequently developed on apprehensions of further rains in the Southwest over Sunday, there was a firm spot basis in the Texas belt and claims of renewed demand for yarns and goods.

For a time the market showed considerable strength. Offerings were light and served to suggest that smaller long interest had been pretty well liquidated since the census report and there was trade buying as well as covering. October led the list in selling up to 23.94c, while January sold at 23.45c, net gains of about 24 to 30 points on active positions. Offerings appeared to increase above the 24-cent level for December, however, and the market turned off during the last half hour under realizing by recent buyers, heavier spot offerings in the South and a renewal of local selling, accompanied by reports that the Weather Bureau had no knowledge of any such storm developments, although warnings had been issued. These were rumors that storm warnings had been issued for the Government forecast services from Washington indicated that the crop report of the Department of Agriculture as of Oct. 1 will show a more favorable estimate of yield per acre and the trade basis forecast, but will not give out figures.

Private cable advices from Liverpool reported a fair demand for cotton from India and the Continent.

ENCH DEBT ETTLEMENT S AWAITED

...s of Financial World Watch Caillaux-Mellon Move—Loans to Europe Will Help Debt Transfers

...ecial Wire From the New York ...ces of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—The Evening Post in its weekly copyrighted financial review, says:

From the moment that Joseph ...aux's train left Gare St. Lazare for his arrival here Tuesday, the ... received wireless messages ...ed this spectacular Minister ... settle the French debt speedily ... satisfactorily. A thread of ... was woven about the fact ... the mission to negotiate a set- ... should be headed by a ...man who had been exiled ... charged with attempting to ... the war before his country in- ... the debts he now comes to ... If same people are surprised ... the settlement is involving a ... period of negotiation than at ... was expected, the matter is to ... explained perhaps by the dra- ... reception M. Caillaux helped ... prepare for himself here. What ... gone on behind closed doors the ... knows little of, but it does ... that Caillaux made a proposal ... terms, that the terms were not ... and that Secretary Mellon ... has made counter proposals.

Amount of Debt.

"It is the fact that the Frenchman ... as initial proposal much too ... for our consideration lies no ... for apprehension so long as ... American Debt Commission holds ... steadily to its position that the ... must be settled on business ... Our commissioners are not ... void of sentiment, but recognition ... the principal in full and an ... agreement on an interest rate that ... lighten the burden on our own taxpayers now bear, is about the last ... that Washington can give ... a cancellation of debts. ... owes the United States in ... of $4,000,000,000, partly for ... made during the war and partly ... war material bought from our ... ment after the cessation of ... It is true that France ... ly has paid us interest on ... was invested in the purchase ... supplies, but the principal ... there involved, $400,000,000, is ... small. On, roughly $3,- ...000,000 of debt to us, represent- ... money raised here through the ... of Liberty Bonds, France has ... not one cent in interest. The ... of interest unpaid by the ... that our taxpayers already ... paid, well, over $800,000,000, ... will not be recovered, ... if France recognizes the debt ... and pays something as service, ... burden here will be proportion- ... lightened.

Problem of Payments.

"In the event that a satisfactory ... is reached, how will the ... be paid? Payment of principal over a long period of years ... of interest, for example, to a ... that regularly has an excess ... of merchandise exports means, ... of several things. About now ... is raising the question whether in ... few years our excess of merchandise ... exports might be turned into ... excess of imports, it may be well ... to point out that larger loans to ... Europe are likely to play an important part in the transfer of ... So abundant is our stock ... gold that it is difficult to conceive ... how any final adjustment of ... debt can be made without a ... substantial investment in foreign ... enterprises by our own investors. ... such a movement may not develop ... in the course of the next few ... months, but over a period of years, ... as investors here learn better ... how to discriminate between what ... is and what is good, enormous ... sums almost surely will flow from ... American pockets into European ... securities.

Industrial Situation.

"Business shows no signs of ... recency such as optimists had ... expected in some quarters, but its ... volume in most lines of industry ... does leave little doubt that times ... are good. Railroad loadings and ... earnings of recent weeks have ... raised hopes in the breasts of many ... railroad stockholders who have ... suffered through lean years. The ... automobile business is rising to ... a level never attained at this season ... of the year. The steel industry is ... moving along nicely, but is not forging ... ahead. Excess manufacturing ... capacity still presents a problem ... in a large number of industries, but ... the increasing demand for goods in ... the next quarters may bring relief. ... It is almost everybody is fairly ... well satisfied with the general ... business situation, however, does not ... mean that almost everybody has ... confidence in the stock market. Recent ... events such as occurred this week ... have the public that prices are ... high. On any sign of an appreciable ... tightening in money rates, it is ... figured, stocks would decline, but ... very few bankers expect any sharp ... rise in rates this autumn.

Steel Is Sold.

"Security prices were influenced ... largely by week-end readjustments ... of accounts and a definite trend was ... lacking on the stock market today. ... As a result of yesterday's sharp reaction ... in some of the recently active ... issues considerable short covering ... took place in the early dealings, ... giving the market a firmer tone, but ... the demand was quickly filled and ... before the end of the short session ... selling orders increased. The list ... closed in some section, the close ... presenting an irregular trend. ... Transactions were in moderately ... large volume. Sentiment was rather ... cheerful, however, reflecting a confident tone in the business world. ... Opening trade operations were ... emphasized in the mercantile reports.

Definite Trend Lacking.

"Early display of strength in motor stocks which spread to the utility group and to some rail shares was not maintained, selling pressure being again felt in the industrials at the beginning of the second hour. Weakness of U. S. Steel precipitated further realizing sales and short selling in other parts of the list, giving the market an uneven trend. At the start Chrysler, General Motors, Mack Trucks, Fisher Body, Stewart Warner and others in the automobile and motor accessory groups were in urgent demand in response to short covering. Chrysler forged sharply ahead to a new top for the year. Briggs was a weak spot, however, falling back under increased offerings on announcement of the dividend reduction from a $3.50 to a $1.50 annual basis. American Can shares moved erratically in reflecting changing view on prospects for something more than the usual dividend disbursement at next week's meeting.

Foreign Exchanges Quiet.

"Foreign exchanges were quiet and irregular. Sterling was a trifle easier, but received support. French and Belgian francs moved within narrow limits. Lire rallied steadily. Scandinavian exchanges were somewhat unsettled. Norwegian rates rallying and Danish crowns falling back.

Weekly Bank Statement.

"The weekly statement of the Clearing House, showing actual condition, revealed that last week's deficit had been eliminated and that an excess reserve of $19,228,740, an increase in the surplus of $34,903,370. Loans, discounts, etc., decreased $2,270,000.

Commodity Markets Steadier.

"A steadier tone developed in the markets for the principal commodities. Cotton was firmly held in quiet trading, prices fluctuating within narrow limits. The trend was toward slightly higher levels. Buying power improved in the grain markets also, wheat and corn rallying somewhat at the start, aided by short covering.

TOBIN NOT IN FAVOR OF OPEN MEETINGS

School Board Head Repudiates Interview Regarding Committee Sessions.

A repudiation of that portion of an interview given in Chicago which indicated that he favored open meetings of Board of Education committees was made by John C. Tobin, president of the board, yesterday, upon his return from a week's inspection of the public schools of Chicago, Milwaukee and Cleveland.

On the contrary, Tobin said, he opposes the committee meetings being open to the public and declared that school authorities in the cities he visited had found that such a policy was unsatisfactory. Board members are inclined to address the audience rather than frankly discuss school problems, Tobin was told. Members of school patrons' associations in St. Louis are urging that committee meetings here be opened. They are open in Chicago.

Tobin gave attention, he said, particularly, to methods of instructions. He was much impressed with the "platoon" system used in Milwaukee, which Chicago and Cleveland seem about to copy. He explained the platoon system as one in which pupils were so grouped that teachers were enabled to specialize. A Latin teacher would have six Latin classes during the day; a French teacher a whole day of French instruction to the exclusion of other subjects. This system, Tobin said, also permitted the alternation of heavy and light subjects or heavy subjects with recreation.

He was impressed, also, with the fact that Milwaukee has 18 intermediate schools, formerly known as "junior high schools." St. Louis has two. Tobin supports the idea.

St. Louis continues to lead in school buildings, he said, and still maintains a high position in the conduct of its schools.

C. C. CONRAD RENEWS EFFORT TO GAIN CUSTODY OF SON

Testifies in Support of Petition to Set Aside Court Order of Last November.

Clarence C. Conrad of 4362 West Pine boulevard has begun another attempt to gain custody of his child, Clarence Jr., 7 years old, whose custody was awarded his mother, now Mrs. Philip Swanson of Chicago, when the Conrads were divorced in 1922.

Conrad testified before Circuit Judge Wurdeman at Clayton yesterday in support of his petition to set aside the Court order of last November giving exclusive custody of the boy to his mother. The Judge took the request under advisement.

Four months after the divorce Conrad violated an arrangement whereby he had his son's companionship from Friday evening to Monday morning weekly, and Mrs. Swanson did not see the child again till last November, when Clarence was produced in court and Judge Wurdeman set aside the arrangement for the week-end visits with Conrad.

Yesterday Conrad testified that he had had no notice of the hearing when this change was made. On cross-examination by Mrs. Swanson's lawyer he admitted taking Clarence away to Kansas City, but said the boy got the best care that way. Mrs. Swanson and Clarence are in Chicago now.

JUDGE CALVIN MILLER DENIES ACCEPTING FEES FOR BONDS

Joins Gayer in Replying to Mayor's Letter Telling of Complaints Received.

Judge Calvin Miller of the Court of Criminal Correction, who is in Eureka Springs, Ark., for his health, in a telegram to the Post-Dispatch yesterday, joined Judge Gayer in denying that either of them had charged or accepted fees for approving criminal bonds for bondsmen.

As was told Friday, Mayor Miller told Judge Gayer in a letter that he had received complaints such fees were being accepted by the Judges. The Mayor inclosed an opinion from the City Counselor that this was unlawful. Judge Miller wired as follows:

"The City Counselor in his opinion as to fees received by Judges of the Courts of Criminal Correction is correct. The two Judges receive $5000 a year in lieu of all fees, therefore I have never charged any one fees."

Judge Gayer had denounced Mayor Miller's letter as retaliation because of his disapproval of official lawlessness.

TRUST FUND OF $100,000 FOR WIDOW OF LOUIS RENARD

He Also Left $2500 to Jewish Charities and Residue of Estate to Three Children.

By the will of Louis Renard, treasurer of the Renard Linoleum and Rug Co., 1015 Washington av., who died a week ago, the Jewish Home for Chronic Invalids and the Jewish Shelter Home each receive $1000 and the Home for Aged and Infirm Israelites $500.

A trust fund of $100,000 is created for the benefit of testator's widow, Mrs. Sallie Renard, with James W. Singer, a brother-in-law, as trustee. Mrs. Renard is to be permitted to occupy the family home at 4463 Westminster place as long as she desires. The remainder of the property, the value of which was not given, goes to three children—Mrs. Helen Putzel, Miss Blanche Renard and Walter Renard. The latter was appointed executor.

SETH'S ALIBI WINS FAIRMOUNT INAUGURAL

Hagen Retains Pro Golf Title, Defeating Mehlhorn, 6 and 5

Photographed at Fairmount During the First Race Run in the St. Louis District in 20 Years —Taken by a Post-Dispatch Staff Photographer.

FAST TIME, winner of the opening race at Fairmount, in front of the judges' stand after winning. Nadie is the other horse.

CHAMPION GAINS AN EARLY LEAD BY SHOOTING FIRST 18 HOLES FOUR UNDER PAR

Former North Hills Professional Strokes Course in Par 70, but Goes to Lunch Three Down and Trails Throughout the Match.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—Walter Hagen of Pasadena, Fla., by playing 71 holes in 114 strokes, or 10 under four and six better than par, today successfully defended his title as professional golf champion of the United States by defeating William Mehlhorn of Chicago, formerly of North Hills, St. Louis, 6 and 5, although the latter was three under 4's himself.

The contest which probably has never been equaled for spectacular scoring in the history of golf, was played over courses three and four at the Olympia Fields Country Club and was watched by a gallery of some 2000 persons who were drenched in a heavy rain during the last five holes.

It was only near the close, after struggling against the impossible for 27 holes that Mehlhorn weakened perceptibly under the unmerciful and persistent attacks of the former British open champion and lost his cunning.

Breaks Favor Hagen.

Naturally to shoot such superhuman golf Hagen had to have some breaks of luck. But even without this assistance, he probably would have scored better than par and likely would have won for he not only captured an eagle three on the very first hole which is 515 yards long, but he bagged four birdies and shot perfect par on all the other 26 holes.

Mehlhorn had a few bad breaks and made a few poor shots, but he also shot an eagle on the 515-yard second of course No. 4 in the afternoon, snared four birdies and was above par on only six holes, playing 20 perfectly.

While the par for both No. 3 and No. 4 courses is 35 on each nine, the addition of only 22 yards on the first nine of No. 4 would make it 37, so that Hagen in scoring 32 on that quarter virtually had three eagles and Mehlhorn in taking no more than 32 on the same nine had an eagle and three birdies.

Brilliant Golf.

The second nine of No. 4 lacks only three yards on the tenth and one yard on the eighteenth to have a par of 37, and Hagen in chalking up a 34 for this quarter for a total of 66 virtually got three birdies while Mehlhorn with a slump in the middle of this nine to all purposes got three birdies to total 37 for a 70.

This remarkable shooting by Hagen netted him only one hole on the first nine and two on the second, making him three up at the half way mark.

In the same manner the first half of No. 3 course lacks only 41 yards of having a par of 37 so that Hagen virtually got four birdies on that nine in shooting 33, and Mehlhorn's 34 in reality got two birdies and an eagle.

Hagen's Putting Wins.

Mehlhorn proved to be the longer driver and usually was fully as straight, but the champion was slightly better part of the time with his approaches, and outputted the Chicagoan most of the way.

Hagen played safe on two or three occasions by using an iron from the tee, while Mehlhorn in a few instances in which he got in trouble recovered in a spectacular manner. Twice, however, Mehlhorn lost the hole by getting out of the straight and narrow path, his drive on the fourteenth of course No. 4, finding an impossible lie in

Southpaws Will Oppose Braves

Sherdel and Reinhart to Hurl for Hornsby Today, Weather Permitting.

Weather permitting, the Cardinals will make an effort to get in a double-header with the Boston Braves at Sportsman's Park this afternoon. The first contest is scheduled to start at 1:45 o'clock.

Bill Sherdel and Art Reinhart, star left handers, will probably do the flinging for the men of Hornsby, while Jess Barnes and Johnny Cooney are due for Bancroft.

The Braves will remain over tomorrow in an effort to get in the third clash of the series.

9000 BRAVE DOWNPOUR TO SEE RACING REVIVED HERE AFTER TWENTY YEARS

Mud Slows Fairmount Track More Than Ten Seconds, Time Shows

THE effect of the all-week soaking by equinoctial rains of the new Fairmount racecourse was reflected in the time of the races yesterday.

The fastest five and one-half furlong race was run in 1:11 4-5, which is real good six furlong time, but about six seconds slower than good five furlong time.

The only six furlong race was run in 1:21, which is seven seconds slower than very ordinary six furlong speed.

The mile race were over 1:51 and the horse that can't run a mile on a fast track is no horse these days. The Inaugural at one and one-sixteenth miles was run about 11 seconds below fair time for the distance.

Fairmount track, therefore, may be said to have been slowed up at least 10 seconds to the mile on opening day.

BLACK BILL VICTOR OVER YOUNG SENCIO

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Black Bill, Cuban flyweight champion, resumed his winning streak tonight when he was awarded a judge's decision over Young Sencio of the Philippines in a fast 10-round bout at the Commonwealth Club. It was the second meeting between the boxers, Sencio having won the first bout on a foul several weeks ago in the same ring.

Gopher Star Injured.

By the Associated Press.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Sept. 26.—The double shift training schedule of the Minnesota football team which has prevailed since Sept. 15, came to a dismal close on a mud soaked practice field today with the injury jinx claiming more victims. The most serious was Peter Guzy, quarterback, who sustained a bad jolt on the shoulder.

Thoroughbreds Plow Through Track, Many Seconds Slow, While Bettors Surge Around Co-Operative Wagering Booths.

By Dent McSkimming.

If a great crowd and enthusiastic appreciation mean anything horse racing received a warm welcome on the occasion of its return to St. Louis after an absence of 20 years. In spite of physical handicaps, including most atrocious weather and the somewhat remote location of the track, the attendance at the opening of the Fairmount Jockey Club track, yesterday afternoon, reached 9000.

A grandstand which is built to accommodate 5300 persons, was crowded to overflowing and the betting ring, under the stand, was at all times filled with a milling throng.

Rain fell in torrents and the sky was gray, but the crowd was in excellent spirits and the program was highly entertaining. Good, close finishes were the rule in spite of a heavy, slippery track and between cries of "they're off" and enthusiastic roars of applause as the horses flashed past the grandstand, the crowd was kept in an excited state.

Seth's Alibi Wins Feature.

The Inaugural Handicap, feature race of the day at one mile and a sixteenth, was won by Seth's Alibi, a 4-year-old chestnut gelding, with L. Geving in the saddle. A wonderful driving finish which brought Midwestern up from the pack to second place, gave color to the race. Midwestern was coming so fast, that he would have beaten Seths Alibi in another half dozen yards. The winner had only a half length to spare at the finish.

Honors for the day were shared between L. Geving the rider of Seth's Alibi, and Jockey Sidney Hebert, who brought home two winners, Wedlock, in the sixth and Fast Time in the first. Hebert was presented with a gold watch as the winning rider in the first race of the Fairmount Jockey Club's history. Two other riders, J. Culen and Geving each won two races.

There was no real cessation in the rain from 12 o'clock until after the seventh race was finished. At times the torrent was so heavy it was difficult to see the far side of the track and it was necessary to turn on the electric lights in the press stand.

The new running track, which had roasted the rains of the early part of the week, became a slippery circle of black mud. As the horses finished, both animals and jockeys were covered with mud. But the crowd seemed to enjoy the spectacle.

Plenty of Wagering.

Although officials in charge of the track reported that they were unable to estimate the amount of cash taken in at the betting windows, it was evident to observers that the amount could hardly have fallen below the expectations of the promoters. At times it was almost physically impossible to fight one's way to the windows where the tickets were sold.

A special booth for women at the top of the grandstand was also well patronized. However, the women were slow to become acquainted with the methods employed and it was not until the later races that they lined up in force. The number of women present as compared with the men was much higher than is ordinarily found at the baseball games.

MARS, SON OF MAN O' WAR, WINS JUNIOR CHAMPION STAKES

Chance Play Runs Second In Feature

Aqueduct Race at One Mile Is Worth $7550 to Victor—Dangerous Is Beaten in Handicap.

By G. F. T. Ryall,
Of the New York World Sport Staff.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Mars, a son of Man O'War and a game one too, beat Chance Play a generous half a length and won the third running of the Junior Championship Stakes, for two-year-olds, at one mile before a crowd of 10,000 at Aqueduct this afternoon. Lancaster from the Greentree Stable, was third, five lengths behind. Little Asbestos, Espino and Helvetia were strung out down the course. It was the first time that two-year-olds had been asked to go eight furlongs, but the time of the race was good, 1:37.

Mars is not a big horse, but he is a real game one. Chance Play, with Sande up and favorite at 1 to 3, broke on top as the barrier went up, while Espino dwelled slightly and went out of the race right there. Chance Play led by open daylight for the first quarter with Little Asbestos and Mars in closest pursuit.

Rounding the turn out of the back stretch Sande gave his mount a breather and Little Asbestos ranged up alongside, but in so doing pinched Mars back slightly. Richards, who had the mount on the son of Man O'War, made his move rounding the stretch turn. Two furlongs and a half from home he had Little Asbestos put away, but Chance Play was still running smoothly under the clever handling of Sande. However, he wore the advantage down approaching the furlong pole and Sande went to the whip.

Race Is Worth $7550.

It takes quite a game colt to challenge one that was only beaten a length and a head by such a one as Pompey at seven furlongs in the Futurity, but Mars never gave up and drawing level a sixteenth from home drew away in the last dozen strides to win with something to spare. Lancaster closed from a slow beginning to beat the tired Little Asbestos.

In addition to the honor of winning the first mile race for juveniles this season, Mars added $7550 to the stable's money winning total. It is the opinion of Bob Smith, trainer of Mars, though may be a bit prejudiced, that Mars is the best of the Man O'War 2-year-olds this season.

The fractional time for the race was: 24 3-5, 48, 1:12, 1:37.

Bad Day for Favorites.

It was a bad day for odds-on choices, for after the defeat of Chance Play, Dangerous was looked upon as a good thing in the Aqueduct Handicap of $5000 added at one mile and three-sixteenths. Only three went to the post with Dangerous quoted at 1 to 2. The Green Tree Stable's Dazzler with 98 pounds on his back, took the track and made every post a winning one, beating Dangerous by four lengths, with Sunsini about that much behind. The time was 2:12.

Many criticised Breuning's handling of Dangerous in making his run too soon, but Dazzler was too much horse for the son of Negofol. It was quite a day for the Man o' Wars for Dazzler is by Whisk Broom II-Masda, and Masda is a full sister of Man o'War. The Aqueduct Handicap was worth $5050 to the winner.

ILLINOIS VARSITY IS VICTOR OVER FROSH

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHAMPAGNE, Ill., Sept. 26.—Playing against the freshmen team in a practice game, the University of Illinois Varsity players scored a couple of touchdowns, but the showing of Zuppke's proteges was not brilliant. The work of the line was ragged, both on defense and offense and unless considerable improvement can be mada during the next week, the Illini will not be in any too good condition for the initial game of the season with Nebraska.

Grange and Leonard carried the ball most of the time for the first team, while Green and Greathouse were the outstanding players for the second squad.

Pater Maltby Winner.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 26.—Pater Maltby, owned by the Arden Homestead Stable of Goshen, N. Y., today duplicated his victory of earlier in the week when he won the Horse Breeders' $2500 futurity for two-year-old trotters in straight heats. This colt race was the day's feature of the Grand Circuit meeting, which attracted the largest crowd of the meet. Hollywood Swan was scond in each heat.

Only four horses turned for the money in the Chamber of Commerce 2:04 trotting stake, and both heats went to Trumpet in handy fashion.

Johnston City High Wins.

JOHNSTON CITY, Ill., Sept. 26.—Playing in a steady rain, here today, Johnston City waded through for a 6 to 0 victory over Anna in their first Little Ten High School Conference game. Chat Newton scored when one of his teammates fumbled on the 20-yard line. Johnston City will play at Benton next Saturday.

Wedlock raced into lead soon after start, held on well and won with speed in reserve. Al Stebler broke from an outer position and was ridden across the others, caught a jam at first turn, raced well for entire trip and finished gamely. Delysia suffered interference at the first turn and closed in immaculate fan. Antiquity also came fast after a slow beginning. Sophia Goldman was knocked out at the first turn and raced far out of it thereafter.

HAGEN RETAINS TITLE AS CHAMPION OF PROFESSIONAL GOLFERS

the woods, and his drive on the ninth of No. 3 rolling under a thorn apple tree, whence he could not reach the green.

An Eagle On No. 1.

Hagen's horseshoe began to work at the very first hole for he sank a 30-foot putt for an eagle. At the second hole he got down one almost as long for what was virtually another eagle, and at the 12th where he sank his approach, one of the few faults he committed during the day, his ball hit a spectator and bounced onto the green instead of running into the woods. At the 235-yard third hole of No. 3 course, luck again helped the champion for his drive, sliced straight for a trap, leaped the pit and after his approach fell short 60 feet on the uphill undulating green, he sank for what was virtually another eagle. This was not a putt, it was a miracle as he himself declared. But disallowing these breaks, he still would have been 3 up and 5 to go with the greatest probability of winning considering the pace at which he was going. Mehlhorn's two bad breaks were mostly his own fault but luck at no place descended on his banner except possibly his recovery at the long 15th of No. 4, where he reached the green from what seemed to be an impossible lie against the root of a large oak, and a wonderful shot from a thick copse of sturdy oaks to the eighth green of Number 3.

The former Western Open Champion fell short of his usual putting skill, getting down only two long ones during the day although several missed the cup by a hair.

Hagen's Third Victory.

This was Hagen's third victory in the P. G. A. championship. He won at Inwood a few years ago and defeated James Barnes in the finals at French Lick last year. It was the only remaining title held by the former British and National open champion and he had to fight like a Trojan to retain the honor. Qualifying with a mediocre 151 he had to go 39 holes to eliminate Al Watrous of Grand Rapids, who was medalist of the meet with 140. After a rather easy victory over Mike Brady of New York, Hagen was carried to the 40th hole by Leo Diegel, who had been as much as five up and yesterday in the semifinals he had to shoot perfectly most of the way to overcome Harry Cooper of Dallas, Tex.

It was only by superhuman golf that Hagen overcame Mehlhorn today. The runner-up had had a better record than the winner for Mehlhorn had qualified in second place with 143, and in his victories over Emmet French, Al Espinosa, Tom Kerrigan and Morte Dutra had scored lower than Hagen did in any of his matches.

SEVENTH RACE, $1000, claiming, 3-year-olds and up, one mile. Start good; won place driving. Went to post, 3:20; at post 1 minute. Winner b. f. 4, Under Fire-Watonia. Trained by J. Reed. Value to winners, $700. Time, :25 2-5, 1:20 3-5, 1:51 1-5.

Wiretoma raced as if much the best and won well in hand. Wedding Prince showed fine form and was going well at the end. Miss Babe tired fast in stretch. Super King was going strong after closing a big gap.

Seth's Alibi Victor in Fairmount Inaugural

Fairmount Jockey Club board of directors, expressed keen satisfaction at the reception accorded the return of racing to St. Louis. The attendance was very gratifying to the promoters, Hay said.

Like All Other Crowds.

Many thousands of the spectators were probably seeing a race for the first time in their lives but, according to horsemen who have been traveling from one track to another, the demeanor of the crowd was strangely similar to that of all other race crowds.

The single avenue of entry to Fairmount was jammed with autoists from 12 o'clock until after 2 o'clock. A steady rain had made the concrete pavement slippery and travel was comparatively slow, but, in consequence, accidents were comparatively few.

There were nine starters in the big race of the day with Tip Toe Inn, coupled with Seth's Alibi, and Resolution finding greatest favor with the bettors. Tony Foley's Child's Play, a favorite among the early entries Friday, had been withdrawn over night, as was also Contusion.

After much jockeying at the post, near the far end of the grandstand, the runners got away to a good start with Ocean Current, Donna Santa and George Groom at the head of the crowd.

The others remained well bunched near the leaders until they entered the back stretch, when Seth's Alibi and Midwestern pulled away. As they entered the home stretch, Seth's Alibi had a lead of several lengths but the horse was showing signs of distress because of the heavy going and was tiring. Then it was that Midwestern came up fast, cut the gap and finally threatened to forge ahead but Seth's Alibi held his ground at the finish.

"Fast Time" Wins Opener.

The honor of riding the winner in the first race run in the St. Louis district in 20 years went to Jockey S. Hebert, who rode M. E. Johnsons Fast Time to victory in the opening race.

Fast Time was a winner by a nose over Music Shop which made a great bid when the stretch turn was reached. As the horses passed the grandstand the two leaders were galloping neck and neck and it was not evident until the final jump which would stick his nose in front.

The winner's time was 1:12 3-5.

After leading through three-quarters of the route in the second race, Holly Boy was forced into second place when Rajah, ridden by L. Montgomery, came from behind in a great burst of speed to win by a length and a half. The winner was running away from Holly Boy as they crossed the finish line. Uncle Jay was third. The race was at 5½ furlongs.

Jockey Froggatte Draws Suspension for Rough Riding in Fourth Race

The eight mounts were unruly at the starting post and it required many minutes' hard work before the jockeys could line up to the satisfaction of Starter Bill Snyder.

Rain was falling hard when 12 horses went to the post in the third race, a six furlong event for 3-year-olds. Miss Emmert, carrying 106 pounds, with Jockey J. Colen in the saddle, just had enough to outlast Rocking, who came with a rush at the finish. The horses were well bunched all the way, with Neat Girl making a strong bid at all times and finishing third.

The winner paid $26.90 on a $2 ticket, the best price paid by any winner all day.

Just after the conclusion of this race, a drenching rain fell, driving all spectators into or under the big stand.

Rain was falling in such sheets that it was difficult to see across the track as the horses went to the post in the fourth race. There were nine starters in this five and one-half furlong event. The popular favorite, Monday Morning, with J. Colen in the saddle, finished first and paid $5.90 for a $2 bet. San Isabel gave the winner a great race all the way and they came into the stretch neck and neck. Myrtle Belle was third, closely pressed by three or four others.

Jockey S. Hebert, who rode the winner in the first race came back with hisg second victory when he galloped Wedlock past the post an easy first in the sixth race, beating Al Stebler and Delysia. Neither the second or third horse was close to the winner at the finish. It was an even mile race.

Jockey Froggatte Suspended.

The horses got away to a good start and as they reached the first turn, all were abreast and headed for the rail. In the close jam which resulted, several horses were near a spill. After the race the judges announced they had suspended jockey Froggatte for rough riding. He had the mount on Al Stebler.

From the manner in which the Fairmount patrons charged the betting booths they seemed to be suffering from what the scientists would call "bet starvation." Outside of a "bargain counter rush" the best medium of comparison on the booths is the Grand and Olive crush on Veiled Prophet night.

The 40 "selling" booths were not nearly enough to supply the demand for tickets and it is not unlikely more will be added.

Five minutes before post time a klaxon is sounded under the grandstand and the bettors, one hand clutching a bunch of bills and the other squeezing a program, charge for the booths, following a last glance at the latest announcement of odds on the board. A non-bettor, caught in the swirl, has little or no choice of which way he is to be pushed and is lucky if he escapes unscathed.

When the five minutes is up and many have been turned away their money unplaced, the entire betting population, several thousand in number, shifts toward the stairs and tries to get up in the stands. The net result is terrifically jammed aisles, barked shins and necks craned out of joint to get a view of the start.

No Training Needed Here.

The "They're off!" cry of the stands is no mere piece of romantic fiction or affectation on the part of the spectators, but bursts forth with the rise of the barrier as spontaneously as the "there he goes!" of a football crowd when a back breaks clear of the scrimmage and starts down the field. It resembles a large "puff.", accented by a shout and the net impression of one out at the rail is that of feeling the puff of an aerial bomb and then sensing the explosion.

The rain played all sorts of tricks on the spectators who sought to watch the races from the rail. As soon as the mounts left the paddock, usually in a slight drizzle, rail birds would run for the best positions at the fence. By the time the horses got around to the barrier, however, the drizzle would frequently turn into a drenching downpour, precipitating a dripping retreat to the stands.

Because the horses ran ankle deep in mud, both horse and jockey were almost unrecognizable except in the stretch, so spattered with mud were they. Yellow silks were totally invisible after the furlongs.

A huge black board at the end of the stand informed the bettors how the money was being wagered. Five minutes before the start of each race a klaxon horn was sounded, and with this warning the prospective betters made their final dive for the windows in an effort to "contribute" their money.

A bet laid at Fairmount is termed a "contribution" and on the board opposite the finish wheresoever are posted the prices paid by the winners is headed thus: "$2 contribution refund."

In appearance however, the crowd was a dull one. Colors were conspicuous in their absence, the brightest shades being furnished by the gaudy raincoats of the younger folks.

Harrows were pulled over the track just before the first race smoothing out the rough spots created by the hoofs of the horses, but pools of water were visible in many places along the stretch.

The crowd started to gather before 12 o'clock and before 1:30 the grandstand was comfortably filled and many hundreds strolled about the grounds.

Many hundreds gathered under the stands where are the ticket windows and bulletin boards on which the odds on the horses are posted. The real race track followers, owners, trainers and jockeys not actually engaged, and other regulars, surrounded the paddock.

Among those who were at the jockeys quarters was Mack Garner, one of the greatest riders in American turfdom, who arrived here yesterday from Louisville, Ky. Garner probably will ride within a few days for Owner W. M. Cain, who has a large string here, among them Floy Lilley.

Wachtel Allows but Five Hits, Gaining 6—2 Victory Over Bagby.

By the Associated Press.

FORT WORTH, Tex., Sept. 26.—Paul Wachtel, veteran spitball ace of the Fort Worth Panthers, beat the Atlanta Crackers eating one of his big right hand today and the Georgians again went down before the Texas League champions 6 to 2. The victory gave the Texans an edge, two games to one, in the series to decide the baseball supremacy of the South.

Wachtel allowed but five scattered singles. With perfect support he would have scored a shutout. Six Crackers were strikeout victims, the hard hitting Willie Good, batting king of the Southern, fanning three times.

Wachtel was opposed by Joe Bagby, veteran American League twirler, who himself pitched a highly creditable game, yielding but six hits. His wildness, however, combined with poor support at critical stages, accounted for half of the Panther runs. Manager Nichoff contributed two wild throws, each of which cost a run.

Two of Fort Worth's earned runs were due to a home run clout by Moore, burly Panther catcher. With Windle occupying first as the result of a walk and a force out in the fourth inning, Moore hit into the temporary left field bleachers.

DENVER AND DES MOINES TIED FOR LEADERSHIP IN WESTERN LEAGUE

By the Associated Press.

DENVER, Colo., Sept. 26.—Denver and Des Moines went into a tie today for the Western League leadership when the Bears won a double header from Tulsa, 8 to 4, and 3 to 1, while Des Moines trimmed St. Joseph. The scenes ends tomorrow when both clubs play double headers.

The leading teams have won 98 games and lost 79, both having a percentage of .578.

Rookie Indian Pitchers Beat Athletics Twice

Levsen Wins Opening Game, 7-2—Benge Hurls Shutout, 6-0.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 26.—A pair of Cleveland rookies, Levsen and Benge, pitched off the Athletics in both games of a double bill here today. The scores were 7 to 2 and 6 to 0.

In winning, the rookie duo bested Connie Mack's two aces, Eddie Rommel and Sam Gray.

In the opening game, Levsen permitted 11 safeties, but costly misplays behind Rommel enabled the Indians to tally seven runs.

Benge handed the Macks a blanking in the windup, yielding only four blows.

Team Has 3 1-2 Game Hold on Third Place; Dixon Hits 3 Doubles

Catcher Drives in Four Runs With Two of His Drives — Thomas, Young Lefthander, Shows Strikeout Ball.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—The Browns today gained the distinction of being the only American League club to do as well as break even with the pennant winning Senators by gaining their eleventh 1925 triumph of the season over Harris' men, 9 to 7. One more game remains to be played by the two teams.

The victory for Sisler's men gave them a three and one-half game hold on third place, making it unlikely that Detroit will be able to overtake them.

The St. Louisans looked good and bad against the pitching of Joe Thomas, a 20-year-old lefthander from Nashville, making his first start on the hill for Washington, and Kelley, a righthanded rookie. The southpaw showed a strikeout ball that had his opponents eating out of his hand for four innings, in which he fanned eight batters, but he went wrong in the fifth.

The outstanding star of the day was Leo Dixon, the Brownie catcher, who made three doubles, driving in four runs with two of his smashes. Dixon now has made five doubles in three days.

Joe Giard, who started in the box for the Browns, worked only three innings, Elam Vangilder finishing up.

Thomas Fans Three in Inning.

The Browns were helpless before recruit Thomas' hurling in the first inning, but the Senators lost no time in getting a tally in their initial batting turn. Rice sent a high bounder to McManus and streaked to first before Marty had a chance to throw. McManus was more fortunate after grabbing McNeely's grounder and tossed for an out, Rice making second. A wild pitch to Goslin put Rice at third, and after the Goose waved at the air, Sam counted when Joe Harris poled a one-baser to left.

Thomas had a stormy second session on the mound, due mainly to Severeid's seeming inability to handle the slants of the recruit pitcher, but the Browns only managed to tie the score. Jacobson began the assault by socking the ball into the temporary stand back of left field for a ground rule two-bagger. The rookie uncorked a wild pitch and Baby Doll dashed to the far corner. McManus swung for a third strike, but Severeid dropped the ball and Marty reached first safely.

Jacobson could not get home then, but he did when Evans singled to center. McManus pulled up at second on the hit, and as Dixon fanned, negotiated a dual theft with Evans. Robertson's walk crowded the cushions. Thomas then tightened and at Giard's expense registered his third strikeout of the frame, but it only meant two out. Bennett, however, ended the inning with a roller to Harris.

Giard Pounded in Third.

In the third round the champs banged their way to three runs. With Rice out of the way, McNeely dragged a bunt past Giard for a single and raced home when Goslin, by dint of good running, made a triple of a crash against the right field barrier. J. Harris bounced a single off Gerber's shin to score Goslin and took second when McManus, who recovered the ball, threw to the Nationals' dugout. Harris stopped at third when Severeid singled to left, but after Bluege whiffed, he crossed the plate when Scott scratched a one-baser past Robertson.

Thomas walked the first Sislerite to step to the plate in the fourth, then whiffed Dixon, while Robertson watched a third strike speed past and Rush, who batted for Giard, hoisted to Goslin.

Browns Get Going.

But the rookie was soundly dumped and supported none too well by his catcher in the fifth, when four runs were chalked up in the Browns.

Bennett began the attack by beating out a hot grounder to Judge at first base. Jacobson forced Bennett, and before Sisler drew a pass a wild pitch put Wallie on second. After Rice had snared Jacobson's long fly, both runners advanced a notch and Gerber tallied while Sisler took third when a pitch to McManus went through Severeid's paws. McManus shot a one-baser to left to score Sisler.

Marty checked in at the middle sack on Evans' single to center and counted with Joe when Dixon doubled to the far reaches of left field. Robertson strolled, but Bluege stopped the drive with a remarkable one-hand catch of Vangilder's low liner.

Kelley was pitching when the Browns came up in the sixth and they promptly fell upon the youthful righthander for a trio of markers. Bennett walked and Gerber sacrificed. When Sisler fanned, it seemed Kelly was to have an easy round, but the Browns could not see things that way. Jacobson walked and stopped at second, while Bennett tallied when McManus singled to center. A pass to Evans filled the hassocks. Dixon then refilled a double to right and Jacobson and McManus registered at the counting block.

Vangilder Gets a Run.

The Browns got their ninth marker in the seventh session. Vangilder got a life when his grounder was fumbled by Scott and Bennett sacrificed. Gerber's two-bagger to left sent the pitcher home, but Wallie was stranded at second when Sisler flied to Goslin and Jacobson grounded to Kelley.

The Nationals got nothing off Vangilder, who started pitching in the fourth frame, until the eighth, when they bunched three wallops for as many runs. Goslin opened the inning with a single past McManus and took third when Joe Harris singled to center. Severeid's double tallied the Goose, but Harris pulled up at the far corner. Bluege's infield out scored Harris. Severeid tallied when Vangilder shot a wild pitch past Veach, who batted for Scott.

The Nationals were quiet from then to the finish.

DODGERS WIN AFTER LOSING 12 STRAIGHT

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 26.—After losing 12 straight games, Brooklyn came to life and beat the Reds today, 4 to 1. They hit Pete Donahue with consistency and were able to score four times as many runs off him as the Reds could score off Rube Ehrhardt. The home team could not do a thing with Ehrhardt after the first inning when he walked two men. Brooklyn had been beaten twelve by the Reds in the last series and ran up a total of 12 straight defeats but they broke the jinx on the thirteenth game.

MISSOURI VARSITY DEFEATS FROSH, 42—0

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Sept. 26.—After being held scoreless for the first period, the University of Missouri Varsity rolled up 42 points on the freshmen while holding the yearlings without a counter in their annual game here this afternoon.

The regulars, who started the game, were unable to count in the first period and gave way to substitutes at the start of the second quarter. After the reserves had scored four touchdowns, however, the starters returned to the game and scored two touchdowns in less than three minutes.

Clark, former Principia Academy star, making his first appearance in a Tiger uniform, played brilliantly.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA WINS DOUBLE HEADER

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 26.—The University of Southern California, playing for the first time under Howard Jones, former Iowa football coach, today brilliantly opened its 1925 season by defeating Whittier College, 74 to 0, and trimming the California Institute of Technology, 32 to 0, in a double header at the Coliseum here.

Giants Trounce Pirates Twice For Clean Sweep

Fitzsimmons Allows Four Hits and Wins, 3 to 0—Opening Score Is 4 to 3.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 26.—The New York Giants took both ends of the double bill from the Pirates today and made a clean sweep of the series, winning the first, 4 to 3, and the second, 3 to 0.

Fitzsimmons, who hurled the second contest, allowed but four hits. Morrison was effective until Jack Bentley, pinch hitting for Snyder, crashed a double with two on and Wright's error a moment later allowed another run.

A walk and two hits gave the Giants their third and final run.

Barnes and Aldridge, in the first game, allowed six hits apiece, but five of the hits off Aldridge were clustered in the first and second innings, and, with an error, netted four runs, a lead which the Pirates could not overcome, as Barnes was especially good in the pinches.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Columbia defeated Haverford College here today, 59-0, by the largest score made by a Columbia eleven in more than a decade. Captain Pease, Columbia quarterback, featured with spectacular catches of forward passes.

PHILS POUND BLAKE IN THE TWELFTH AND NOSE OUT CUBS, 4-2

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—With darkness descending the Phillies pounded Blake in the twelfth and scored a victory, 4 to 2. The contest should have been over in the regulation period but Bennie Meyers' insistent pleading and the several injected pinch hitters combined to tie the count. Then began a real pitchers' battle until Blake tired.

Ulrich replaced Carlson in the ninth and was the winning pitcher.

Cornell Victor, 80—0.

By the Associated Press.

ITHACA, N. Y., Sept. 26.—Cornell opened the football season auspiciously here today by sweeping Susquehana, 80 to 0. The visitors held the big Red team for downs only once during the game. Coach Gil Dobie using two complete teams. The play of Rosenberg and Butterfield in the back field was spectacular.

Sisler Hitless in 22 Times at Bat

GEORGE SISLER, Brownie manager and maker of batting marks, who started the 1925 campaign by hitting safely in his first 31 games, and later put together a streak of 22 consecutive hitting games, has added another feature to his batting record, but this time it is another sort of record.

In his last 22 official trips to the plate, Sisler has failed to make a safety. George has gone without a hit in five consecutive contests.

GENE TUNNEY OFFERED $75,000 FOR MATCH WITH TOM GIBBONS

By the Associated Press.

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 26.—Gene Tunney, who strengthened his bid for a fight with Jack Dempsey by knocking out Bartley Madden in the third round of their bout here last night, has been offered $75,000 for a match next summer with Tommy Gibbons of St. Paul.

Before Tunney and his manager, Billy Gibson, left for Chicago last night, Capt. Billy Fawcett, head of the Twin City Athletic Association, made the proposition to the American light heavyweight champion, who knocked out Gibbons in New York last summer.

The contest would depend on Gibbons' return to the ring. The St. Paul fighter has gone into retirement, at least temporarily, but has expressed a desire to meet Tunney again.

Penn Wins Easily.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 26.—Pennsylvania opened her football season on Franklin Field today by defeating Ursinus College, 32 to 0. Odierne, of Penn, made his varsity debut, picked a forward pass out of the air and ran 70 yards for a touchdown in the third period.

Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd To Defend Title; Heavy Course Likely for Qualifying Round

Field of 80 Contestants Includes Every Woman Player in the Country With a Chance to Annex Crown—Medal Play to Start at 10 A. M.

Women golf stars from all parts of the United States and from Canada will gather at the St. Louis Country Club tomorrow morning to play the 18-hole qualifying round of the Twenty-ninth Annual Women's National Gold championship. Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, of Philadelphia, champion, will defend her title against a field which includes every woman player in the country who has a chance to annex the honor. Eighty women are scheduled to start.

Among the outstanding figures in the tournament are the following:

Miss Glenna Collet of Providence, R. I., champion in 1922.

Mrs. Alexa Stirling Fraser of Ottawa, formerly of Atlanta, champion in 1916, 1919 and 1920.

Miss Marion Hollins, New York, champion in 1921.

Miss Edith Cummings, Chicago, champion in 1923.

Miss Mary K. Browne, California, runner-up in 1924 and former national woman's tennis champion.

Mrs. Mahlon B. Wallace, St. Louis district champion.

Miss Virginia Pep, former St. Louis district champion.

Many of the contestants have been practicing on the Country Club links during the past week and many scores approximating woman's par have been turned in. Mrs. Wallace, formerly Miss Audrey Faust, turned in one of the lowest practice scores.

Heavy Course Likely.

Prospects are that the qualifying round will be played over a heavy course, as it will take an unusually hot sun to dry out the links after the rain of the past week.

The 32 low scores in the qualifying round will qualify for match play, which will start Tuesday. One round a day will be played, all matches being at 18 holes until the final, which is scheduled to be played Saturday, at 36 holes.

An admission fee will be charged during the tournament. The fee for the first three days will be $1.10 and for the semifinals and finals $2.20, which includes tax.

Early round matches are expected to be finished by noon each day and special events have been arranged for the afternoons. Tuesday afternoon there will be a match against par, Wednesday there will be a best ball foursome and Thursday afternoon mixed foursome competition.

The tournament executive committee announced last night that the qualifying round tomorrow and first round matches Tuesday would start at 10 o'clock, with matches Wednesday, Thursday and Friday starting at 1:30 p. m. The final, Saturday, will start at 10 a. m.

Driving Contest Today.

There will be a driving contest at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon for all contestants. It will be held on the Polo Field on the Country Club grounds and prizes will be awarded.

The revised schedule of bus service follows: Busses will leave the Chase Hotel, Kingshighway and Lindell boulevards, at 8:30 and 9:30 a. m., Monday, Tuesday and Saturday, and at 9:30 and 11:30 a. m., Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. Trips from the club grounds to the Chase will be made at 8, 8:30 and 9 p. m., daily. Round trip tickets will be 50 cents.

Busses will leave the Chase Hotel today for the club grounds at 8:30 a. m. and 1 p. m., and will return at 5:30 p. m.

Miss Cummings Shoots 79.

The best score made in practice rounds was made yesterday by Miss Edith Cummings of Chicago, who turned in a 79, or two better than par for the difficult course. Miss Cummings went out in 41 and returned in 38.

Miss Edith Quier of Berkshire, Pa., played the first seven holes in 28. The torrential downpour compelled her to quit after the seventh hole.

Miss Ada Mackenzie of Toronto, Can., was on her game and played the entire 18 holes, despite the heavy rain. She turned in an 81, which is par for the course, going out in 40 and coming in in 41. Mrs. Jay Cassriel, Mrs. Lee W. Mida and Mrs. Miriam Burns Horn, all of Chicago, played fine golf, each turning in an 83.

ST. LOUIS IS NOT BIG ENOUGH FOR TWO CLUBS, BAN JOHNSON ASSERTS

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 26.—Ban Johnson, president of the American League, expressed belief here today that the St. Louis National baseball team might some day be moved to Kansas City.

"St. Louis isn't large enough for two big league teams," said Mr. Johnson, "and the Cardinals are slowly starving to death."

Mr. Johnson was the guest of the Kansas City Industrial League. He view a game between the pennant-winner and runner-up of the league. Afterward he departed for Northwestern Nebraska.

Mr. Johnson offered to send Harry Hooper, Chicago American outfielder, to Kansas City as a candidate for manager of the local American Association Club.

President Sam Breadon could not be reached last night for a reply to Johnson's statement. However, although the Cardinals lost money last year, they have had a successful season financially this year. In 1922 the club had a big year. It went $175,000 into debt in 1917 but paid out before 1921. A 20 per cent dividend was paid in 1922.

GUNN STARTED CAREER WHEN SEVEN YEARS OLD

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 26.—Watts Gunn, youthful Atlantan, who played his famous fellow townsman, Bobby Jones, at Oakmont in the final of the national amateur golf tournament, began his career on the links at the age of 7, when his parents placed a mildiron in his hands at Idle Hour Club in his native city of Macon.

On the tee he blasted away with his mildiron. He choked the ball down the fairway and hit it again, with his mildiron, and when at length he reached the green he putted, with his mildiron.

After a long period in which the mildiron was the lad's bag of clubs, his father, Judge William Gunn, gave Watts a set of sticks, with which he soon gained local attention.

Rockne's New Team Shows Great Power

Flannigan and Hearndon Are Stars of Game—Passes and End Runs Gain for South Bend Aggregation.

By the Associated Press.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Sept. 26.—The ghosts of the celebrated 1924 four horsemen of Notre Dame charged with reckless fury on Cartier field today leaving no doubt that Knute Rockne, Notre Dame's football genius will develop another eleven that promises to make a desperate bid for the 1925 gridiron championship of America.

Notre Dame, undefeated in 1924 and proud bearers of the nation's gridiron title, made its season's debut with a 41 to 0 triumph over Baylor University of Waco, Tex., a veteran team that has not lost a game in the Southwestern Conference in three years. The Southerners were completely smothered in a brilliant attack that made Notre Dame's football reputation outstanding last season.

The green, untried team that Rockne sent on the field with only one veteran in the lineup was the strongest on defense that has represented Notre Dame in several years, and on the offense revealed the speed and spirit of the championship 1924 squad.

Has Two Good Elevens.

Rockne not only possesses one powerful team, but has two of equal strength. If he misses the noted quartet of Miller, Crowley, Layden and Stuhldreher, he has another quartet in the making in Joe Prelli, Christy Flannigan, O'Boyle, Hearndon, halfbacks Enright and Hanousek fullbacks and Edwards and Scharer, quarterbacks.

Flannigan, of Port Arthur, Tex., a giant weighing 185 pounds and standing six feet one inch was in the game less than eight minutes and he carried the ball all over the place, scoring a touchdown and once breaking away for a 50-yard run.

Prelli performed with the same dash and speed, gaining almost whenever he tucked the ball under his arms.

Rockne, using his tactics of 1924, started the game with one team and began the second period with another, which performed with the same brilliance as the first. The backs had no trouble in smashing through the 200-pound Baylor line and interspersed plays from straight information with thrilling thrusts around the ends and forward passes that resulted in big gains.

Baylor Star Injured.

Notre Dame started off in characteristic fashion, plowing through with a touchdown in the first period when Hearndon went over after a sprint around left end. Then with a new squad of backs in the game, Rockne's warriors rolled up a pair of touchdowns in the second period with Flannigan and Prelli carrying the ball.

The forward passing of the Texas players was wild and the drives through the line were stopped almost before they could get started. Strickland performed creditably at fullback. Sisco, left tackle, was so badly injured in the desperate play of the fourth period that he had to be carried off the field and rushed to a hospital.

MARQUETTE OPENS SEASON WITH VICTORY OVER LOYOLA, 10-0

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 26.—Marquette University's golden avalanche ushered in the 1925 grid season here today by defeating Loyola University of Chicago, 10 to 0.

Marquette's tallies were the result of a place kick by Bader from the 41-yard line and a touchdown by McCormick. The lone touchdown of the game was effected after Bader, Marquette fullback, had successfully passed to Curtain for 50 yards, putting the ball on Loyola's 1-yard line.

Loyola took the Hilltoppers off their feet in the opening minute of play when Capt. Gorman returned the kick-off 55 yards, being stopped on Marquette's 25-yard line. An intercepted pass, however, wrecked their chances for scoring and Marquette came back strong with two long runs by Leichtfus, one for 25 yards and another for 15.

PLAYING SECRETS OF Famous Football Stars

No. 5—HARRY WILSON

(This is the fifth of a series of 36 illustrated articles written by Ed Thorpe, former star and referee, in which the playing secrets of some of the greatest football performers will be revealed. The peculiarities of leaders like Bo McMillin, Walter Koppisch, Brick Muller, Stan Keck and other widely known aces will be described).

By Ed Thorpe.

As a halfback at Penn State, Harry Wilson won All-America honors for unusual ability to carry the ball. After watching Wilson going through broken fields for long gains, spectators believe he has great speed. This is not so. Wilson possesses only average backfield speed, but he has developed the art of running to a high state of efficiency.

Wilson's most valuable asset is a peculiar running style. He constantly sways his body and will pull away with a quick motion of the hips, just when a tackler is sure he has his man. Weighing about 170 pounds, Wilson has the necessary strength to get loose, even when opposing hands are clutching him. Wilson will dodge when it is the best thing to do, and will also employ a strong stiff arm, but his most effective weapon is his body sway.

While representing West Point last season, Wilson was not stopped squarely in front in any game. He was either pulled down from the side or in the rear. It is the opinion of the cadet coaches that once over the line of scrimmage, Wilson cannot be stopped without a substantial gain.

Wilson is also a keen mental player. He has an athletic mind and seems to know instinctively just what to do. An instance of Wilson's ability to think quickly was witnessed in the Yale-Army game at New Haven, last year. With the Bulldog leading, the Cadets finally unlimbered a drive that steadily carried the ball close to Yale's goal line, where the Blue defense suddenly became a stone wall.

When other scoring plays failed, the ball was passed to Wilson, who, starting on an off-tackle play, discovered an opening inside guard, like a flash, changed direction, and shot through the hole over the goal line for the touchdown that enabled West Point to tie the Elis.

Paavo Nurmi Is Unable to Race

Finnish Runner's Legs Giving Him Trouble as Result of U. S. Campaign.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Sept. 26.—Paavo Nurmi, the great Finnish distance runner, replying to an invitation from the French Athletic Federation to participate in a track and field meet at the Olympic stadium at Colombes, Oct. 11, replied that he was unable to compete at present owing to severe pains in the legs.

It is learned that the long winter campaign in America, running mostly on board tracks, raised havoc with Nurmi's legs from which he has not yet recovered.

LEADERS HAVE HARD MATCH IN TWO-MEN BOWLING CIRCUIT

Some interesting matches will be rolled tonight in the Greater St. Louis Doubles League, scheduled for 7 o'clock on the Washington alleys.

With the tail-end team but two games behind the leaders, play should produce a general shakeup in the standings.

One of the feature matches will be that between E. B. McElheney and Fred Hager against Jim Wilson and C. F. Kaley. McElheney and Hager are tied with Dean and Karis for the league lead.

The complete schedule:

H. Klare and G. Fredericks vs. Sid Wilson and Otto Stein Jr.

J. Wilson and C. F. Kaley vs. E. McElheney and F. Hager.

J. Ott and C. Sottrell vs. Mel Stein and H. Rebenschied.

The road race will start from the Creve Coeur car tracks. Upon the finish of it the riders will pedal back to the Little Lake, where the derby events will finish the day's program. The derby events are a miss-and-out race, slow race, obstacle race, team race and hill climb.

Pikers Practice Despite Rain

Coach Promises Rugged Scrimmage in Preparation for Game With Drake.

Only a brief workout yesterday was possible for the Washington University football men, because of the heavy rain. Between Showers Coach Higgins had his charges running signals.

Following signal-running, the Pikers punted the ball, or tried to. Not much satisfaction could be gained from trying to boot a football two pounds overweight. Higgins had the men turn in early, for fear some of them would catch colds, thereby addnig to the hospital list. It is apparent that the varsity is in excellent shape and every effort will be made to keep the team fit for the inaugural game Saturday with Drake.

According to Higgins next week will see some hard scrimmage. It is probable that the coach will divide the varsity into two squads so as to give the first team more competition than can be expected from the untrained Frosh.

As soon as Joe Hennessy straightens out his scholastic difficulties he will return to the squad for duty. It is possible the former Missouri star end will be back in time for the Drake game. It is not likely that he will start, however.

NEW YORK A. C. TEAM SETS NEW WORLD MARK FOR MEDLEY RELAY RACE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—The New York A. C. relay team shattered the world's 1 7-8 mile medley relay record at the New York A. C. games today, negotiating the distance in 7:26 4-5. The New York team consisted of Jackson V. Scholz, Joe Tierney, George Marsters and Willie Goodwin.

The former record of 7:44 2-5 was established by the Irish-American A. C. team of Boston, Mass., in July, 1909.

Scholz, who ran the 220, the first leg of the medley, negotiated the distance in 22 seconds. Tierney ran the 440, Marsters the half and Goodwin the mile. Goodwin was clocked for the mile in 4:21 3-5.

Adrian Paulen, Dutch middle distance runner, made his American debut by defeating America's foremost stars in a 600-yard special race. Those who finished behind Paulen were Allan Helsfelch, George Marsters and Johnny Holden.

Pittsburg Gains 28 to 0 Victory Over W. and L.

Panthers Exhibit Fine Running Attack in Opening Game of Season.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Sept. 26.—The University of Pittsburg opened its 1925 football season in its new $2,000,000 stadium with a smashing 28 to 0 victory over Washington and Lee. Twenty-five thousand persons witnessed the opening sporting event in the stadium, which seats approximately 70,000. At no time was the result of the contest in doubt.

Sutherland presented a veteran team, and before the first half was over, the score was 21 to 0. The visitors held well in the third quarter, but Pitt broke loose again in the fourth and added seven points. Indicative of the superiority of the Blue and Gold was the number of first downs. Sutherland's men made 25 first downs, while the visitors had but two. Before the game was over, Pitt had its third string men in the lineup.

Pitt displayed a strong running attack, but also a tendency to fumble at critical moments. Two of the touchdowns were gifts.

Show Plenty of Power.

A driving attack from the 35-yard line gave Pitt its first touchdown. A forward pass, Harding to Welch, was responsible for bringing the ball to the 35-yard line. Another forward, Harding to Brown, gave Pitt an eight-yard gain. Harding and Welch combined to carry the ball to the two-yard line and Gustafson crashed through center for the first touchdown. He also kicked goal.

Inability of the Generals' line to hold and Rauber's slowness in getting away kicks aided Pitt in its next two touchdowns. Capt. "Horse" Chase broke through the visitors' line for the first touchdown. Both of these touchdowns were made in the second quarter, with the ball on the visitors' one-yard line in their possession.

In the third quarter, Pitt's fumbling stood out and after it had made substantial gains down the field, failed to put the ball across.

Schmitt Makes Good Run.

The best individual playing of the game was responsible for the last points when Joe Schmitt, left halfback, made a 29-yard run for the final touchdowns. He skirted the Generals' right end, eluded three tacklers as they tried to force him out of bounds and then hurdled the last Washington and Lee player who stood in his path.

COUNTY HIGH SCHOOL FOOTBALL GAMES OFF OWING TO SOFT FIELDS

The first games in the County High School football race were postponed yesterday because of rain and soft gridirons. Webster was to have played East St. Louis on the county field, while Ritenour was unable to meet Ranken Trades School on the Ritenour gridiron. East St. Louis and Webster will clash Tuesday at 3:30 p. m. on the Webster campus.

This marks the second postponement of the opening games in the league race, since Kirkwood and Ferguson were prevented from starting their schedules last Tuesday because of adverse weather conditions. It is not certain when Ritenour and Ranken will play off yesterday's game.

PRINCIPIA ELEVEN TO PLAY 8 GAMES

The football team of Principia Academy will engage in eight games according to the official schedule given out last night by Edgar Kaw, new athletic director. Arrangements have been completed for seven of the games on the schedule while negotiations are still pending for the eighth contest which will be played on November 14.

In addition to playing teams of four local high schools Principia will oppose two military academy elevens and one college team. The season will open Oct. 3 when the Academy meets the Yeatman High team, while the game with Central Wesleyan College at Warrenton, Mo., will be the closing date which is Nov. 21.

The schedule follows:

Oct. 3—Yeatman High.
Oct. 10—Roosevelt High.
Oct. 17—Central High.
Oct. 24—Missouri M. A. at Mexico.
Oct. 31—Soldan High.
Nov. 7—Western M. A. at Alton.
Nov. 21—Central Wesleyan College at Warrenton.

MEEK LEADS KANSAS AGGIES TO VICTORY

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MANHATTAN, Kan., Sept. 26.—Scoring a touchdown in each of the last three quarters, Donald Meek, 135-pound Aggie right halfback, was the hero of his team's 26 to 7 victory over Kansas State Teachers' College of Emporia here today. Meek scored a fourth touchdown but it was not allowed because of illegal blocking by his interference. The fourth Aggie touchdown was scored by Raymond Smith, Aggie left halfback.

Drury Eleven Wins.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Sept. 26.—Drury College defeated the Warrensburg State Teachers College team here today, 11 to 6. The muddy field made it impossible to gain much through the line. Mehrle scored the only touchdown in the third quarter on a long end run. Three brothers, John, Emery and Loren Davidson played in the Drury lineup.

American Women Win Net Series

Victory in Doubles Match Gives Victory Over Australian Stars.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 26.—The American women's tennis team defeated the Australian women's team, four matches to three. The result hinged on the doubles match, the last of the tournament, in which Miss Eleanor Goss and Mrs. Marion Zinderstein Jessup defeated Mrs. Sylvia Harper and Miss Daphne Akhurst of Australia, 3—6, 6—4, 6—3.

In the singles matches, Miss Goss won over Miss Akhurst, 6—4, 3—6, 6—1, while Mrs. Harper triumphed over Mrs. Zinderstein, 9—7, 6—1.

BUCKEYE TURNS DOWN PRO FOOTBALL OFFER

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CLEVELAND, O.—Garland Buckeye, America's biggest southpaw pitcher, was offered a contract recently to play football with the Chicago Cardinal professional eleven, but he has announced he will forget it.

"I have won more games than I have lost," said Buck, "and I do not imagine the management would want me to play football. So I shall go back to my old job in the Illinois Trust Co. at Chicago and keep in shape by playing handball a few times a week."

High School Football Squads Have Few 1924 Regulars Back And Coaches Issue Bear Stories

Two Elevens, Central and Yeatman, Are Without Practice Fields and Are Working Out in Fairground Park.

By Frank Gaffney.

Modesty is the prevailing reaction of the average football fan after a round robin conversation with the coaches of the St. Louis High School League this season. The stories emanating from the various mentors in regard to their 1925 prospects are very suggestive of the Forest Park bear pits.

Although no coach is actually attempting an excuse at this early date each has a few private woes. Graduations from last season, ineligibilities, parental objections and lack of brawn and beef seem to be the leading stumbling blocks to the way of gridiron glory thus far. Another drawback, and a real one, is the actual lack of a practice field for both Central and Yeatman. Both schools are using Fairground Park for workouts.

The opening games of the official interscholastic championship race are scheduled for Saturday, Oct. 24, but to date there has been no definite field of play selected. Cleveland High will have the bye in the opening play.

Soldan Has Squad of 50.

At Soldan, about 50 huskies are attempting to impress the veteran coach, Jimmie Cook. The mentor is very much open for impression, as he has lost virtually all of his last year's reserves and all but five of his 1924 regulars. The new material is of the ordinary West End run, large, bulky and green, but Cook hopes to shape a few real performers out of the lot.

Of the veterans, Richardson is the solo backfield man. He is strong and speedy and is reasonably sure of a place this year. The Soldan front rush seems to be fairly well taken care of by Capt. Butz at center, Keiser at tackle, Levy at either guard or tackle and Baker at an end. Baker may be switched to the backfield, if some of the new material does not shape up well. Four or five recruits are working for the job as quarterback. Coach Cook has scheduled a game with the Webster High School for Oct. 3.

Yeatman Practices in Park.

Yeatman is taking its daily practice at No. 5 grounds in Fairground. Sixty candidates have reported to Coach Lewis. There is a considerable number of reserves from the 1924 squad and an even have dozen letter men. The newcomers look like a fair collection and there is a feeling around the North End school that the eleven will do well.

The returning regulars are Capt. Enns, who showed at end and tackle last year, but who will undoubtedly perform in the backfield this season; Smith, a halfback; Steuring, a flashy end; Cooper, who cared for the North End pivot last term, and Binder and Harkorian, linesmen. Lewis is working his boys hard since the hot spell broke and expects to have them in fair shape for a contest with Principia on Oct. 3.

Three Veterans at Cleveland.

For the first time since the advent of Coach Bert Fenenga at Cleveland High School, the response to football call has resulted in fewer than 100 candidates, in fact, there are but 50 this season. But this is the result of Fenenga's desire. Lack of playing space hampers the Carondelet mentor this year, as much of the field has been given over to tennis courts. The coach picked his men before they appeared on the field. The down South school is poor in veteran material, with only three returning regulars from the last term eleven. Musgrove, all-star quarterback last season, and Haynes will again tote the ball for Cleveland, but Fowler is the lone forward back in school. Graham, another halfback, has announced that he will not return to school. Apparently Fenenga will have to build a new line, but he has some recruit material, which, although green, is heavy and rangy. Cleveland has found it difficult to book practice games this season, as county teams objecting to playing in the city every year without alternation. St. Louis U. High has been booked for Oct. 10.

Walker Must Build Anew.

The dean of St. Louis coaches, Mike Walker, is once more loading the Central High eleven. This fact in itself insures a fighting Red and Black machine. But the Blue coach has some hard work cut out for him. Three of his last year boys will bear the brunt of the early season battling, as Hunt, fullback, McCready, at quarterback and Kittlaus, at end, are the only returning regulars from the 1924 eleven. There are a number of substitutes and scrubs of the last term squad, but they are not impressive and Walker has nine of them in with the green material. Hard work and strict application to direction of play may develop a machine of power for the Grand boulevard school.

Because of lack of a playing field in the central part of the city the Central squad has to journey to Fairground Park in North St. Louis for its daily workouts. A small lot in the rear of Central High School is inadequate for football play.

Roosevelt Has Old Timers.

The fighting cognomen, Roosevelt, will be carried on a St. Louis High School gridiron for the first time this season. The new school has borne the name of the Rough Rider in all sports but football, performing as the McKinley eleven last season. The South Siders are hopeful that the new name will inspire the eleven to great deeds.

Coach Carlson will pit his squad against the Normandy eleven on Oct. 3 and expects to get a good line on his men that day. The last season players who will once more be available are Willmarth, Freeman, Hill, Jarrett, Delporte, Brow and Bodge. The new players reporting seem to be a bit above the average, and the South Siders are confident that the new school will start out with a good record.

WHAT ST. LOUIS TEAMS NEED TO BE PENNANT WINNERS

ort Writers at Home and In Other Cities Offer Their Suggestions on the Subject nsensus Appears to Be That It Won't Take Much to Make One or Both Our Ball Clubs Into Championship Combinations.

It is nearly 40 years since St. Louis has had a baseball pennant. What is responsible for St. Louis' failure, year after year? Several years ago Cleveland broke into a world series, after a famine of many years. Washington made its world series bow last year. St. Louis ball clubs have made a poor showing. Last year it was reported that the Cardinals had a deficit, while there were other prosperous years, and income tax reports indicate that the Browns prospered that year. It is known that the Yanks made much money in 1922. Why, have the Browns and Cardinals failed to give the cash customers in St. Louis a pennant, a baseball series?

Baseball writers and men close in touch with the game in St. Louis have been asked what, in their opinion, should be done to make the St. Louis teams into pennant winners.

Their replies are set forth herewith:

By Harry Neily,
Of the Chicago American Sport Staff.

With the Cubs in the last place and the White Sox in the second division, a Chicago "expert" has troubles of his own. If the Cardinals had been properly managed (they are now) and had about five first-rate pitchers, they would be contenders. They have the batting power, and outside the box could use a good third baseman and two pitchers.

The Browns lack pitchers, and are lamentably for the want of a competent catcher, who can think and handle the throwers. A man of experience would help a great deal.

No club ever got very far without an intelligent, alert catcher. If the Browns can obtain such a one and a 20-victory pitcher and keep Ken Williams in the lineup all summer, they would be challengers. However, any club, to win championship, must pile luck on top of skill.

By James M. Gould,
President of the Baseball Writers' Association of America.

One of the most important needs of the Cardinals is a steady centerfielder—a man of the Southworth type. I am of the opinion, also, that another catcher is needed, a player of experience in the major land, of course, the team needs, finally, at least two pitchers to help the three or four steady veterans already on the roster. Bell, with a year of experience, probably will come through at third, and Lawson seems to have gained batting ability which he needed to attach the shortstop job for 1926. There is some question as to whether Chick Hafey, despite his undoubted punch and his wonderful throwing arm, has been acclimated to the Big Show brand of baseball. Give the Cards, then, a pair of pitchers, a catcher and a center-fielder, and they should be in the next race, providing, of course, Bell and Hafey come through.

By J. B. Sheridan,
Baseball Writer for the Sporting News.

To be keen pennant contenders in 1926 the Browns appear to need one high-class catcher.

Performances for 1925 indicate that Mr. Sisler should secure from Ogrd. Gaston, Vangilder, Johnson, Bush, etc., pitching sufficient to win the 95-odd games necessary to win a championship.

Addition of one high-class infielder would help the Browns, but they can win a pennant with the present old and outfield of 1925, Gerber playing shortfield.

Mr. Sisler's problem is: (1) Get a catcher of championship caliber. (2) Put a fit team in the field April 15, 1926. (3) Acquire a little more of the will to win and impart it to his team.

The problem of the Cardinals is more complex.

Performance in 1925 indicates that Mr. Hornsby has but one catcher, and possibly three infielders of championship caliber, not one catcher, and not one outfielder of that class.

To become pennant contenders the Cardinals must find at least three pitchers of the first class, one high-class catcher, one high-class infielder and two high-class outfielders.

In existing circumstances, this appears to be a condition which cannot be remedied within a period of less than three years.

Means by which needed accretions of playing power may be secured.

Browns: Purchase or trade one catcher. Adequate expenditure of money and keen trading.

Cardinals: Time. Good general management by owners. Adequate expenditure of money.

Will owners of baseball clubs unite in their baseball business the systems used in successful operation of private buinesses, it will be practically impossible to estimate means by use of which the game may be advanced to places of pennant contention and maintained in that desirable position.

Failure of proprietors to use in baseball the ordinary common sense judgment and system essential to success in other businesses

By Jack D. Webb,
Sports Editor, St. Louis Star.

In my opinion, the Browns need, for next year:

One good right-hand hitting outfielder.

At least three good reserves for the infield.

One experienced, even veteran, catcher who not only could catch a game of baseball, but could coach the pitchers.

Better reserves for the outfield with emphasis on right-hand hitting.

A third baseman.

The perrenial St. Louis wail: some more and better pitchers—right-hand, left-hand and other otherwise.

And as for me, bo, I like my baseball plenty rough, the knock-down, drag-out variety; expect-nothing-and-give-nothing type. I think the office man, the guy like myself, who doesn't get out and play anything himself, likes his sport with plenty of fight in it.

By J. Roy Stockton,
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

St. Louis' failure to win any pennants can be attributed to business methods. And as long as business methods are applied St. Louis will be without a pennant.

Magnates know that two or three good spurts a season will enable them to make money out of their ball clubs. It is good business to make as large a return as possible from as small an expenditure. The Browns could stand pat on what they have now, not put a new stick in their grand stand, throw open the rusty gates next season and make money.

When baseball is taken by St. Louis owners as a sporting proposition, as a game, and when they are ready to gamble on Babe Ruths and Howard Ehmkes and Joe Dugans and Glenn Wrights and Ydes and Kremers, St. Louis will win a pennant.

But as long as the two clubs are satisfied with humpty dumpties from the lesser leagues, raw recruits nine miles and four parasangs from major league maturity, we will have our two or three cash spurts a year, but no pennant.

Sisler and Hornsby give St. Louis the brightest purospects they have had in years. oBth want to win and both will battle with their owners for the players to enable them to win.

It takes a stout heart to gamble with a small park and a comparatively small population to draw from. If McGraw draws a $50,000 lemon he can charge it to advertising. If St. Louis drew a few $50,000 lemons it would be financially dangerous.

By Burt Whitman,
Sports Editor, Boston Herald.

Judging by the demeanor and the spirit of the Cards and Browns in their recent games in Boston, each team needs more aggressiveness. They were mechanical here and lacked the fighting attitude which is a marked characteristic of teams that win pennants. Both teams were weak at short late in the season. No team can get far when it has a defect there.

Two great players manage the St. Louis teams. Hornsby has not been at the helm a year. Sisler is finishing his second year. If it takes three years to make a good big-league infielder, isn't it fair to assume that it ought to take at least that period to make a good big-league manager?

Hornsby and Sisler deserve their chance. They know better than any one else where their team weaknesses are. My dope is that the owners ought to back Sis and the Rajah to the limit, get what new talent the young managers want and then, with patience, await results.

'LAST DITCH' TILDEN: Always Overcoming Handicaps, Has He Really Been Extend

Tennis Title Holder Real Champion

Built for His Job, Having Everything Necessary to Beat All Comers, He Does as He Pleases in International or Minor Matches.

By Arthur Schneff.

Two points away was defeat—defeat in straight sets in a Davis cup singles match. The first set had been lost, 5 to 7, and the second 4 to 6. The score in the third set was 5 to 4 in Zenzo Shimizu's favor and the tenth game had been deuced. The Japanese player needed only two more points and he would be victor over William Tatem Tilden.

What an outlook for Big Bill. Temperature around 95, with a red-hot sun glaring down in the turf courts. To win he would have to take three straight games in one set and then two more sets.

Yes, Bill Tilden was beaten at last. It certainly appeared that way.

But the lanky tennis player flashed his racket, sliced one at the Japanese player's forehand and Shimizu could not reach it. Shimizu won the next point, again deuced the game, but the long, angular American ace then rushed points down the alley. The set was up to the net, after returning the Japanese' service, and flashed two even. Five games each. But still Shimizu needed only two games to beat Tilden.

Those two games were not won. Tilden captured the eleventh and twelfth games and won the set. Then, two sets behind, he flashed across the steaming court with such renewed energy, he smashed the ball back across the net with such irresistible force and flashed slices and cuts into the corners of the court with such precision that he soon had Shimizu on the run.

Apparently down, Big Bill Tilden won two more sets. He beat Shimizu in that 1921 Davis cup singles match, 5—7, 4—6, 7—5, 6—2, 6—1.

Take That, Mr. Lineman.

Again it was a Davis cup match. Bill Tilden was playing J. O. Anderson of Australia. A lineman made a decision favoring Tilden which the crowd thought was an improper decision. The spectators voiced their disapproval.

This was an international match, a Davis Cup match. The Australians had traveled many thousands of miles over land and sea to play the Americans in this match. It was an important contest. Victory or defeat might hang on the result of this Tilden-Anderson match.

But that made no difference to Tilden. He gave on disapproving glance at the stands and then threw away a set. Deliberately he smashed every Anderson return into the net. Not just one smash. One smash would have atoned for the lineman's error. But Tilden kept smashing them into the net until he had given the Australian a set.

What egoism! What grandstanding! What an exaggerated sense of fairness. Who knows what the stands may have thought of Tilden's actions. But he ignored the stands and then, having thrown a set to the visiting Australian, he proceeded to show that he did not need any assistance from the linemen. Tilden proceeded to wipe up the court with Anderson, beating him in a love set. Then he won the match with consummate ease.

A Champion Able to Take on All Comers and Send Them Away Beaten

What sort of a person is this Tilden? Is he a grandstander? Does he let his opponent get out in front, to make the match spectacular? Is he such a good showman that he makes his matches close? Is he such an egoist that he thinks he can give any foe any sort of a handicap and still beat him?

Or is Bill Tilden of that temperament that requires that he be down, apparently beaten in the last ditch before he can give his best in competition?

There are a thousand questions at the tip of the tongue about Tilden. He is the most colorful figure amateur sport has ever known, probably in this country or any other. He is the champion of champions, the most outstanding figure in any sport. Nobody knows how good he is, because no one has ever been able to give him a close contest on the tennis courts. Golf champions' thrones are in danger every year. When a golf champion goes to the lists the next year the odds are at least 5 to 1 that he will not repeat. But when Tilden plays the odds are one-sided that he will win.

No other sport has a Tilden. Boxing champions pick their foes, set the dates of their matches, make regulations with which opponents must conform and then, if a finger is hurt, the match is postponed.

Tilden meets all comers. The world is scoured for the best players that the tennis courts can produce. They gather in tournaments and Tilden beats them all. And he does it again and again. For six straight years he has beaten them all, for six straight years he has won the national tennis championship and never in a Davis Cup match has he been defeated.

Tilden combines all the elements that go to make up a great champion—physical strength, skill and intelligence. Tilden has each to an extreme degree. He has everything, and he has more closely approached perfection than any player the game has known.

"Came Out" in 1918.

Tilden first gained prominence in the public eye when he won the national clay court tennis championship at Chicago in 1918. Although he was then the holder of a few titles, he was far from being a national figure, and his victory was regarded as an upset. It was a war year, and most of the better tennis players were in service. Tilden, a young man of 25 years, tall, thin, nervous and excitable, even then attracted some notice by the balance of his game and the variety of strokes he had at his disposal. But the wiseacres conceded him his laurels grudgingly. There was no doubt, they said, that Tilden had managed to slip into the championship because of a want of competition.

Later in the summer Tilden reached the final round of the national singles, but was beaten decisively by R. Lindley Murray, the speedy Californian. Paired with Vincent Richards, he won the national doubles. Still it was said that Tilden had reached these heights through good fortune. On all sides it was remarked: "Wait until the other players get back from the war."

The other players returned, but Tilden lost no time proving his right to his newly won laurels. The year after the war he was again finalist in the national singles, losing this time to William Johnston. That marked the end of Tilden's reverses. In 1920, he won the championship. He had "arrived," and ever since wrestling the title from Johnston, Tilden has worn the national crown.

Jumped From Nowhere to the Head Of His Class and Just "Sat Tight"

From somewhere in the twenties, Tilden jumped to second place in the national ranking in one short season. To the casual observer this must have appeared as something quite remarkable, but when one becomes familiar with the history of Tilden's advance as a tennis player, his comparatively sudden rise is seen to be the result of years of patient effort, coupled with a scientific study of tennis and a great natural physical equipment.

Tilden was playing tennis when he was a lad under 12 years of age. He followed the game closely, and in one of his books gives a graphic picture of his tendency to hero-worship the great players of his youth. McLoughlin, in his prime in 1914, was one of Tilden's idols. Tilden later attended school at the Germantown Academy in Philadelphia, his home, and then entered Pennsylvania University. He played tennis at both institutions, but he was simply a good average player, and no more.

It was when the champion was called upon by a friend to assist in coaching the youngsters at Germantown Academy that he began his first serious study of the game. "I learned the science of tennis by trying to teach it," Tilden has written. "Frequently one of the lads whom I was coaching would ask me why the ball bounced a certain way when hit, and why his backhand shots hit the net so often. I observed these youngsters closely and by learning what was wrong with their game, discovered my own faults. I then made a serious study of angles, english, footwork and such, as much to be able to answer their embarrassing questions as for any other reason. It was in this manner that I first actually became a student of the game."

Built Just Right for His Job.

A splendid physical endowment has enabled Tilden to reap the full benefit of his technical skill. The champion has the perfect build for tennis. He is 6 feet 1 inch in height and weighs 165 pounds. He has an extraordinary reach, and can cross a court in about two good bounds. He has exceptionally broad shoulders which enable him to stroke a ball with great force and in addition he is speedy of foot and agile.

And it is very likely that the champion will get the most out of his physical resources for many years to come. No athlete takes better care of himself than Tilden. He exercises the strictest vigilance over his diet and he never permits himself to lose sleep. He enjoys motoring, the movies and is an excellent bridge player, but while a tournament is in progress 9 o'clock almost invariably finds him in his room preparing to retire. He never attends the dinners, dances or parties that are usually arranged for the entertainment of players during a tournament.

In the clay court championships held in St. Louis in 1924, Tilden proved his point to Brian I. C. Norton. Norton had won the European championship, the national doubles with Tilden in 1923, and at Wimbledon was within 1 point of defeating Tilden in the final. He and Tilden came together in the clay court semifinal. A close match was expected. Norton, however, had not been observing training rules strictly enough to suit Tilden, so the champion set out to convince his young friend of the value of keeping in the best physical trim. The champion raced through the match in three straight sets, losing but one game in each. The lesson lasted 45 minutes.

A Stormy Petrel.

Besides being the greatest player the game has known, Tilden is also its most colorful personality. He is the stormy petrel of tennis and for several years his amateur status has been the center of heated debate.

Tilden receives about $10,000 a year from a syndicate for writing articles on tennis and for reporting the tournaments in which he engages. Last year the United States Lawn Tennis Association interpreted that as a violation of their rule against capitalizing a tennis reputation. With his amateur standing impugned, Tilden quickly proffered his resignation from the Davis Cup team. With Tilden off the team, almost certain defeat was in store for the United States in the approaching matches. A truce was arranged and Tilden was declared an amateur. He played on the Davis Cup team and the United States retained the cup. Then the association at a meeting last winter made some concessions by modifying its rule to prohibit a player from writing a story of a tournament under his name while the tournament was in progress. Tilden only technically complied with the rule during the recent clay court tournament by permitting himself to be interviewed each day by a representative of the news syndicate for which he worked. Charges were again made against the champion and he was put on the official carpet. Tilden apologized, promised to grant no more interviews and the incident was closed.

A Bit of Temperament.

Much has been written about Tilden's "temperament." The term covers a multitude of eccentricities, many of which are not regarded as excessively complimentary to the champion. All of the stormy petrel's storms are not limited to differences with the U. S. L. T. A. The champion on more than one occasion has had a falling out with the spectators who assembled to watch him perform. Nothing annoys Tilden more than to have a gallery forget itself enough to applaud a good shot in the middle of a rally before the point has been determined. And when the champion is annoyed he shows it. In the clay court championships here in July, Tilden and the gallery were so much at loggerheads that the final match was almost postponed. The spectators insisted on applauding whenever a good shot was made, particularly if it was made by Tilden's young opponent, George Lott. Tilden showed his disapproval by loudly remarking: "Impossible to play before a crowd like this," which caused the gallery to applaud still more vigorously. The spectators lapsed into silence only after tournament officials had threatened to postpone the match.

Also under the head of "temperament" must be filed the annoyance Tilden manifested at the decisions of the line judges during the same tournament. So keenly did the champion make his displeasure felt that the umpire, during the final match, felt obliged were officiating.

DUNDEE TO BE WARNED NOT TO CLAIM TITLE AS WORLD'S CHAMPION

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Johnny Dundee does not have the approval of the New York State Athletic Commission in his claims to recognition as world's featherweight champion.

This was announced today by the commission after it heard a protest from Scotty Monteith, manager of Louis (Kid) Kaplan, who was officially designated as featherweight titleholder by winning the Commission's championship elimination tournament last winter after Dundee's voluntary retirement from the 126-pound division.

Monteith charged that Dundee had publicly claimed the title again and announced he would defend it at the featherweight limit in a bout with Babe Herman at the Polo Grounds, Oct. 5.

Dundee will be notified by the commission to drop his title claims or file a challenge for a bout with Kaplan if he desires to seek championship recognition here again.

"BIG BILL:" This Remarkable Reach Helps Him Beat All Opponents

TILDEN, unbeaten in an important match in six years, has proved without a peer in ability to win seemingly lost matches.

Lacoste Will Be the World's Premier Tennis Player Before He Is Through, Tilden S

Champion Also Predicts That Lacoste and Borotra Day Will Win the Davis Cup for France.

By William T. Tilden II.

THE two most sensational figures during the tennis season of 1925 are Rene Lacoste and Jean Borotra of France, who have put the Tricolor into the challenge round of the Davis cup for the first time in 25 years.

These matches against [illegible] gave me my first chance to [illegible] these two stars and the opportunity was very nearly a costly one, for both of them carried me to five sets and had me on the brink of defeat. There is a wide difference in style between these two French stars, but not much in ability.

I consider that Rene Lacoste is the soundest and greatest player over a long period of time, but that Jean Borotra has flashes of brilliancy that equal or surpass his teammate.

It is a tremendously interesting contrast in game and temperament that one finds in Lacoste and Borotra. Lacoste has the [illegible] French temperament I have ever known. He makes Helen Wills' poker face look like Eva Tanguay in a stormy moment when he is forced to a dangerous period in a hard match.

Praises Lacoste's Steadiness.

Lacoste is the steadiest, most accurate, careful baseliner I have played in years. He has no weakness and no great strength.

He can hit his backhand drive at either side, but its best is down the court. The soundest shot is his forehand is a short-angled, deep court drive, with little speed but very accurate. His volley is reliable, but not severe. His excellent overhead, but lacks the tremendous killing power of Borotra. His service is a good slice, well placed and accurate.

There is no doubt in my mind about Lacoste. He will be the world's premier tennis player before he is through. His constant study of the game, his sound progress, his willingness to work to the end and his tireless energy all point to certain success.

Borotra Also Dangerous.

Jean Borotra is the most sensational net player I have met. His ability to volley while apparently standing on his ear, or nose, is not only marvelous but discouraging. His ground game is not as sound as it looks. The peculiar, apparently almost unconscious method of hitting his drives, really is quite a sound attack.

Borotra used a peculiar wrist-flick swing that is so deceptive it is hard to judge the direction of his shot. He advances to the net behind any sort of a shot and he gets away with it by his sheer audacity.

He has an eye like a hawk, a speed of foot like a rabbit, and the result that to pass him down the net your shot must be perfect. If you ever do get the ball by him he disarms you entirely by his whole-hearted acknowledgment in the form of "Ah, oui," followed by a flashing smile.

Borotra is a clever shot maker and a dangerous competitor, always out for him when apparently down and at the point of complete exhaustion. He is most dangerous at such a moment.

On his day he is a very great player, not in strokes, but in inspiration. I cannot yet say that I think he is sound, but I consider him far greater than I judged him last year.

St. Louis Tennis Players Beaten

Drewes Loses to Lott and Josties to Williams in Chicago Tourney.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—The Western National Team of George Lott and Lucian Williams, both of Chicago, swept into the final round of the intersectional team tennis tournament here today by winning both of the singles.

By winning today Lott and Williams are due to meet the middle states team of William T. Tilden, six times National Champion, and Manuel Alonso, captain of the Spanish Davis Cup team for the championship tomorrow.

Lott easily won over Ted Drewes of St. Louis, representing the Missouri Valley section, in straight sets, 6—3, 6—3. The Chicago youth, though erratic at times, was easily the superior over the national municipal titleholder.

Williams won over Fred Josties, of St. Louis, 6—2, 6—3. Williams' shots were too fast and too well placed for his opponent.

Immediately after the two singles matches, Tilden and A. H. Chapin of Hyannis, Mass., played an exhibition doubles match against B. I. C. Norton of St. Louis, and Manuel Alonson, of the Spanish Davis Cup team.

With rain threatening Lott and Williams decided to forfeit the doubles to Drewes and Josties, as the outcome would have no bearing on the result anyway.

In the singles of the finals tomorrow, Lott will meet Manuel Alonso and Williams will meet Champion Tilden.

Simmons, Athletics' Most Valuable Star, Is Given Automobile

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 26.

AL SIMMONS, hard-hitting center fielder, was today awarded an automobile as the most valuable player on the Philadelphia Athletics. The award was made by local sport writers.

Simmons, who was runner-up this year to Roger Pekinpaugh of Washington as the most valuable player in the American League, received 30 votes. Catcher "Mickey" Cochrane was second with 22.

Boxers to Draw For Places on Coliseum Card

Out-of-Town Battlers Are Here for Opening Show Wednesday.

St. Louis fistic enthusiasts were treated to their first sample of the pugilistic talents of Eddie "Kid" Wagner, K. O. Phil Kaplan and Pete Hartley, eastern ring artists, yesterday. The trio will compete in 10-round bouts featuring the program of five events arranged for the professional revival next Wednesday night at the New Coliseum.

Kaplan and Hartley, who arrived Friday night, went through their first workouts at the National Gymnasium. Wagner boxed two rounds with Harry Ritzer, a local welterweight. Hartley went through a fast 3-round session with Eddie Goldberg.

Besides the eastern triumvirate, the list of visiting boxers includes Arthur "Sailor" Maley, a Pacific Coast heavyweight, who will tackle Joe Baker, in a 4-rounder. Maley gave an impressive exhibition in sparring jousts with Harry Ritzer and Bill Johnson.

Wagner to Box Hartley.

Wagner, who hails from Philadelphia, meets Hartley in the lightweight events. Kaplan, whose home is in Newark, N. J., will be pitted against Jimmy Gorry, the Wellston welterweight. A featherweight contest between George Butch, city championship claimant, and Ray Alfano, the East Sider, who captured national amateur championship laurels last spring, finishing the program of 10-round attractions.

The heavyweight battle between Maley and Baker will be followed by a featherweight match in which Morris King, a former star of the local amateur game, meets Jackie Poole of Belleville at 6 rounds.

Participants in the three star bouts will draw for positions on the program.

A brisk demand for membership cards is reported by officials and the ticket sales to date presage a capacity attendance. Ticket prices range from $1.10 for general admission to the upper balcony, to $5.50 for ringside reservations, including the federal tax.

Lady Cynthia Tells Why She Is Now an English Socialist

Believes in Co-Operation, Not in Competition; in Love, Not in Hate, and Sees No Solution for England's Problems But a Change in Political Ideals.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and the New York World.

(Copyright, 1925, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., New York World and Post-Dispatch.)

LONDON, Sept. 24.

LADY CYNTHIA MOSELY, daughter of the late Lord Curzon, who has just been chosen Socialist candidate for Stoke-on-Trent for the next parliamentary election, made this week a long confession of political faith to a large and enthusiastic Labor audience, one-third of whom was women.

She explained why she had become a Socialist and what she expected Socialism to do for the country. She confided to her supporters what a great step it was for her as the daughter of one of the foremost Tory leaders to join the Laborites, and she answered the critics who had questioned the sincerity of her conversion.

"I am proud and delighted to accept the position," she began. "Indeed, I look upon it as a duty. At this moment everybody who really believes in Socialism and our great cause must come into the fight.

"The Conservatives are breaking every pledge they ever made. They are beating down the standard of workers and trying to reduce their wages, and the miners more than any other workers in industry are being attacked. I am honored in being able to stand for a constituency where there are a great many miners, because they will be at the very forefront of battle when it comes. In view of the state of the mines, the mining industry more than any other industry is absolutely ripe and crying out for nationalization.

Says the Miners Are Right.

"On the one hand the miners very rightly and properly are refusing to accept any reduction in wages, and in that resistance the whole labor movement—and certainly myself and my husband—will be solidly behind them. On the other hand, the mine owners are saying that owing to this Government's financial policy, they must reduce costs of production, and the only way they can think of is to reduce wages. Thus there is a tremendous dilemma, and under the present system there is absolutely no way out. The only way out is Socialism, and I think a different financial policy necessary as well.

"Some of you don't know me as yet and may wonder why I am in the Labor movement and why I desire to stand as a candidate. Those on the other side are always taunting me with that query. They ask me, 'What have you in common with the working woman?'

"In the first place, I have a husband and two children, and I know how I'd feel if I couldn't get enough food or proper clothes for them or had not a roof over their heads. What I feel so much is that other mothers are not able to get for their husbands and children what I am so lucky to be able to get for my husband and children.

"Another reason is I have two ridiculous things called a heart and conscience, and they are always worrying me. They started worrying me a long time ago. I was brought up in a political atmosphere, but the politics were the other way. But like many young people in recent years, I reacted very much and felt I wanted to find out about things for myself.

I've Done a Bit of Work."

"And so I did many things which for people like myself were rather unusual. I went out and worked in an office for two years, starting at £1½ a week ($7.50) and rising to £3. So I've done a bit of work. Then I went and worked on the land for several months. After that I went to the London School of Economics and went through a course.

"I've always done a great deal of work in the poorest parts of London and that brought me right bang up against the appalling conditions under which millions of the men, women and children of this country are living. I went into the question whether there was a way out or whether it was absolutely inevitable there should be this squalor and destitution. It seems there should be a way out.

Memoirs of William Jennings Bryan

Considered Himself "Child of Fortune" Because of Ease With Which Fame Was Thrust Upon Him by Friends and Supporters—"Born in Greatest Age and in Greatest Republic."

THESE memoirs, left incomplete by Mr. Bryan at the time of his death on July 26, 1925, at Dayton, Tenn., were originally intended by him to have been published under the title "A Child of Fortune," he having believed that good fortune and the aid of his friends were more responsible for the successes of his colorful career than were his own attainmetns and efforts. The incomplete memoirs have been edited and corrected by Mrs. Bryan and will be pyblished in weekly installments in the Post-Dispatch.

PREFACE.

IN giving the public the story of my life, I trust I may be credited with something more than a desire to acquaint the public with myself. The time has passed when I could have any ulterior motive in a heart-to-heart talk with the American people.

Whatever ambition I have had has been more than gratified. I feel that I have received more than I have deserved and have been abundantly repaid for the efforts I have made in behalf of the American people.

It is my purpose to show that in my own case good fortune has had more to do with such success as I may have achieved than any efforts of my own, and, while I cannot speak so positively of others, I think the same is true of all other public men. Success in politics, and, to a large extent in other lines of activity, is the conjunction of opportunity and the preparedness to meet. Opportunity comes independently of one's own efforts, and his preparedness to meet opportunity is due, as I shall show, largely to others.

The facts as I present them will prove that I have been wonderfully fortunate in the opportunities that have come to me, and that I am indebted to a multitude of individuals, known and unknown, for such preparation as I have had to improve the opportunities as they came.

My second purpose is to show the goodness of the American people, their patriotism, their moral courage, their high ideals, their willingness to sacrifice for their convictions—the virtues that not only make popular government possible, but insure its success. No man in public life has ever been in a better position to record these virtues of the people, or under deeper obligation to give them the credit they deserve.

Spokesman for Millions

I trust that with the two purposes in view I may be able to so shift the accent from "I" to "they," as to purge my Memoirs of every trace of egotism or self-assertion. I shall relate my own connection with individuals, measures and events, but I shall endeavor to so interweave the actions of others with my own acts as to make the result appear as the result of a joint effort in which I have played but a part, and often but an inconsequential part.

In politics, as in the army, the generals receive the glory while the enlisted men die in the trenches. The names that are prominent become household words, while the multitude who bear the burden are nameless in history.

I can best illustrate my conception of the magnifying of the few and the minimizing of many by a fact which came to my attention at Arequipa, Peru. It is the second city in size in the Republic, and perches on the ocean side of the Andes at an elevation of some seven thousand feet. We stopped there on the way from Molendo up to Cuzco, the ancient city of the Incas. The rainfall is so light, being only a few inches a year, that Harvard has erected an observatory there for photographing the stars.

Just before our arrival a photograph was taken of what was supposed to be a single star, but examination of the plate showed it was a group of stars numbering more than four thousand. They were so far away that the light of all of them combined to make the seemingly one ray that reached the naked eye.

Tells What "Bryanism" Was

That which was called "Bryanism" in derision by many, represented a group of substantial reforms. It was not an individual thing, but rather the result of united effort of some six millions and a half of American voters. I was but one of the millions, but because I was in a position of leadership, I received the glory from those who bestowed it—and the censure from those who criticized—while others, equally earnest, and often with more sacrifice, labored and died unknown to fame.

To begin the story of my good fortune, I recall to the reader a very obvious and simple fact: that man is born into the world without his own volition, and has not a word to say about the age in which he shall be born, the race of which he shall be a member, the land in which he will first see the light, and the family environment which shall surround him in his youth.

"The Greatest of All Ages"

And yet, it need hardly be added that these four elements are largely responsible for the opportunities which he enjoys, and also hedge him about with restrictions which he cannot disregard.

I was born in the greatest of all ages. No golden ages of the past offered any such opportunity for large service and, therefore, for the enjoyment that comes from consciousness that one has been helpful. Because of the multiplied means of communication, it is easier today to confer immediate benefits upon all mankind than it was a few centuries ago to aid those who lived within a valley in the mountains.

I was born a member of the greatest of all races—the Caucasian race, and had mingled in my veins the blood of English, Irish and Scotch. One has only to consider the limitations upon one's opportunities imposed by race to understand the incalculable benefit of having the way opened between the child and the stars.

I was born a citizen of the greatest of all lands. So far as my power to prevent was concerned, I might have been born in the darkest of continents, and among the most backward of earth's peoples. It was a gift of priceless value to see the light in beloved America, and to live under the greatest of the Republics of history.

And I was equally fortunate, as I shall show, in my family environment. I cannot trace my ancestry beyond the fourth generation, and there is not among them, so far as I know, one of great wealth or great political or social prominence, but so far as I have been able to learn, they were honest, industrious, Christian, moral, religious people—not a black sheep in the flock, not a drunkard, not one for whose life I would have to utter an apology. The environment in which my youth was spent was as nearly ideal as any that I know.

Found Courage in Religion

When I add together all that I have derived from these four sources and subtract from what I am all that is due to these gifts unsolicited and unearned, I feel that any part for which I can claim credit is of little consequence.

Lincoln must have had something of the same feeling when he expressed preference for the poem that begins "O, why should the spirit of mortal be proud?"

But the blessings enumerated, that is, the advantages that come with birth and training in a Christian home, have come to millions. Important as they are to me, they were but the fore-runner of an unbroken series of good luck—if the word "luck" can be used in such a connection.

At the age of 14 I became a member of the church as the result of a spiritual awakening that took place in the little town in which I was born. I shall elaborate upon it in the proper place in my story. I mention it now because it has had more influence in my life for good than any other experience, and I have been increasingly grateful for the circumstances that led me to take a stand on religion before I left home for college. It was of incalculable value to me during the period of questioning that seems unavoidable in the life of students. The influence of the church, the Sunday School, the prayer meeting and the Y. M. C. A. were upon the solid rock and my faith built upon an enduring foundation.

When I was old enough to enter preparatory school I was fortunate in becoming the member of a splendid family, in which I had all the attention that a great scholar and his accomplished wife could have given to a child of their own. There came under the influence, also, of a number of teachers, men of the highest character, filled with religious zeal. I cannot estimate my indebtedness to them, but I reverently acknowledge their profound influence upon my thought, my ideals, and my life.

Protected by Environment

Upon graduation from Illinois College at the age of 21, I entered the Union College of Law, and here, again, the goddess of fortune smiled upon me. Henry Trumbull entered the law school at the same time, and was a member of the same class. He was the youngest son of Lyman Trumbull, eminent lawyer, distinguished jurist, and for 18 years member of the United States Senate. The students usually associated themselves with a law firm, partly that they might have a place to study during the day, and partly for the experience they secured from the association with legal men in practice. Had I searched the city through, I could not have found an environment more congenial, more wholesome and more helpful, and it was due to the fact that young Trumbull just happened to be in the same class with me.

When I finished law school and entered upon the practice of law at Jacksonville, Ill., I was again the beneficiary of an enviable environment. Because of my relationship to Doctors H. K. and C. J. Jones, added to my record in college and the friendship of the professors, I secured desk room in the office of Brown, Kirby and Russell of whom I shall speak in detail later. This connection not only saved me the expense of an office during the struggling months of my practice, but I had opportunity to add to my income by making collecions which were turned over to me.

Westward With Fortune

Judge Kirby was a trustee of Illinois College, and treasurer of the Board. This fact resulted in my being entrusted with the collection of interest notes given by former graduates, and in the summer of 1887 led to the making of a trip to Kansas for the purpose of collecting defaulted interest on some of these notes. Here a new series of circumstances took me in charge and conducted me to and through a change in location that vitally affected the remainder of my life and opened the way to the political experiences through which I passed in Nebraska.

The last visit I had to make in Kansas as a collector took me into the northern part of the state, not a great distance from Lincoln, the capital of Nebraska. There lived at Lincoln at the time a young lawyer by the name of Adolphus R. Talbot, who was a classmate in law school. I shall, at the proper place, tell of the beginning of our friendship, of my visit with him in Lincoln in 1887, and of my removal to Lincoln, which resulted.

I arrived in Nebraska just in time to enter politics. I had always expected to enter politics later in life, but had no thought of being a candidate for anything until I had made my fortune at the bar. But here, too, circumstances played an important part. Before I had become very well known at the bar, I was a candidate for Congress, and was elected in the landslide of 1890.

A Friend in W. F. Springer

When I went to Congress I found another friend, William F. Springer, member of Congress from the Springfield district of Illinois. Jacksonville was in his district when I had lived there, and I had spoken for him in campaigns of 1884-86. When I passed through Washington in 1887, he showed me every possible attention. I was not an exception, for he was one of those friendly souls who find pleasure in being helpful. This acquaintance with him resulted in my becoming a member of the Ways and Means Committee, and that gave me prominence in the discussion of the tariff, which, in turn, contributed materially to my re-election in 1892; and this threw me into the discussion of the silver question, which opened the way to my nomination for the presidency.

At the convention I became the beneficiary of another series of circumstances, any one of which, if it had been missing, would have been fatal to my political success. But none were missing. One unexpected circumstance after another formed the links of the chain that brought me as a young man into the leadership of my party about 10 years younger than any other person had been when nominated for President by one of the great parties.

Not only circumstances that were not calculated upon, but the opposition of those unfriendly, did for me what I could not have done for myself. If the reader has the patience to follow me through this story of my life, he will learn not to despise the day of small things, and not even to ignore the benefits that come to one from the conspiracies of his enemies.

I have often been reminded of one of the concluding verses of the Twenty-third Psalm: "Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies."

And still more frequently do I recall that wonderfully expressive description of superlative blessings: "My cup runneth over."

If anyone, judging the future by the past, can be made the basis of a firm hope, I can say: "Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life."

Received Unselfish Devotion

But my first purpose is to show the real goodness of the American people, and, as no one has been the recipient of as large a measure of unselfish devotion, no one is in better position to record with grateful appreciation the kindnesses received. I have never been in a position to repay my friends in a political way. During my first term in Congress, the Republicans were in control of the national administration, so that I had no patronage at my command. During the second term in Congress I was not in harmony with President Cleveland on the money question, and soon ceased to be influential in the securing of appointments.

Thus, during the four years in office in the earlier part of my life, I was unable to pay my debts with lucrative positions, or to secure support by the promise of appointments.

Even when I was Secretary of State I was not able to reward any considerable number of political friends. My debts were larger, and, in an appointive way, my assets smaller.

A Reminder of "Young Bryan"

French Are Wary Of Security Pacts, Tardieu Explains

If the League of Nations "Passed the Buck" in Mosul Case, What Might Be Expected in Other Disputes, He Asks—Wouldn't the League Again "Sidle Out" of the Affair?

Statesmen representing France, England, Belgium, Germany and probably Italy will meet at Locarno, Switzerland, October 5, to negotiate the much discussed security pact. Andre Tardieu, representing the school of French statesmen who bitterly oppose any new pact that will substitute any part of the treaty of Versailles, explains in his dispatch today why they doubt that any new agreements will give France the security she requests.

By Andre Tardieu,

Former French High Commissioner to the United States.

Special Radio Dispatch.

(Copyright, 1925.)

PARIS, Sept. 24.

GERMANY has agreed to participate in the Locarno security pact conference and the sixth assembly of the League of Nations is ending its sessions. These two facts are replete with significance.

If any nation has shown lukewarmness toward the league, it is the United States. Largely on account of the league, the United States refused to ratify the Treaty of Versailles, and its attitude has not changed since. Despite repeated presidential urgings, the United States has not consented thus far even to participate in the World Court. Therefore it is odd to note that American opinion, or at least a considerable part of it, shows astonishment that so many Frenchmen are wary of pacts, which it is proposed to graft onto the league structure.

Since the writer's recent dispatch on this subject was published, he has received many letters from the United States, all saying substantially: "Evidently you do not favor peace, otherwise you would not oppose pacts which are the only way to achieve it."

Not Peace, but Security.

These correspondents will excuse the writer for saying that they miss the whole point. Peace means only absence of war. France needs more than that, namely a guarantee against war—in other words, security.

The problem is whether this new collection of contracts which it is proposed to substitute for the unilateral agreements of Versailles will bring to France this security. Still more accurately, it is a question of the league's guarantee powers.

What has just happened regarding Mosul is scarcely encouraging. As soon as the league has been asked to judge between England and Turkey, it has dodged the question and sent it to the World Court. What will happen after the Rhine and annexed pacts are concluded, if some day the league should be called to judge for example, between France and England? If the league council again tried to escape responsibility by "passing the buck," it is obvious that the resultant delays would operate in favor of the aggressors at the expense of the threatened nations.

Cites Possible Cases.

Imagine—to take a concrete case—that Germany should undertake, in a demilitarized Rhineland, military preparations which France deemed contrary to the pact and which England judged harmless. Suppose the same difficulty arose concerning Poland or Czecho-Slovakia. Does anybody imagine that the league which took to flight when the Mosul question came up would risk a decision in these cases? Isn't it obvious that once again it would sidle out?

What would then happen to the country which brought the complaint? What guarantee would there be?

The simple truth is that the league's international prestige is lower today than it was in 1920. Never have national jealousies been more hostile to enlargement of the league's authority, as the speeches at Geneva clearly demonstrated. One needs only to read what was said apropos of resolutions on the mutual assistance treaty and the 1924 protocol to reach the conclusion that the very idea of the membership of the league entertaining any obligation is far weaker than it appears, even in the original text of article 10 of the league covenant.

That is why numerous Frenchmen hesitate to entrust the safety of their nation to a body based on agreements which nobody respects. And if any country in the world is in a position to understand this viewpoint it is surely the United States.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Cromwell and Jefferson Were Temperate.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

PURITANISM has often been blamed for being the cause of our national prohibition laws, hence one would naturally think that its chief exponent, Oliver Cromwell, warmly embraced the doctrines of prohibition of liquor. However, we find his views on the question expressed in the "Life of Cromwell," by Charles Firth, published by G. Putnam Sons in 1900, on page 353, as follows: "With all his zeal for Sunday closing, the suppression of unnecessary alehouses and the punishment of drunkenness, it never occurred to him to stop the sale of drink altogether. He drank wine and small beer himself and quoted as illogical and absurd 'the man who would keep all the wine out of the country lest men should be drunk.' The idea was contrary to his conception of civil freedom. He said: 'It will be found an unjust and unwise jealousy to deprive a man of his natural liberty upon a supposition he may abuse it. When he doth abuse, judge.' In the moral crusade he had undertaken, the Protector relied not so much on restrictive legislation, as on the influence of education and religion. It was to their defective education that he attributed much of the misconduct of 'the profane nobility and gentry of this nation.'" Thomas Jefferson wrote a letter to M. de Neuville, on Dec. 13, 1818, in which he said the following:

"I rejoice, as a moralist, at the prospect of a reduction of the duties on wine, by our national legislature. It is an error to view a tax on that liquor as merely a tax on the rich. It is a prohibition of its use to the middling class of our citizens, and a condemnation of them to the poison of whisky, which is desolating their houses. No nation is drunken where wine is cheap; and none sober where the dearness of wine substitutes ardent spirits as the common beverage. It is, in truth, the only antidote to the bane of whisky. Fix but the duty at the rate of other merchandise, and we can drink wine here as cheap as we do grog; and who will not prefer it? Its extended use will carry health and comfort to a much enlarged circle. Everyone in easy circumstances, as the bulk of our citizens are, will prefer it to the poison to which they are now driven by their Government. And the treasury itself will find that a penny a piece from a dozen is more than a groat from a single one."

This exactly fits our situation today and coincides with the views of Adam Smith in his "Wealth of Nations," that the French, Spanish and Italian nations are not troubled with drunkenness, because in their countries wine is cheapest and most plentiful.

HENRY A. KERSTING.

The French Debt.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

AFTER spending four months in Europe and most of the time in France, I want to say that France should be made to pay every cent she owes us. She now has 200,000 men under arms in Morocco, and 300,000 more men waiting to go to war if necessary.

There is no reason why Americans should be taxed to keep up her wars and a standing army of 500,000. And that is what will be done unless our Congress is alive to the situation, for this is the plan of England and France to reduce our debt to each of them: England hiding behind France.

W. T. MOORE.

After Death.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IT is disquieting to the general public to note a man amassing a fortune, making a will, dying, and then witness a horde of relatives, lawyers, alienists rake over his dead past. What matters it if the man picked his teeth with a fork or combed his hair with a hayrake? What matters if he believed the moon to be over in the next lot or way up in the sky? What matters his one-time delusions, illusions or conclusions, even if they did not jibe with yours?

Right vs. Wrong "Opinions."

IT was amusing to read the communication from B. B. Dame of Belleville, Ill., wherein he announces his "disgust" with your editorial views and "your position held in regard to questions where right and wrong are at stake." He therefore acknowledges your newspaper standard of fair play and free speech by registering his kick in your People's Column. He was doubtless pleased when you generously published his "opinion" about your "opinions."

That's the kind of newspaper policy which demonstrates the "bigness" of the minds of those who conduct your paper. In considering editorial opinions, and likewise those of individuals, who shall arbitrarily decide what is right thinking? Some foolish people believe our language and thoughts should be standardized to fit some particular fad, myth or superstition which is peculiarly considered "too old," "too firmly established" or "too good" to bear inspection, comparison and free discussion. There could be no progress in the world if everyone was either of "one mind" or was satisfied to be "mumbled" by those who do not comprehend what the human mind was created for.

Dixon, Mo. E. T. GRETHER.

OFFICIAL LAWLESSNESS—AN EPIDEMIC.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars held a convention at Tulsa, Ok., last month, and while there the police raided the Mayo Hotel, where many of the soldiers were guests. The Tulsa papers bitterly condemned this action as an outrageous demonstration of official lawlessness, official indecency and official stupidity.

Indignation has not yet died down. A few days ago, James Hepburn, an Oklahoma District Judge, in an address to the Kiwanis Club of Okmulgee, not only denounced the Tulsa affair, but, in effect, counseled citizens forcibly to resist such lawless invasion of their personal and constitutional rights.

Judge Hepburn's words have especial significance for two reasons: First, as a District Judge, he knows the law. Second, he is an ardent prohibitionist, as he reminded his audience, who has always voted for prohibition and who believes it can be legally enforced. Here is what he said:

> They (the police) searched these rooms. Men were registered there. They searched the room of the National Commander and his wife. Our Constitution says a man's home shall not be searched except under due process of law, no matter how much suspicion may attach to him. Unless an officer comes to my home with a search warrant properly made out and if he tried to invade my house, I have a right to shoot him down in the doorway, and when I am tried for murder and such a state of facts is established in the court, the trial Judge must write an order releasing me.

The warrants in this case, Judge Hepburn said, were not properly made out. A search and seizure warrant, he explained, must "particularly describe the place to be searched and the property to be seized." That is impossible, of course, in a raid of this character. It is impossible in most of the raids conducted for the purpose of discovering violation of the prohibition law. The Tulsa raid was peculiarly offensive in that it violated the elemental rules of hospitality. It was an instance of official boorishness, as well as official lawlessness, that added inexcusable insult to illegal injury.

But, apart from that miserable phase of it, the Tulsa affair was typical of what is happening everywhere in the United States. Everywhere police are invading homes with defective warrants, often with no warrants at all, and everywhere the people and press are protesting against this tyrannical and lawless abuse of power.

We find the Washington Post, for example, instructing prohibition agencies that a warrant must say whether a search is to be made in "day time" or "night time" or "any time," and entering this typical complaint:

> Undue zeal to enforce this particular law has resulted in the invasion of the rights of the citizen and subjected him to hardships that could be avoided if prohibition officers went about their duties according to the letter of the law and in harmony with its intent.

After six years of experience in the administration and enforcement of the prohibition act, concludes the Post, "the courts have come to realize that in very many cases prosecution has been perverted into persecution."

In Indianapolis police tyranny has reached the dimensions of terrorism. "If proof were needed that the homes of innocent individuals are being violated by overzealous booze raiders," says the Indianapolis Times, "it is contained in the statement of the Justice of the Peace who said, in connection with an investigation of an unwarranted booze raid: 'I have issued thousands of such warrants.'"

And the contagion is spreading. A few weeks ago the Collector of Internal Revenue at Nashville, Tenn., refused to register under the Harrison narcotic act 25 physicians who were under indictment for violations of that act. This zealous official was later overruled by the Federal District Court, but only after the physicians had undergone the trouble, expense and undesirable publicity incident to court proceedings and for which, as the Journal of the American Medical Association observes, "they have no redress."

Those are appalling facts. They record a condition that cannot go on. They challenge the serious consideration of all thoughtful citizens. They peremptorily challenge the attention of all public officials. In some way this reign of official lawlessness must be stopped. The sensible way is obvious. The heads of Police Departments and the agents specially appointed to enforce prohibition must not persist in trampling down our constitutional guarantees in order to enforce prohibition.

Our officials must observe all laws. If prohibition can only be enforced at the cost of our present official lawlessness, then the prohibition law must either be repealed or so amended as to be lawfully enforceable.

ONE MAN'S ARMY LIFE.

It was given to few men to share the active service of our army in the Civil War and World War, too. Col. Ezra M. Fuller, who died at Leavenworth recently, held that distinction, plus the record of the longest service ever attained by any army officer. He saw the closing campaign of the war of sections, and was in uniform when the armistice silenced the guns along the western front in November, 1918.

Between those two historic dates Col. Fuller played his part in many campaigns that marked the winning of the Western wilderness. He was contemporary with Sherman, Sheridan, Custer, Reno, Forsythe, Scott and others whose cavalry guidons blazed the trail for pioneers across half a continent. He saw the buffalo vanish from the prairies and hostile Sioux, Cheyennes, Arapahoes, Apaches and Comanches turn to the paths of peace.

Promotion inevitably was slow in that little regular army that fought our "savage wars of peace." The Spanish War passed and the retirement age came, and he who had done his duty well so long had but reached the rank of Colonel. He was an old man when the World War came, but neither age nor rank deterred him. He was restored to the active list and, with his thorough knowledge of military detail, did what an old man could in shaping his nation's strength for the struggle.

Now he is gone, nor widely remembered outside the army, nor even there, save with those who served at Fort Leavenworth. Yet his was a large share in the traditions of the army, and those who were privileged to know him, will think only that an officer and a gentleman has passed on unafraid, as a soldier should.

MELLON, STATESMAN AND MONOPOLIST.

There are two Andrew W. Mellons. One is Secretary of the Treasury, a notably able officer of the Government. The other is the aluminum king of America.

Against the latter a serious charge is made. The Federal Trade Commission, a body controlled by loyal standpat Republicans, finds it necessary to bring a formal complaint against the Aluminum Co. of America, owned largely by Secretary Mellon and his brother, R. B. Mellon of Pittsburg.

The burden of the complaint is that the Aluminum Co. of America controls the world supply of the raw material used in making aluminum, and also the sale of products manufactured from aluminum, with the result that a harmful monopoly has been created.

The scope of the Mellon aluminum interests as disclosed by the complaint is staggering. The Aluminum Co. of America owns bauxite deposits, from which come aluminum ore, in Saline County, Ark., in British and Dutch Guiana, in France and in Jugo-Slavia. Nor is this the extent of the far-flung grasp of the Mellon trust. It reaches into Norway, where it owns 50 per cent of the stock of the Norske Aluminum Co., and a one-third interest in the Norske Co. of Norway. It is the sole owner of the Northern Aluminum Co. of Canada, which is the only other manufacturer of virgin aluminum ingots in North America.

In this country, the Aluminum company since 1923 has produced more than 95 per cent of the virgin sheet aluminum, its chief competitor producing not more than 1 per cent at higher prices for spot delivery. The Aluminum company owns 36 per cent of the stock of the largest manufacturer of aluminum cooking utensils, 100 per cent of the stock of the second largest manufacturer of cooking utensils, 75 per cent of the stock of the company manufacturing aluminum automobile bodies, and the majority interest in other companies which manufacture aluminum products.

The Federal Trade Commission's complaint substantiates charges made by the New York World a year ago, at which time Secretary Mellon said that "no monopoly in the aluminum industry exists." After reviewing the facts set out in the complaint, it would be interesting to know what is Mr. Mellon's conception of a monopoly.

As one of the highest administrative officers of the land, on the one hand, and as the guiding genius of a great trust on the other, Mr. Mellon occupies an incompatible position. No one can visualize John D. Rockefeller as a member of the Cabinet, yet the Standard Oil trust was not so complete, if the commission's charges are true, as is the monopoly of the Aluminum Co. of America.

While the economy of great corporations has come to be accepted by the public, the facts alleged against the Aluminum company not only make its continued existence unlawful, but also show it to be one of those supercorporations which cannot but result in wrong practices and public evil.

Which of the two Andrew W. Mellons—the statesman or the monopolist—will survive?

REVIVING POLITICAL SANITY.

The reports of the Research and Educational Departments of the Federal Council of Churches on the failure of prohibition seem clearly to presage, if not the end of that national policy, at least a radical modification; for it is in the Protestant clergy of the United States that prohibition had its origin and has had its main support as a scheme for the moral regeneration of the people by law.

It is hopeful to find the clergy publicly acknowledging their doubts; it would be even more encouraging if they would publicly confess the tragic error of having brought the churches of the United States into politics, but that is perhaps too much to be expected.

Such a return to political sanity as now seems probable will by no means repair the damage that this venture in repressive and coercive law has done to our free institutions, but in its aspect as a new and horrible example of permitting the churches as such to compel legislation it may serve to save us from progressive miseries which inevitably follow upon the junction of religious and political power.

"Coolidge Still Wears Straw Hat." This is the final straw which broke the haberdasher's back.

WONDER IF ADAM HAD 'EM.

It seems a pity that Mark Twain is not here to express his reactions to the important news item from London that an ancient manuscript, just discovered, asserts that Adam, well-known husband of Eve, died of "gowte." Everybody recalls how copiously Mark wept at the grave of Adam when on his celebrated trip with the other innocents abroad. The illustrious Missourian wept merely because Adam was dead; he probably hadn't the least idea of what Adam died. There is a strong likelihood that if Mark had known then that Eve's Eden partner perished of the gout he would have wept even more copiously, for he must have known, through hearsay if not observation or experience, that gout is a most painful malady.

Yet, like other forms of so-called rheumatism, gout seldom or never kills; it simply hangs on and harrows the victim. Mark Twain was a stickler for truth—his old first sweetheart, still living, insists that truthfulness was his chief characteristic from boyhood. Were he alive to read the cablegram from London, the likelihood is that he would dispute the cause of Adam's death.

Strickland Gillilan, the off ag'in, on ag'in, gone ag'in, Finnegan man, once wrote about Adam what he insisted was the shortest poem ever penned. It runs, complete:

Adam
Had 'em.

An unbugled bard who at present is a member of the Post-Dispatch editorial staff wrote a reply to the Gillilan masterpiece and claimed the short-poem championship:

Oh
No!

The question seemed to be, Did Adam have 'em, or did he not? Mr. Gillilan, we understand, had the notion that Adam perished of measles, and his poetic license permitted him to pluralize the name of the fatal ailment. Now if it be proved that Adam was a victim of the gout, these two famous poems must perish from American literature. We devoutly wish Mark Twain were here to turn the lantern of his wisdom upon this serious problem.

GROWTH.

We have a passion for growth.
If the city isn't building up so fast that the streets are cluttered with brick, lumber and sand, we think it is dead.
Go out on one of the new hard roads.
It is a sight.
Houses, shacks, sheds—they spring up like mushrooms.
Alas! for the country.
The picture of black and white Holstein cattle grazing upon a green field!
The sumach burning along a creek!
There is no more country, or soon will be none.
It is all a suburban region.
Graders are dragging the hills into the hollows.
Trees are uprooted.
The one-time pleasing face of the earth is being reshaped.
It will shortly be one vast cabbage patch all around the city.

Yet we are glad to see it.
It means that the city is growing.
As long as the city is growing it cannot much matter what else happens it.
If it is big, it can be what it likes.
It can look like another prairie dog town, who cares?

Only one man we know anything about.
He has been writing about it lately in the Independent.
His home is up in Vermont.
He says: "I like to contemplate Vermont, whose population is actually decreasing.
"We should be glad to advertise our smallness; to put up signs reading, 'Watch Vermont Dwindle.'
"Certainly for those of us who prefer elbow room to rubbing elbows, mere increase in population is not a cheering thing."

Our idea precisely.
Arthur Whizzbrain says Florida will within 20 years have a population of 25,000,000.
Imagine it.
They will be so thick they will have to stand on one foot to make room for everybody.
Yet they tell us Florida is the coming Heaven on earth.

Some day, when we have tired of the fever of growth, some of us will cast back to the little towns which produced us.
We will find in them at least that quiet in which we wish to die.
No more payroll robberies.
No more police raids.
No more tooting horns and clanging bells.
No more subdivisions.
Only peace and the beauty of the earth as it was before we began to make an anthill of it.
Meanwhile let us join the sentiment of the man from Vermont and make this our motto:
"Watch our birthplace dwindle."

There is a man in New Hampshire whose daily practice it is to dive over a cliff and 112 feet into a river. When the river is frozen he has his bath prepared by a man with an ax, who cuts a hole in the ice. Some of the nuts are hard to crack.

Reginald Vanderbilt left his family $12,000,000. That ought to nail the wolf's skin to the door.

Clark McAdams, editor of the Just-a-Minute department of the Post-Dispatch, is to teach journalism in Washington University. This will mean more than mere instruction to boys and girls who are in his classes, for McAdams is a poet, authority on art and exponent of those things which make for real culture, as well as a journalist of national reputation. Like Walter Williams of the University of Missouri, he will impart to his pupils ideals and ambitions that will tend toward professional standard and achievements of the finer sorts. Fortunately for the public, McAdams will continue his work on the Post-Dispatch, giving expression to the philosophy developed by Socrates and His Pupils, the conclusions of Mr. Antwine, and his own reflections on everything else, from cookery and politics to theology, literature and high finance. Congratulations to Washington University in particular and to the cause of journalism in general!—Jack Blanton in Monroe County (Mo.) Appeal.

Thanks, Jack. That is a hard mark to shoot at, but here goes!

"WHY WORRY."

A visitor fell off a boat in Tampa Bay and 18 real estate agents dived in to save him.

Let us hope that this poor fish could swim like a real one, and that the real estate agents—well, let's just hope that all the swimming lessons they ever had were of the correspondence-school variety, and that 324 more of the same kidney jumped overboard to save the first batch. What a relief to the others on board that would have been! Is it not more likely, however, that the visitor really dived from the boat himself to escape the "real estaters," preferring the sharks in the water to those on the boat? If there are no man-eating sharks in Tampa Bay, let Plinthourgos or someone else equally erudite say so, and the last remark will be promptly withdrawn.

CAPRICE.

A golden rose smiles happily
Beside my window sill.
Yet I can see a northern pine
Alone, atop a hill.

The yellow rose flirts with me
Swaying two and fro.
Is that dark shape my Norway pine,
Weighted down with snow?

My rose trees grow along the shore
Of an old, inland lagoon;
And the pine still sings atop the hill
Its everlasting croon.

While some folk love the pine trees tall
And some the aspen gay;
Yet I will take the saffron rose
And wear it all the day.

FEDERAL CONTROL OF EDUCATION

From the Chicago Daily News.

AGAIN advocates of federalized education for all the boys and girls in the United States have started on their familiar program. In many congresses the past bills for a Federal department of education have bloomed and died. Now another bill has made its appearance and is ready to be introduced in Congress in December.

In this bill there is the usual provision for a Federal secretary of education. Federal subsidies for all the public schools in the various states of the United States with a sort of partition of the expenses of education between local authorities and Federal authority.

Who is so blind that he cannot foresee the outcome of such an arrangement? The present Federal subsidies for the building of good roads are always conditioned upon agreement by the local authorities to the specifications of the road builders of the Department of Agriculture. The Federal Government hands out its money for the price. The price is submission to Federal ideas as expressed by the administrative departments and by Congress.

Begin a system of Federal subsidies for schools and what will be the next step? Congress will pass laws providing that Federal subsidies to schools shall be given only to those which do not teach certain things or which do teach certain other things.

One can readily imagine a Federal law providing that no Federal subsidy shall go to schools which teach the theory of evolution or which teach "internationalism" or which teach any other idea objectionable to a majority of Senators and Representatives.

What will follow? A Federal bureau ordinarily becomes more important to the average local educational authorities than any known intellectual theory. In order to obtain Federal money, in order to increase their financial resources, in many instances they will submit themselves to the Federal dictatorship of thought.

Thus we shall have throughout the United States schools suborned in their most intimate intellectual and moral teachings by one central committee, by the little clique of political bureaucrats in the capital city of the nation.

The time to stop the federalization of the intellect of the United States is at the moment when a bill for a Federal department of education is brought forward in Congress. The ill results of such a measure would be almost impossible to prevent after it became a law. The bill must be killed in Congress by the force of popular opinion.

PROHIBITION REASONING

From the Ohio State Journal.

WE suppose Roy Haynes thinks the reason the price of grapes has advanced from $12 to $80 per ton since the enactment of the Volstead law is because people have learned how much better grape juice is for them than wine.

ERITY!"

113th Anniversary of Naming of Missouri

Many Historical Events in Political Development of the State Occurred Between Sept. 27 and Oct. 2.

"The Political Development of Missouri" is the subject of the article on "This Week in Missouri History" compiled by Floyd C. Shoemaker, secretary of the State Historical Society. The article follows:

"This week might well be called 'Political Week' in Missouri history. The anniversaries of many important events connected with the political development of the State fall within its span of seven days; so many, in fact, that it is difficult to select any one as more significant than the others.

One event which strikes the popular imagination particularly is the Centralia Massacre, which took place Sept. 27, 1864, just 61 years ago. All Central Missouri was aroused by the horrors of that famous Civil War engagement, in which 150 to 175 Union troops under Major Johnson were almost annihilated by Bill Anderson and his followers, the number of whom has been estimated at about 200.

But more important than incidents of war are the constructive political events, the anniversaries of which fall in this week. Among these are the first proclamation of a Missouri State Governor, the passage of Missouri's first State law, the first popular remonstrance made by the people of Missouri, the Treaty of San Ildefonso, the division of Louisiana into two territories, the initial operation of Missouri's new territorial government, the division of Missouri into five counties, the establishment of the permanent seat of government at Jefferson City, and the election of Missouri's first United States Senators.

Missouri Day Oct. 1.

So replete with anniversaries are the first few days of October, that Missouri Day was inaugurated in 1915, and observed on the first of October of that year. That incident, in itself, adds an interesting anniversary to the long list just enumerated.

It was on Sept. 28, 1820, 105 years ago, that Gov. Alexander McNair issued his first proclamation, declaring the election (in August, 1820) of John Scott as Missouri's first Congressman. Scott was also the last Missouri delegate to Congress before the organization of the State Government. It is a remarkable fact that party politics played no part in the election of our State's first officers. Each citizen voted for the men of his own choice, for there were no well-defined political parties in Missouri at that time. Besides serving as Missouri's Representative in Congress, Scott was also one of the framers of Missouri's first Constitution.

The same day that Scott was declared elected, the General Assembly met and passed Missouri's first law, which had to do with the election of United States Senators.

Then, on the 29th of September falls the 121st anniversary of the first popular remonstrance ever made by Missouri people. This remonstrance was the fruit of probably the first popular, representative gathering held west of the Mississippi. The occasion for this act, as Floyd C. Shoemaker shows in his "Missouri's Struggle for Statehood," was the act of Congress of March 26, 1804, which was to take effect on the 1st of October of that year, and which provided for the attachment of Upper Louisiana to the Indiana Territory. The fact that the act left no provision for self-government led to the dissatisfaction which was expressed by this "remonstrance and petition of the representatives elecier by the freemen of the districts in the District of Louisiana to Congress," as the document was called. Other considerations entered in, also, but the matter of self-government was, no doubt, foremost.

Louisiana Purchase Oct. 1.

Five events occurred on the 1st of October of 1800, 1804, 1812 and 1826, repectively. The first, the Treaty of San Ildefonso, was made between Spain and France, ceding the whole of Louisiana to the latter. Just what the political fate of Missouri would be today, had this treaty not been made, is a matter of speculation. Historians say, however, that political union with the United States would have been achieved anyhow; probably by the same course which led Texas into the Union.

The second event of Oct. 1 was the going into effect of the "Law of March 26," which has already been spoken of. Under this law Louisiana was divided into the Territory of New Orleans and the Territory of Louisiana. Missouri was included in the latter.

On Oct. 1, 1812, the third event took place. The new government of the Territory of Missouri was set in operation; and at the same time the name "Missouri" was first applied to the land. It had been used in connection with the river some 100 years earlier, but records show no evidence of the name being used to designate the land previous to this date.

On the same day, Missouri was divided into five counties. This division followed more or less closely the political division of the District of Missouri, which, it will be remembered, was in use at the time of the first popular remonstrance, in 1804. The first counties were: St. Charles, St. Louis, Ste. Genevieve, Cape Girardeau and New Madrid.

Permanent Capital in 1823.

On Oct. 1, 1826, the permanent seat of government was established at Jefferson City. The Capitol building, which had been begun in 1823, was completed and ready for occupancy. The State had had several temporary seats of government before this.

Oct. 2, 1820, although it is remembered for only one event, is hardly surpassed in importance by any single day in the State's history. It was on that date that Missouri's first United States Senators were elected. We have already noted that provision was made by the General Assembly, in its first law, for this election. David Barton, who was at that time very popular over the State, was easily elected as one of the Senators, but Thomas H. Benton, who later became Missouri's greatest Senator, had more opposition. The story is widely told of how Daniel Ralls, one of Benton's men in the Legislature, was on his deathbed at the time of the election and had to be carried into the legislative hall in his bed in order that he might cast his ballot for his friend. Benton was elected Senator, but Daniel Ralls did not live to share the enjoyment of his success. Ralls County was named in his honor.

GERMANS ARGUE ON EVOLUTION

Repudiation of Darwinism by Professor Starts Heated Debate.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 26.—The acerbities aroused by the celebrated Dayton (Tenn.) "evolution trial" appear to have been transferred to Germany, where a sharp debate on the Darwinian theory has been raging among scientists. The trouble started when Prof. Albert G. P. Fleischmann, professor of embryology at the University of Erlangen, Bavaria, and a noted writer on Darwinism, claimed recently in the Munich Neuestate Nachrichte, that the Darwinian theory of the origin of species has been contradicted by later researches of science, and that but few scientists still accept it.

This led 12 professors of paleontology and zoology in the University of Munich to issue a public statement, declaring that now, as formerly, they regard the formulation of the doctrine of the origin of species as among the highest achievements of their respective sciences. They expressed the opinion that this viewpoint is shared by almost all representatives of their branches of learning. The controversy promises to continue lustily, drawing an increasing number of debaters into its scope.

than those of any other Cabinet member. All of the clerical force of the State Department is under civil service, as are also the consular offices. There are but a handful of assistants in the whole office which are subject to appointive power.

Our Ambassadors and Ministers are largely chosen upon recommendation of the United States Senators. And yet, while during the six years and three months of my official life, I was practically powerless to reward those who had contributed to my success, I am sure that no one in this country—probably no one who ever lived—has had more friends, kept them for a longer period, or received from them greater loyalty or more constant support. I have reason to know that the masses are patriotic and incorruptible. They cannot be purchased, and they cannot be terrified. No matter how they may err or be led astray, the American people are sound at heart. They have solved successfully all the problems that confronted them during the momentous years of our nation's history, and there is not the slightest reason to doubt that they will meet every emergency, rise to every responsibility, and prove that their capacity for self-government is as undeniable as their right to self-government.

John J. Astor Improved.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Sept. 26.—John Jacob Astor, a patient at the American Hospital at Neuilly, suffering from typhoid fever, was reported greatly improved this morning. His mother, widow of Col. John Jacob Astor, who was drowned in the Titanic disaster, and now Mrs. William K. Dick, said the boy could be considered "convalescent."

origin and my husband's origin were used against us, but it ought to be looked upon as an additional guarantee of our sincerity that we are willing to give up advantages which were ours by luck because of our origin. (Oswald Mosley is son and heir of a Baronet.)

"I do not believe there is a soul in the room who is more absolutely sincere and earnest and convinced about the whole of Socialism than I am. I can't see there is any way out except Socialism. The present system is intolerable. It doesn't work at all. It has broken down. It has failed. With the destitution, poverty and misery that are around us, with a million men unemployed and millions more in dire need of the things that millions could make if they were given the jobs for which they begged, it is patent to everyone that there is something, work somewhere.

"It isn't just a phase. The machine is breaking down more hopelessly and falling into ruins more completely.

"I think we have a considerable task in front of us in view of the terrific odds against us—power, money and the press.

"I am out and out a Socialist and would like you to call me a Socialist candidate and not a Labor candidate. Other parties and other policies have had their chance, and today we see the state to which those parties have brought us. I want the Socialists to have a fair chance. The late Labor Government did not have a fair chance; when the Socialists come they will have a better one.

"I am sure they will, for this reason: That our beliefs and schemes are based on a much truer foundation than those of the other parties. We believe in thinking of other people and not only of ourselves. We believe in doing things for the good of all and not for the good of a lucky few top dogs.

"We believe in co-operation, not in competition; in love, not in hate; in peace, not in war."

DR. BROOKS TO BE GUEST

Dr. Stratton D. Brooks, president of the University of Missouri, and Dean J. P. McBaine of the law school of that institution, will attend a luncheon of the law school alumni at Hotel Statler next Saturday. Everything to Live Up to—Nothing to "Live Down"

By year after year refinement of piano merchandising methods which to begin with were fundamentally correct, Conroys have avoided the pitfalls that lie in the path of Beginners and those who sell pianos "on the side."

Conroy progress has been steady. The instruments sold today by Conroys are, as usual, the pick of an ancient profession. We seriously doubt if any competitor will question Conroy supremacy in the piano field.

Much of this happy history is due to the principle of perpetual refinements. A slow yet ever higher level of attainment. The ripe experience of almost fifty years rests squarely behind every instrument coming from Conroys.

Longworth and Hadley to Speak at Dinner of National Association.

The National Association of Manufacturers, an organization with 6000 members, will hold its annual convention in St. Louis, Oct. 26—28. It has not met outside of New York in the last 12 years.

A tentative list of speakers includes Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, who may find it necessary to substitute his chief assistant, Undersecretary Winston; Gov. Christenson of Minnesota; P. J. Dennis of the Federal Tariff Commission; William E. Humphrey of the Federal Trade Commission; Elisha Lee, vice president of the Pennsylvania Railroad; Paul Henderson, manager of the new $10,000,000 commercial aviation organization, Air Transport, Inc., and John E. Edgerton, president of the association.

Addresses at the annual dinner will be given by Speaker Nicholas Longworth of the National House of Representatives, and Chancellor Hadley of Washington University.

Chief topics of discussion for the meeting will be Federal and State taxation, rail and air transportation and a report of a questionnaire to 50,000 industries, designed to disclose the present trend of business and the outlook for the winter.

Harry Scullin of St. Louis, president of Scullin Steel Co., is regional vice president and director of the association.

Gain 5 Pounds in 30 Days or Pay No Money
It's no trick at all, as hundreds of people have learned in the past few months, to put on good, solid flesh with Dr. Gross' Cod Liver Oil Tablets. Super-cosine, they are so easy to take as candy, and they certainly do the business, building up and giving you new pep and energy. They're splendid for weak, puny children, too, giving them appetite and vigor. Dr. Gross' Tablets are sold under a positive guarantee—take 3 bottles and gain 5 pounds in 30 days, or get your money back. 93c

St. Louis' Dominant Store for STYLE Now Presents a Brilliant Spectacle—Offering Fashion's Most Beautiful and Advanced Versions of

Ultra Elegant Apparel in Extreme Variety

—Original Parisian Creations—Copies of Imported Models—and Garments From America's Leading Designers

¶ Frocks, Gowns, Coats and Wraps, so beautiful that you will know it took real inspiration to devise them. And this marvelous choice is yours, because our representative went direct to the world's leading designers for these beautiful garments. For every daytime and evening occasion there are models of entrancing loveliness—each one displaying something "truly advance" in feminine modes. Just to view these gorgeous assortments will delight—and to select from them will be a privilege indeed—one that we take great pride in according to devotees of Fashion.

Gowns for the V. P. Ball

—As Strikingly Distinctive or Daintily Demure as You Desire

¶ Upon what her mirror reveals "the night of the Ball' will depend much of Milady's enjoyment of that event. For this reason our assortments will be of high interest. Here are Gowns for every fancy—fashioned to capture the admiration of all who glimpse them. Color—richness of fabrics—novel silhouettes—simple and bizarre trimmings—all these play important roles in the new Gown modes, whether your interest centers in a creation direct from Paris, an adaptation of an imported model or a lovely Frock from an American designer.

Coats and Wraps

—For Any Daytime and Evening Costume

¶ Upon these elegant Coats and Wraps the style artists have lavished unusual care. Models from abroad and from America's foremost creators reveal the most authentic variances of the mode—so strikingly developed and so enriched with handsome furs that the daytime Coats seem vieing with the evening Wraps for Milady's preference.

Fur Coats are Truly Regal

—Being More Luxuriously Developed Than Ever Before

Here are superb Fur Coats—in superb assortments—and many that we show will be chosen for the "The Ball," elegant complements to the gowns they envelop. Many pelts enjoy favor this season, but predominating whims are unusual collar arrangements, flares, unique combinations of furs and the richest kinds of linings.

Chambers FIRELESS Gas Range

COOKS with the GAS TURNED OFF!

Special Demonstration All This Week — Cooking With Gas Turned Off!

¶ When you see the new Chambers' principle of cooking demonstrated, you will readily understand why so many women are selecting these remarkable Ranges. And whether you need a new Range or not, you should see this demonstration.

See for Yourself the Remarkable Achievements Demonstrated in These Tests

The patented Chambers Thermodome, installed in the beautiful white porcelain, enamel and black, and white enamel Chambers Ranges, makes possible new cooking efficiency and economy and results in—

Gas bills cut approximately in half—rich food and flavors retained—loss through shrinkage diminished, hours of work and worry saved daily.

Included With Each Chambers Range

—purchased this week will be any one of three excellent sets of high grade aluminumware cooking vessels. Purchase your Chambers Range now Ranges Delivered, If Desired, on Cash Payment of $5 With Five Months Time to Conveniently Pay the Balance.

In Monday's Test

—an entire meal, consisting of soup, meat, vegetables and dessert, will be cooked—using but 25 minutes of gas where an ordinary range would require 180 minutes for the same foods.

Besides witnessing this actual test of the Chambers' Thermodome principle, you will be interested in examining the remarkable features of these Ranges and the different styles that we show.

Rice Grown Near Peoria, Ill.

By the Associated Press.

PEORIA, Ill., Sept. 26.—A rice crop on a 200-acre tract of swamp land, near Lewistown, in Fulton County, appears to be successful in the first attempt to raise this plant this far north. It is said that this is 200 miles farther north than the crop has ever been raised before, and if successful offers a use for thousands of acres of Illinois River swamp lands. As a feature of a Kiwanis dinner at Lewistown last night, shocks of the rice were used for decorations.

RAIL EXECUTIVES WHO BEGAN AT THE BOTTOM

Six of Seven Men Referred to by Congressman Hawes in Address Are St. Louisans.

Congressman Hawes, in addressing students of the Missouri School of Mines at Rolla Friday, remarked that management of most Missouri railroads has been placed in the hands of men who came up from the ranks and who moved from the bottom of the ladder to the top after long years of serive and experience."

Looking up the careers of seven Missouri railroad presidents, the Congressman found the following facts:

"One president began his career as a chain man and later worked as a rod man on a railroad. Another president secured his first experience as a brakeman, fireman and train baggage man. Another president worked as a clerk in a local freight office and as a yard clerk in St. Louis. Another began his career as a telegraph operator. Still another started his railroad career as a boiler-maker's apprentice and later as a switchman. Another began in the capacity of a track laborer. Another, a lawyer of ability, first became connected with the railroads as local counsel in a small southwestern city."

Six of Seven St. Louisans.

Consultation of biographies shows that six of the seven men referred to by Congresman Hawes are St. Louisans.

L. W. Baldwin, president of the Missouri Pacific, began as a surveyor's chain man for the Illinois Central in 1896. Charles E. Schaff, head of the Missouri-Kansas-Texas, started as a brakeman for the old Pittsburg, Cincinnati & St. Louis in 1871. James E. Taussig, president of the Wabash, got his first job in 1882 as a freight clerk with the St. Louis Bridge & Tunnel railroad, connected with the Terminal Railroad.

James M. Kurn, the Frisco's chief executive, became a telegraph operator for the Michigan Central in 1885. Henry Miller, president of the Terminal Railroad, when he was 15 years old, in 1878, got his first job in the transportation world at Hannibal, Mo., his task was to crawl inside boilers and hold rivets for a hammerer outside.

The last president in the Congressman's list is Daniel Upthegrove, who went to work for the Cotton Belt, of which he now is head, in 1897, as a lawyer in Justice of the Peace courts at Greenville, Tex. The next to last man in the order of chance in the list is William M. Corbett, president of the Kansas City Terminal Railway, whose career started in 1874, when he was hired as an Erie section hand.

Others Who Began at Bottom.

Heads of other important railroads operating in Missouri also began at the bottom or the ladder. Their starts were: William G. Bierd, Chicago & Alton, bridge gang laborer; James E. Gorman, Rock Island, clerk; W. B. Storey, Santa Fe, surveyor's ax man; H. E. Byram, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, trainsmen's call boy; Samuel M. Felton, Chicago & Great Western, rod man; Job A. Edson, Kansas City-Southern, telegraph operator. Hale Holden, president of the Burlington, began as its general attorney.

SEVENTH ANNIVERSARY OF MEUSE-ARGONNE ACTION

Hundreds of St. Louisans Took Part in Battle That Broke German Resistance.

Seven years ago today hundreds of young men from St. Louis were pressing through the war-torn fields of France in the great offensive that was the beginning of the end of the World War—the Meuse-Argonne action, which started Sept. 26, 1918.

Many of these young men were named in the casualty lists afterwards, some of them never to return except in flag-draped coffins. Two St. Louis units of the Thirty-fifth Division took part in this campaign, the 138th Infantry and the 128th Field Artillery. Both are perpetuated in units of the National Guard of Missouri.

The battle, which started seven years ago yesterday, was fierce, and the offensive continued for many days against stubborn German resistance. Eventually the famous Hindenburg line was broken.

LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS PLANS PICNIC

Reunion to Be Held at Tower Grove Park Thursday—Membership Drive On.

A reunion of the League of Women Voters of St. Louis will be held as a picnic in Tower Grove Park next Thursday, from 11 a. m. to 4 p. m. The Fourteenth Ward unit of the league will provide automobile service between the various car lines and the picnic grounds, near the band stand. Sandwiches will be sold there. "Stunts" will be staged by various ward units and there will be a prize for the ward with the largest representation present.

This event will mark the opening of a membership campaign of the league. Members have been organized in more than 50 groups, under captains, to obtain new members, with Mrs. Theodore Kelsey as chairman of the Campaign Committee.

"Salesmanship Talk."

Walter E. Weisenburger, a vice president of the National Bank of Commerce, addressed the captains Thursday at league headquarters, 3622 Olive street, on "Salesmanship." The leaders were told that what they had to sell was education for citizenship, for which no apology was needed.

Women, he said, are criticised for not having made the most of their franchise, and the greatest responsibility now rests with them to make an improvement on what men have done with the vote. Women are best fitted, he said, for removing the political tinge from the schools, and they are more willing than men to work for posterity. The younger generation must be educated to realize its civic responsibilities and international peace must be brought to the world, the speaker continued, and work toward those ends is the province of the league.

Rummage Sale Planned.

The league is planning an autumn rummage sale for Oct. 12, 13 and 14. Members are asked to start the stocks by bringing rummage to next Thursday's picnic.

Mrs. Elias Michael, member of the Board of Education, spoke about the schools at a meeting of the Twenty-fourth Ward unit of the league at the home of Mrs. P. J. McKinney, 7103 Dale avenue, Friday; Mrs. George Gellhorn spoke about the membership campaign, and Mrs. F. W. Arnold discussed the World Court.

FAVORS TRAFFIC PRIVILEGES FOR PHYSICIANS ON CALLS

Dr. Fred W. Bailey, President of St. Louis Medical Society, Gives Views.

Physicians driving automobiles on sick calls should be privileged to violate the speed laws to a "reasonable degree" and to park where necessary, if such can be done without danger to the public, Dr. Fred W. Bailey, president of the St. Louis Medical Society, states in a letter published in the current issue of the society's bulletin.

The letter is addressed to Dr. E. J. Goodwin, secretary of the State Medical Association, who solicited Dr. Bailey's opinion. The American Medical Association is gathering views from physicians all over the country for submission to the National Conference on Street and Highway Safety.

Listening In

If you could listen in on merchandise discussions between our department executives these are the remarks you would most frequently hear:

What did it cost?

What can we sell it for?

Can't we mark it a little lower?

And it is such regard for the public interest that makes good department store executives, because by serving the public interest they are promoting ours.

Vandervoort's New- FURNITURE DEPARTMENT is Ready.

FOR many weeks, our carpenters, electricians and decorators have been at work, carrying out our well laid plans to make this floor an appropriate setting for Furniture of Vandervoort Quality.

Many improvements have been made that add largely to the interest this floor holds for prospective homemakers.

New lighting equipment has been installed making the floor as bright as day and as cheerful as your own living room.

New Dining-Room Suites follow Fashion's lead in colorful effects. Woods of amber tone show decorative panels of fruits and flowers. The Suite illustrated, $1275

Our English paneled room has been entirely rearranged to show new furnishings for the living room.

New Floor Arrangement

The convenience of the purchaser was our first consideration in planning the enlarged space we have devoted to Furniture display. Here you can shop in comfort, feeling under no necessity to buy until assured that your selection will fit perfectly its intended setting.

New Children's Department

Special Furniture for the little folk, made to the proper scale and painted, to meet the requirements of the modern nursery. Complete suites are shown, but the pieces may be bought singly. Small tables, chairs and rockers and practical folding screens complete the most elaborate outfit. All are gaily decorated with the familiar animals and figures important in childhood's lore.

New Bedding Department

The new Bedding Section is a revelation—providing a complete assemblage of items most essential to home comfort. Springs, mattresses and pillows may be selected from samples, while the customer is comfortably seated at a counter, just as you would purchase other goods. And the actual beds, attractively made up, are shown as they would appear in your home.

Many Attractive Values Throughout the Department Make Shopping Profitable This Week

Lift Off—No Pain!

Doesn't hurt one bit! Drop a little "Freezone" on an aching corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then shortly you lift it right off with fingers.

Your druggist sells a tiny bottle of "Freezone" for a few cents, sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the foot calluses, without soreness or irritation.

70 PERSONS AT REUNION OF SAPPINGTON DESCENDANTS

Revolutionary War Soldier and Pioneer Missourian Was Founder of Line.

Descendants of John Sappington, a soldier of the Revolutionary War and pioneer Missourian, who is buried in a cemetery at Watson road and Gravois Creek, St. Louis County, held a reunion in Forest Park last Sunday, attended by 70 persons.

An association of the descendants has been formed, which collects dues to maintain the cemetery in which, it is said, are buried also another veteran of the Revolutionary War, four veterans of the War of 1812, three of the Mexican War and one Confederate soldier. Plans for a memorial service next year, in which these graves will be marked, are under discussion.

Mrs. Jonah Sappington, 86 years old, was the oldest person at the reunion and Mary Alice Wells, 15 months old, the youngest. Four generations were representated.

John Sappington was born in Maryland in 1750 and moved to what is now St. Louis County in 1803. He had 17 children, whose descendants are numerous. His grave is in a plot of his former farm. The town of Sappington and the Sappington Barracks road, in the vicinity, perpetuate his name.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

SOCIETY NEWS SECTION

PART FOUR. ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, SEPTEMBER 27, 1925. PAGES 1—16.

MAIDS WHO WILL ATTEND HIS MAJESTY AT THE BALL OF THE VEILED PROPHET

MISS JULIET LEE CARPENTER, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Edward Carpenter of Philadelphia, who will make her debut under the chaperonage of Mrs. Henry Turner.

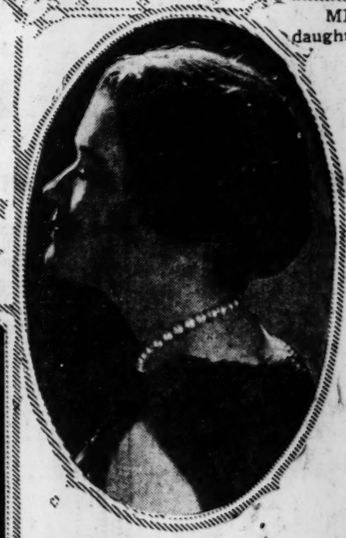
MISS JANET WALLACE, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mahlon Brookings Wallace.

MISS MAUD MILLER STREETT, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Clark Streett.

MISS DOROTHY FOX, niece of Mr. and Mrs. Emmett V. Thompson.

MISS FLAVIA VON BRECHT, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank von Brecht of Forest Ridge.

MISS MARY PURCELL, niece of Mr. and Mrs. George Wilson of Lindell boulevard.



MISS DORCAS CARR TAYLOR, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Lackland Taylor.

MISS BEATRICE KROEGER, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest R. Kroeger.

Innovations for the Veiled Prophet Ball

Ceremony of Entrance for the Reigning Queen, the Queen-to-Be and Special Maids of Honor Made More Elaborate.

EACH Veiled Prophet ball has some distinguishing feature to mark it from its predecessors. This year the chief innovation will be a change in the mode of entrance for Miss Mary Virginia Collins, the reigning Queen, the Queen-to-be, and her special maids, none of whom, of course, enter with the remainder of the Court of Honor.

A raised platform, several steps above the main floor, will be constructed at the north end of the Coliseum with a heavy velours drapery and splendid carpet as its furnishings. Each of the six young women will prepare for entrance behind the curtain, one at a time, in the usual order of their appearance, and at the proper moment the drapery will be drawn aside and they will step forth to be met at the top by members of the Reception Committee, who are to be their escort in their progress across the floor to the throne. Each one, with her escort, will descend the three steps and pass through the usual ceremony of entrance, curtseying to the members of the Court of Honor, and finally kneeling at the foot of the throne, the maids to receive the coronet and the Queen her crown from the Veiled Prophet. This procedure will add some elaboration and considerable dignity to the already beautiful ceremony, and will increase greatly the general interest in the formal entrance of the young women.

Another innovation will be the selection of about 20 girls from among those in the Court to form in a group at the opposite ends of an aisle in front of the first row of maids and persons of honor on the royal dais, to round out the picture formed by the special maids of honor and the courtiers who form the group immediately surrounding the Prophet and his consort. The manner of selection of these girls will be according to the color of their gowns so that a harmonious scheme will be performed throughout. The appointments of the royal dais will be more magnificent than ever before, and a veritable riot of color will greet the eyes of the guests.

In addition to the St. Louis young women who will serve as maids, two from out-of-town, Miss Juliet Lee Carpenter and Miss Dorothy Fox, have come to St. Louis for the ball and to make their formal bows to society.

Miss Carpenter, the daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Edward Carpenter of Philadelphia and Princess Monroe, Va., will be the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Henry Turner. The young debutante is a granddaughter of William H. Vanderventer of Vanderventer place. Her mother was, before her marriage, Miss Janet Lee, a belle of her girlhood.

Miss Fox will make her debut under the chaperonage of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Emmett V. Thompson of the Hanley road, with whom she has made her home

French Commission Feted at Capital

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Functions for the French debt mission headed by M. Caillaux, former Premier of France, occupied the social limelight of the week. They were received at the White House. Members of the commission, which includes the Ambassador of France, M. Daeschner, were entertained at luncheon by the Secretary of State and Mrs. Frank B. Kellogg.

Every hour of the four days of their stay in Washington not given over either to the business which brought them here or rest was filled to the brim with a round of entertainments, everybody being eager to welcome and shower hospitality upon them. On Thursday night the President entertained at a stag dinner for the mission. The only guests outside the members of the mission were Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg, the Secretary of the Treasury, and the Secretary of the French Embassy. On Friday night the members of the mission were the guests of honor at a dinner given by the Ambassador of France and Madame Deschner.

President and Mrs. Coolidge are entertaining several guests at the White House. One of them is Attorney-General John B. Sargent, one of the President's oldest friends, who will remain there until Mrs. Sargent arrives from Vermont and selects a house here. The other guests are Mr. and Mrs. Alton Roberts of Marquette, Mich. Another well-known visitor who has been greatly feted is the former President of Cuba, M. Alfredo Zayas.

The Director-General of the Pan-American Union, Dr. L. S. Rowe, gave a luncheon in his honor on Tuesday, to which many of the Latin-American diplomats were invited.

A brilliant dinner was given on Friday at Boundary Castle by Mrs. John B. Henderson. Her guests included the Ambassador of Argentina and Madame Pueyrredon; the Minister from Egypt and Madame Samy; the Attache of the Italian Embassy, Signor Luciano Mascia, and Madame Mascia; Madame Charoui, Mlle. Nabarawi, Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Mondell, Mrs. George T. Marye, Major and Mrs. George Oakley Totten, Mr. Assarsson, counselor of the Swedish Legation, and Miss Beatrice Henderson.

Miss Mary Pershing, who is occupying the apartment of her brother, Gen. John J. Pershing, at 2029 Connecticut avenue, now with her young nephew, Warren Pershing, son of the General, entertained informally at luncheon there on Wednesday.

Dates Announced for Coming Out Parties

A NUMBER of the prospective debutantes are making plans for their coming out parties and announcing the dates. One of the first of these functions is a tea to be given Oct. 16 by Mrs. Martin Lammert of 4490 Lindell boulevard, to introduce her daughter, Miss Mary Elise. Miss Mary Frances Fisk, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Fisk, will share honors. On Oct. 27, Miss Marion Stoner will be presented at a similar party to be given at the St. Louis Country Club by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Stoner.

The following evening Miss Susan Elizabeth Hawes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard S. Hawes, will make her bow at a party at their home, 4943 Maryland avenue. Mrs. Rolla Wells has chosen Tuesday, Nov. 10, as the date on which she will present her daughter, Miss Louise Church, to society. This affair also will be given at the St. Louis Country Club.

Reception for Red Cross Delegates

A conspicuous event of the early season will be a reception honoring more than a thousand delegates to the American Red Cross convention which is to be held in St. Louis Oct. 12 to 15. The affair is scheduled for the afternoon of Monday, Oct. 15 from 5 to 6 o'clock in the ballroom of Hotel Statler and will elicit the assistance of many prominent St. Louis members of the organization.

Mrs. Frank V. Hammar, general chairman of arrangements, has organized a reception committee which includes both men and women interested in social and civic activities. Assisting her as hostesses at the opening reception and other events to be given that week will be Mmes. Daniel K. Catlin, George Warren Brown, Peyton T. Carr, John T. Davis Jr., John H. "Summer Tourist Season," for First Time Since the War, Promises to Run Well Into October—Principal Hotels Full.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, France.—For the first time since the war the "summer tourist season" in France promises to run well into October. Ordinarily, the bulk of American visitors have returned home between Sept. 15 and 25, but this year the principal hotels of Paris will continue their plaint of "no rooms available" until Oct. 15 at least.

Shipping companies, after a preliminary study of bookings for December and January, are predicting that the winter season for tourists will maintain the 30 per cent increase registered during the summer, as compared with tourist arrivals during the same months of 1924.

Randolph Laughlin of St. Louis, Mrs. Laughlin and their son have been visiting at Loughborough, England, the former home of Mrs. Laughlin. They have sent home for their new residence in St. Louis seven oak beams 200 years old taken from an ancient property now being demolished in Loughborough.

Miss Louise Simpkins of St. Louis has arrived in Northern Italy from Rome and Naples and is stopping for a few days in Florence.

M. and Mme. Pierre Cartier of New York, the latter formerly Miss Marion Rumsey of St. Louis, have returned to Paris for a short visit after passing a month in St. Jean-de-Luz, France, and San Sebastian, Spain, and have their usual apartment at the Hotel Majestic until sailing for America this week. They are accompanied by their little daughter, Mlle. Marion Cartier.

Miss Jane Carter Burns, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Burns of St. Louis, has arrived in Paris for a visit that will last until the first of October. She is stopping at 4 rue de Berri.

In a party noted at Ciro's recently were Mr. and Mrs. Edward Faust, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Greenough of St. Louis and Mr. and Mrs. E. Clifton Tower. Mrs. Greenough, who is making her annual visit to Paris, is stopping at the Hotel Edouard VII, while her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Faust, are stopping at the Hotel de Crillon. Mrs. Greenough and Mrs. Faust are daughters of the late Adolphus Busch of St. Louis.

Benjamin H. Conner, a former Kentuckian who is president of the American Chamber of Commerce of France, gave a stag luncheon party recently in the private salons

Mrs. Charles G. Dawes, wife of the Vice President, has accepted her first social honor in that position in acting as honorary vice chairman of the Committee of Entertainment for the Interparliamentary Union, of which Mrs. John Allan Dougherty is chairman. Associated with Mrs. Dawes on the committee are such notable women as Madame Riano, doyenne of the diplomatic corps, Mrs. John B. Henderson, and many diplomatic social leaders as well as Senators' wives.

The Vice President and Mrs. Dawes will arrive in Washington about the middle of October. They will be accompanied by the two adopted children of the couple, Virginia and Rufus C. Dawes, who will be placed in private schools here. The Vice President has not decided definitely upon a Washington house as yet and he may occupy the same suite in the New Willard which was occupied by President Coolidge as Vice President.

Breckinridge Long and Mrs. Long, who have opened their beautiful home, entertained at tea Friday for members of French Debt Commission and other friends. They will give several dinners during the visit here of the delegates to the Interparliamentary Union.

All Washington society is awaiting the formal announcement from the White House of the dates of the State dinners and receptions. Then the rest of the season's program can be shaped.

Word was received in Washington this week of the birth of a second son to Mr. and Mrs. Robert R. Dickey Jr., the latter being the daughter of Major-General and Mrs. George Barnett. Mrs. Barnett will go to Europe shortly to see her infant grandson.

Mrs. Lee Benoist of St. Louis and Washington entertained at luncheon at the Mayflower on Wednesday in honor of Mrs. C. C. Calhoun, founder of the Mothers' Memorial of which Mrs. Benoist is one of the Executive Committee. Miss Nancy Benoist, debutante daughter of Mrs. Benoist, has gone to Bryn Mawr to resume her studies there. She only consented to make her debut, it is understood, on the condition, that she might complete her collegiate course.

Mrs. Leigh Palmer, wife of Rear Admiral Palmer, chairman of the United States Shipping Board, who went to New York to meet her son and daughter, Mr. James McKeldin and Miss Bessie McKeldin, returned with them on Friday. After a brief stay in Washington the trio will go visit Rear Admiral Palmer's relatives there.

since her graduation at Miss Bennett's School in Millbrook, N. Y., a year ago. Another out-of-town girl who has been invited to serve the new Queen as maid of honor, is Miss Lenore Scullin, daughter of Mrs. Lee Petit Warren of Washington, D. C., and a granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Festus J. Wade. Her acceptance, however, has not been received as yet.

An attractive group of debutantes, larger in number than any of the past few years, has made the mooted question of the new Queens' identity more interesting than usual. A complete list of the maids of honor, from whom she has been chosen, together with the official list of matrons, will be published in next Sunday's society section of the Post-Dispatch.

of the Restaurant Larue in Paris for several prominent Americans who are in Paris "en passant." His guests of honor were Col. Hartfield of New York, a former Kentuckian, and Gen. Heppenheimer of New York. There were 14 at the table, among them Judge Virgil Rule of St. Louis.

There is no slackening in the entertaining of visitors at Interlaken, Switzerland, and each train brings additional arrivals. Stopping at the Victoria Hotel from Missouri are Archer O'Reilly and family, and Miss Mary A. Evans of St. Louis.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Troll and Miss Paula Troll of St. Louis have been passing several days at the Hotel Rose in Wiesbaden, Germany.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wiegand of St. Louis, who have been spending some time on the Continent this summer, have returned to Paris.

Following a visit to Paris, John A. Haskell, his daughter, Miss Lucy Haskell, and his son, Norman Haskell, of St. Louis, have gone to Switzerland, where they are stopping at the Hotel Regina in Geneva.

David Leahy of St. Louis has been stopping at the Hotel Central while visiting in Berlin.

Raymond Scott and daughter, Miss May Scott, of St. Louis, have returned to Paris from a trip to Southern and Central France and are at the Hotel Regina. They will be in Europe until the latter part of September.

Ralph Hudson and Richard Weil of St. Louis were recent guests of the Hotel Bristol in Vienna, Austria.

Mrs. R. N. Warmack of St. Louis is a visitor in Vienna, Austria.

CENT WEDDINGS AND ENGAGEMENTS ANNOUNCED

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LOUISIANA, Mo., Sept. 26.—A wedding of interest took place here this afternoon when Miss Mary Frances Buffum, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Buffum, was married to Gilson B. Gray Jr. of New York. The ceremony was performed at 4 o'clock this afternoon at the Buffum home by the Right Rev. F. F. Johnston, Bishop of the Episcopal diocese of Missouri, assisted by the Rev. David Colmbs, rector of Calvary Church, this city.

Miss Buffum was attended by Miss Rebecca Gray of New York as maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Carolyn Bailey and Miss Beatrice Thomas of St. Louis and Miss Elizabeth Abbott of Providence, R. I. Thenholm Marshall of New York was best man, and groomsmen were: John Sharpe of Shamsburg, Pa.; Sam Kauffman of Washington, D. C.; William R. Compton Jr. of St. Louis, and Charles Buffum Jr. of Louisiana.

Mr. Gray, in company with members of the wedding party except Miss Abbott, drove to Louisiana from St. Louis Friday afternoon. The wedding party was entertained at dinner Friday evening at the home of Dr. and Mrs. J. B. Unsell by Mrs. Unsell, Mrs. Paul and Mrs. C. Stark.

Other guests here for the wedding include: Col. G. V. Dahlgren, Mr. Leo Rassieur Jr., Mrs. Virgil Hale, Mrs. Morgan C. Day, Mrs. Walter Eule, Miss Jane Rule of St. Louis, Mr. and Mrs. George S. Parkener, Miss Anna Carkener, Stuart Carkener, Mrs. H. T. Mulford and Mrs. Frank Everts of Kansas City.

Miss Frances Hope Compton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William R. Compton of Kingsbury place, has chosen the young women who will attend her at her wedding to Peter Clarkson, Oct. 22. Miss Katherine Sipple will be maid of honor, and Misses Judith Dana, Kate Clarkson, Josephine Garesche, Josephine Moffitt, Marion Harris of Cleveland, and Mrs. Randolph Compton of New York, and Miss Donald Danforth, bridesmaids. The ceremony is to be performed at St. Peter's Episcopal church by the Rev. Arthur Powell of Baltimore, Md., an uncle of the bride. About 400 guests have been invited. Mr. Clarkson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Palmer Clarkson.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Eunice Hodgman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Hodgman of 30 Waterman avenue, and Raymond Crawford Rundlett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Rundlett of Worcester, Mass. The news came from Mrs. Andrews, New Brunswick, Can., where Mr. and Mrs. Hodgman and their daughter have been passing the summer at the Algonquin hotel.

Miss Hodgman was educated at Miss Ry Institute and Miss Porter's school at Farmington, Conn. She is the sister of Mrs. William M. B. Hodgman of Newton Center, Mass., who was Miss Betty Hodgman. Both young women are prominent socially here. Miss Hodgman made her debut about three years ago and in her debut year she became a member of the Junior League. Mr. Rundlett was graduated from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and during the late war he was in the navy.

Invitations have been received from Mr. and Mrs. Frank John Bonskowski for the marriage of their daughter, Miss Flournoy Bonskowski, and Frank Bernard Griesedieck, to take place Tuesday morning, Oct. 6, at 10 o'clock in St. Rose's Church. The prospective bride is a graduate of the Sacred Heart Convent at Maryville and Mr. Griesedieck of St. Louis Uni-

FUR-TRIMMED COATS

20 Years Ago

THE St. Louis World's Fair had just ended. Many thought the great Jefferson Hotel was too far removed from the business district.

THE business world was aflutter when Stix, Baer & Fuller announced that their new store would be built on the site of the Lindell Hotel. Men who weave destiny were bestirring themselves.

THE public paid but scant attention to the group of young men by the name of Kline who were opening a small store on Washington Avenue. This little store became the Mother of the group of Kline Establishments which today ranks among the foremost Apparel Organizations in the United States.

versity and Georgetown University in Washington, D. C.

The marriage of Miss Mildred Udell Michaels and Mortimer Blake Crossman of Berkley, Cal., was solemnized Tuesday evening at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Franklin Michaels, 5145 Maple avenue.

The bride's gown was of ivory bridal satin with yoke and graduated godets of duchess lace, which was worn by her grandmother and mother. A cascade of satin and lace, embellished with orange blossoms fell at the sides. The court train was of satin, lined with silver cloth and decorated with a satin bow and orange blossoms. Her veil was caught at the back in a coronet of duchess lace. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses and valley lilies.

Mrs. Edward Burr Orr, cousin of the bride, was matron of honor, and Miss Ethel Cox Johnston bridesmaid. They wore apricot chiffon over silk of the same shade with godets forming the fullness at the bottom. Priscilla Alden Hall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. Hall of Webster Groves, cousin of the bridegroom, was flower girl and wore a ruffled dress of white organdy, trimmed with French flowers. She carried a white basket filled with flowers. Alfred H. Crossman was best man for his brother and Harold Udell Michaels was groomsman.

The bride was graduated from Washington University in the class of 1924, and is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma fraternity. The bridegroom was graduated from Bowdoin College in the class of 1920. He is a member of Delta Upsilon fraternity. He and his bride will reside at 2234 Haste street, Berkeley.

RECENT WEDDINGS AND ENGAGEMENTS ANNOUNCED

evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Taylor Jr., 4856 Labadie avenue, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford G. Swaniand, whose marriage took place recently. The bride was formerly Miss Martha L. Lawlor, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Lawlor, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. August Swaniand, 2843 Russell avenue.

The couple were attended by Miss Edna Meyer and David Morrison. The bride wore a gown of blue flat crepe and a corsage of Cattleya roses. Miss Meyer wore light tan and carried butterfly roses. After a brief wedding trip in the West, Mr. and Mrs. Swaniand will make their home at 7455 Richmond place, Maplewood.

An early September wedding was that of Miss Edith Marie Schoenefeld and John S. Etherington, which took place the evening of Sept. 5 at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Mary R. Schoenefeld, 5447 Ridge avenue, with only relatives and close friends as guests. The Rev. James F. La Clede performed the ceremony. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Karl F. Schoenefeld, and was attended by Miss Grace Thompson as bridesmaid. Mr. Etherington's brother, Sylvester Etherington, was best man. Miss Lavina Gruner played the wedding music and Mrs. Robert Burger sang. The bride wore white satin and carried roses and lilies of the valley. Mr. Etherington is the son of Mrs. L. A. Etherington of Overland. They will be at home after Oct. 1 at 5941 Wells avenue.

Miss Hazel Dirk, daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Dirk of 3622 Gurney court, will become the bride of Dr. Victor E. Hrdlicka, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. F. Hrdlicka of 3131 Maury avenue, Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock in the Holy Innocents' Church, Bates place and Brannan avenue. Miss Dirk is a former student at Loretto Academy and Dr. Hrdlicka is a graduate of the St. Louis University Medical School and is a member of Chi Zeta Chi fraternity.

The wedding of Miss Eleanore Juengling, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Juengling, and Joseph W. Koneman of 1951 Arsenal street took place Sept. 22 at the Assumption Church. The bride wore a white charmeuse gown, beaded, and a tulle veil arranged under a headdress with orange blossoms at either side. Her bouquet was a shower of bride's roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Marcella Koneman, maid of honor, wore a green chiffon velvet gown and carried pink roses. Joseph Urke was best man. About 100 guests attended a reception given in the evening at the home of the bride's parents, 2629 South Twelfth street. The out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Urke of Dupo, Ill., and Mr. and Mrs. Bisch.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wehner of 110 Russell avenue announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Annabelle Edna Wehner, and Walter Raymond Carrico of St. Louis County. The wedding will take place Tuesday, Nov. 24. Mr. Carrico is a graduate of St. Louis University.

Mr. and Mrs. Max Bernstein of 1236 Kensington avenue announce the marriage of Mrs. Marie Bernstein to M. Frankel of New Madrid, Mo., on Wednesday, Sept. 16.

Mrs. Daniel Catlin Sr., will visit her daughter, Mrs. Frederick Winthrop Allen of New York before her return.

Mr. and Mrs. William Francis Niedringhaus of New York arrived yesterday to visit friends here and remain for the wedding of Mr. Niedringhaus' brother, Marion, and Miss Grace Wallace, Oct. 10. Both will be members of the bridal party. They are now at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Niedringhaus, 10 Westmoreland place.

Mrs. Shirley Brooks, also of New York, is expected here early this week to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Sartello of St. Louis County. She will be a guest at the Niedringhaus-Wallace wedding.

Paul Goessling, who has been touring Europe this summer with his grandmother, Mrs. August Goessling, 4016 Flora place, is expected home the last of October.

Miss Virginia Mueller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George B. Mueller of 4824A Farlin avenue, has returned from a two weeks' vacation on the Gasconade River at Pershing, Mo.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene B. Stinde of 6379 Waterman avenue, who have been in Europe since July 1, are expected home this week. Their homecoming was delayed because of a severe accident to Mrs. Stinde while in Switzerland, which kept her in a hospital at Montreux for several weeks.

Mrs. Simon Seelig is making her home at Hotel Chase for the winter.

Mrs. P. Rowan of 4433 McPherson avenue, with her daughter, Miss Margaret Rowan and Miss Clara Schmidt, returned home last week after spending a month in Atlantic City and New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Reis and family of 5812 Michigan avenue, have returned from a months' tour of the Northern and Eastern states.

Harold Dubinsky, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Dubinsky of 6208 Westminster place, departed Sept. 20 for Madison, Wis., where he will attend the University of Wisconsin.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Rosenthal and their daughter, Miss Mignon, who are in Europe, will tour Italy and Spain after a visit to London, Paris, Berlin and Vienna. They will be away several months.

Miss Irene Carp of 6149 Washington boulevard has returned home after spending the summer in California with her sister, Miss Queen Carp of Helena, Ark. En route to Los Angeles they visited Denver and Salt Lake City. They attended the Diamond Jubilee celebration at San Francisco.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Freed of Trenton, Tenn., are visiting their parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Friedheim, of Westminster place.

Miss Helen Marie Rickhoff of 3507 Grace avenue has departed with her aunt for a visit of several weeks to Fort Smith, Ark. A reception was held in their honor at the Rickhoff home before they departed. Miss Rickhoff will be a guest of her aunt, Mrs. Marie DeBois.

Prof. and Mrs. Gustave Klausner of 5789 Pershing avenue returned last Tuesday from their trip through 11 countries of Europe. Prof. Klausner is in charge of the industrial management classes of the School of Commerce and Finance of St. Louis University and will deliver a series of lectures based upon his observation of industrial conditions of Europe.

Miss Pearl Siegel of West Florissant avenue, entertained a group of her friends at a bridge luncheon yesterday at the Coronado Hotel, in honor of Miss Lily Mae Brody, who will depart soon for her home in Ottumwa, Ia. The guests included Mrs. S. Moreschen and Misses Frieda Olpert, Lillian Orenoff, Goldye Weiner, Sophie Greenberg, Mollie Jablonow, Florence Ornstein and Rose Seslin.

A reception was held in honor of Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Tucker by the Dorian Music Society at the home of Miss Emma Hoff, 6214 Vermont avenue, last Sunday. Mrs. Tucker, who until her recent marriage, was Miss Irma Schira, is president of the society.

Mr. and Mrs. Ruben Frager of 1422 Hamilton avenue announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Idabelle Frager, to S. M. Handelman.

Miss Naomi Hunt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Hunt of 2113 Sidney street, was married Wednesday, Sept. 23, to Henry Daust Jr. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Betty Hunt, and William Daust was best man.

CHURCH PLAY GIVEN FOR FREE ICE FUND

Dinner Dance and Saturday Morning Movie Expected to Add Greatly to Returns.

CONTRIBUTIONS.

Previously acknowledged	$5779.77
Play, Second Baptist Church, Kingshighway and McPherson	9.00
Refreshment sales	4.80
St. Louis Cut Stone Co., 3535 Gratiot st.	2.00
Total	$5795.57

The week's calendar of activities for the Post-Dispatch Free Ice for Babies' Milk Fund includes two affairs which are expected to add substantially to the amount now on hand. Tuesday night has been set for the dinner dance with which the City Club will open its fall social season. Stage entertainers from various local theaters have proffered their services for the program which will follow the dinner dance, and through the courtesy of Col. John A. Paegelow, Scott Field, the World Flight film will be released for showing in connection with the vaudeville numbers. The net proceeds of the evening will be given to the Ice Fund which lacks approximately $1700 of the amount needed to pay the summer's ice bills.

The second of the Saturday morning movies, inaugurated yesterday at the Missouri Theater, will be given next Saturday morning at 9 o'clock. Another specially selected program of pictures suited to boys and girls, with numerous stage and musical attractions, will be presented, the net returns to accrue to the babies' fund.

Last week's additions to the Ice Fund amounted to only $15.80, bringing the fund to a total of $5795.57. A play at the Second Baptist Church, Kingshighway and McPherson avenue, earned $9 of this addition. The children who participated in the play were: Ruth Ward, Bernice Case, Edra Dreon, Betty Gilmore, Adele Belle Thorp, Frances Gilmore, Frances Hall, Mary E. Case, Wilma R. Higgs and Betty Ward.

Five friends of the babies realized $4.80 for the fund by selling fudge and lemonade during their vacation days. The workers' names follow: Peggy Rothschild, Sara Rothschild, Isabelle Denyven, Peggy Denyven and Barbara Smith. Two dollars was sent by the St. Louis Cut Stone Co., 3535 Gratiot street, in payment of tickets for the Orpheum Theater vaudeville show last month.

IOWA VILLAGE TO DEDICATE TABLET TO COMPOSER DVORAK

Spillville Claims to Be Scene of Inspiration for His "Humoresque."

By the Associated Press.

SPILLVILLE, Ia., Sept. 26.—In this little Bohemian village of 350 persons a tablet commemorating the visit to Iowa of Antonin Dvorak, renowned Bohemian composer, during the summer of 1893, will be dedicated Monday.

Mrs. Louis B. Schmidt of the Iowa Conservation Association has made a study of Dvorak's compositions for the past five years and she is convinced that he wrote "F Major String Quartette" while here and received the inspiration at least for "Humoresque."

The dedication services will be held on one of the Bohemian feast days. The original organ on which Dvorak composed his pieces while here will be played by some of his pupils of 30 years ago.

Dvorak brought his wife and six children, his wife's sister and a maid for the summer months. While here he made a side trip to the Minnehaha Falls at Minneapolis and paid a visit to Edward Rosewater, who was then editor of the Omaha Bee.

Mrs. Rosalie Bina, present owner of the house in which the Dvoraks lived, says:

"He would leave the house early in the morning and go to the Mississippi River and listen to it. He was interested in the songs of birds and would often follow one bird a long time."

JAPANESE ROYALTY REGARDS SEA TURTLE AS LUCKY OMEN

Prince Regent and Crown Princess Pleased by Appearance of Creature at Imperial Villa.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Aug. 31.—The turtle is an omen of good luck in Japan. Recently a giant sea specimen calmly waddled out of the ocean at the Imperial Villa at Hayama, where the Prince Regent and the Crown Princess were staying, and brought happiness to the royal household.

The big turtle, said to have weighed several hundred pounds, appeared on the beach in the early hours of the morning. The police guards immediately informed the Imperial couple of the visitor and both the Regent and his young wife came out to observe the stranger. The turtle was then treated to a bowl of sake, the Japanese national drink, which is always used to welcome a guest. After a somewhat hesitant sip or two, the cumbersome creature shuffled slowly out to sea and disappeared. The Prince Regent obtained several photographs before his visitor departed.

As the Crown Princess is expected to become a mother some time this fall, the advent of the turtle was viewed as an exceedingly fortunate omen.

FALL ACTIVITIES OF WOMEN'S CLUBS UNDER WAY

The Child Conservation Conference held its first meeting of the season Tuesday afternoon, Sept. 22, in the Board of Education Building, Mrs. Norman B. Winsor presiding.

A feature of the program was an address by Superintendent J. J. Maddox—"Seven Big Problems Confronting Us"—an exposition of the getting scheme and aims of the school system.

Other speakers were Philip Fisher of the Community Council; Mrs. Elias Michael and Myer A. Rollins, members of the School Board; Mrs. A. J. Burr of the Parent-Teachers' Association, and Mrs. F. H. Littlefield, president of the Eighth District Federation of Women's Clubs.

The Confederate Dames Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, will meet Oct. 8 at the home of Mrs. James W. Harris, 6208 Washington boulevard, at 2 p. m. Mrs. J. T. Pedigo and Mrs. J. N. Gorman will be assisting hostesses. Mrs. George F. Bergfeld is president of the chapter and Miss Mabelle Westlake the secretary.

The first rehearsal of the Bel Canto Club under the directorship of Mrs. G. Wade Fallert, will be held Monday, Sept. 28, at 2 p. m. in St. George's Church. Application for membership may be made at this meeting.

The Alpha Delphian Chapter met Tuesday, Sept. 22. "European Nations in the Roman Empire," was the subject discussed by Mmes. E. Vogel, W. Krall, Roscoe Bridges, E. Durning and W. R. Woodward. The next meeting will be held at the Cabanne Branch Library, Tuesday, Oct. 13.

The St. Louis Outing Club will meet for its weekly party and dance Saturday night, Oct. 3, in the recital hall on the first floor of the Odeon Building. Plans for an outing Oct. 4 will be made at that time.

The Missouri Circle, No. 88, Ladies of the G. A. R., will meet Thursday, Oct. 2, at the Jefferson Memorial. The members are arranging a series of benefits during the winter, the plans to be announced later.

The St. Louis Chapter, Daughters of 1812, will celebrate its second anniversary with a birthday party at the Forest Park Hotel, Sept. 30, at 1 p. m. The program will be in keeping with Missouri day, which will follow shortly after. The Rev. Frank G. Beardsley's address will be "Missouri," and Mrs. Frank Steward will sing "Missouri." She also will sing the Star Spangled Banner, as it was written in September, 1814, by Francis Scott Key. Reservations for the luncheon may be made through Mrs. Arthur M. Wilson, Cabany 2325W.

The Mothers' Circle of Perfection Chapter, Order of De Molay, will give an apron bazaar Thursday afternoon, Oct. 1, from 2 to 5 p. m., at the home of Mrs. A. L. Eastin, 3011 Blendon place, Richmond Heights. Every mother of Perfection Chapter boys is asked to donate an apron for the affair. The articles may be sent to the officers of the circle or to Mrs. Eastin.

The Harmony Literary Club met recently at the Branscome Hotel with Mrs. C. F. Sternberg as hostess. After luncheon, the meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. G. E. Davis. "Americans of Note" was given in response to roll call. Continuing the subject of international relations, Mrs. Gordon E. Davis read a paper on "The Open Door Policy," followed by two papers on the "French Literature in Middle Ages." "The Epic, Romance and Lyric Poetry" was presented by Mrs. Lester M. Cook, and "Fables, Short Stories and Drama" by Mrs. George Springmeyer. The next meeting will be held Oct. 7 at Caravelli's, with Mrs. George Malone as hostess.

The September meeting of the St. Louis Alumnae Club of Mu Phi Epsilon sorority was held Tuesday, Sept. 22, at the home of Mrs. Orah Lamke of Clayton. The hostesses were Mmes. Gertrude Parker, Charlotte Dietrichson and Miss Marietta Schumacher. The program for the coming year was planned. The next meeting will be held in October.

The St. Louis Lonely Club will hold its regular meeting and dance Friday evening, Sept. 25, at the Alhambra Grotto, 2626 South Grand boulevard.

The National University Society will meet on the second and fourth Fridays of each month at the Cabanne Branch Library. Dr. O. W. Freitag is president; E. Heffman, secretary, and Miss M. O'Gorman, chairman of the Entertainment Committee.

The Sorority Circle held its first meeting of the present season Sept. 24 at the home of Mrs. J. A. Bleakney, 6007 Cates avenue. A discussion of the subject, "The American Home," was led by Mrs. W. H. Allen. Mrs. Mabel Pearce Meisenbach, accompanied by Mrs. Jack Landree, sang a group of Indian songs.

The Good Fellowship Club will hold its regular Friday evening meeting Oct. 2, at Westminster Hall, 3806 Olive street. A hiking party has been arranged for Oct. 4. Those who wish to join should be at the meeting Friday evening. A masquerade ball will be given by the club Oct. 23.

The Missouri Branch of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers held its second district conference in the Ritnour High School of Overland, Mo., Wednesday, Sept. 23. Superintendent Hoech of Ritnour High School gave the address of welcome and Mrs. E. P. Walsh of St. Louis, State vice president, the response. Mrs. Cox, the State president, told of the necessity of physical, mental and spiritual training for the child. Mrs. A. S. Sherwood, State organizer, led the round table discussion. Miss Mary McCullough, supervisor of St. Louis kindergartens, brought Froebel's message, "A Kindergarten for Every Child and Every Child in a Kindergarten." The evening session was held at Roosevelt High School, with Mrs. A. Burr, president of St. Louis Council presiding. Mrs. Adkin, former president of the St. Louis Council, and of early child training, also parenthood training. H. Gerling, assistant superintendent of St. Louis schools, spoke on products.

The Shakspeare Drama Study Club held the first meeting of the season on Thursday afternoon, Sept. 24, at the home of its president, Mrs. Donald MacDonald, Lindell Hall School for Girls, 4146 Lindell boulevard. After a discussion of general business, a musical program was given by Mrs. W. J. Rice. The study of Shakspeare was opened by an introductory talk on the play, "The Tempest," by Mrs. MacDonald, followed by a social hour. Hostesses of the afternoon were Mrs. C. V. Wade, Mrs. G. C. Richardson, Mrs. Homer Little, Mrs. MacDonald and Mrs. C. H. Hoyle.

The St. Louis council of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers will meet in the assembly room, Board of Education Building, Thursday, Oct. 1, at 2 p. m. Plans for the convention at Sedalia, Mo., Oct. 26, 27 and 28, will be completed.

The regular meeting of the Woman's Chamber of Commerce will be held Thursday, Oct. 1 at the Buckingham Hotel, the business meeting at 10:30 a. m. being followed by a luncheon. Mayor Miller and Mrs. Lon O. Hocker will address the meeting. Solos will be rendered by Miss Frances Schofield, Mme. Thoms at the piano, and Guy Golterman with Miss Alice Clifford at the piano. At 2:30 p. m. a tree will be presented to the city, commemorating former Mayor Kiel's 12 years of service. This ceremony will be in charge of Mrs. J. E. Allen, chairman of program, and Mmes. William Watt Spear and George Dietz, hostesses for the day. Mrs. Maurice Sternberger will preside.

The Gamma Delphian Chapter held its first regular meeting of the season at the home of Mrs. Robert Wycoff, 4009 Shaw avenue, Monday, Sept. 14. "Drama" will be the study subject for the season. Topics were assigned to Mrs. B. W. Follenus, Mrs. Harry Loud, Mrs. Robert Wycoff, Mrs. Bessie Pasnelle, Mrs. H. Hicks, Mrs. Fannie Fleming, Mrs. C. A. Latta, Mrs. Florence Richardson and Mrs. Albert Schacht.

The first meeting of the Friday Club will be held on Friday, Oct. 2, at the home of Mrs. James McCabe, 5611 Bartmer avenue. The hostess will be assisted by Miss Isabel Dolch.

Here is a MESSAGE to the Woman Who Desires a SLENDER FIGURE

"What a difference excess fat makes in a woman—By using SAN-GRI-NA I lost 30 lbs. and my friends all say how beautiful I look again."—Mrs. Zollo, beautiful Chicago Woman.

Without injuring your health or having to diet or exercise, you can today easily take off 5 to 6 pounds a week with a French prescription conveniently put up in a small tablet called SAN-GRI-NA. Since SAN-GRI-NA has been introduced in America, it has met with such tremendous success that Doctors, Specialists, Nurses and even a former Health Commissioner, have thoroughly investigated it, and now exclusively recommend it to fat people as absolutely harmless and most effective. If you have been fat for years; if your case is most obstinate; if you have tried everything advertised without success; if you suffer from puffing, high blood pressure, tired feeling—simply do this:

Get a package of SAN-GRI-NA from any good druggist, (do not accept any imitation—you will save yourself from disappointment), take two small tablets before each meal, and watch your weight gradually go down and your health and appearance improve. Not only will SAN-GRI-NA do away with fat, but almost from the moment you start taking it you will feel a wonderful change in your entire system. Thousands of people have been benefited by SAN-GRI-NA, and are sending in most gratifying reports. These cases vary in reducing from 5 to 75 pounds or more in a remarkably short time, and many say that "almost immediately after taking SAN-GRI-NA they felt 100 per cent better." BEWARE OF IMITATIONS!

On sale at any good drug or department store. If your druggist does not carry SAN-GRI-NA in stock he can get it from his wholesaler, or you can send a money order or check for $1.50 direct to the Scientific Research Laboratories, 1841 Broadway, N. Y. C., and one full-sized box SAN-GRI-NA will be mailed you direct.

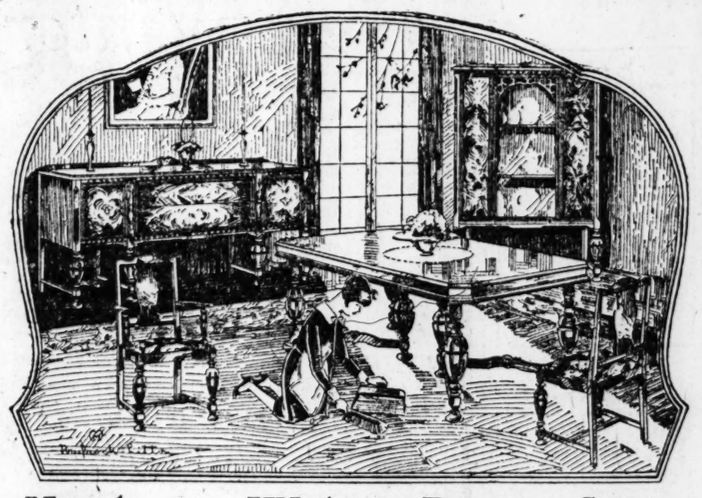
These Two Suites Greatly Underpriced

In Our Clearance of Floor Samples

Last week we launched a sale to dispose of some of our floor samples, incomplete Suites, Suites of which we have but one or two of a kind, etc., to make room for furniture recently purchased at the market.

The response to this sale has been very gratifying, and many took advantage of the mark-downs on various Suites and odd pieces. Scores of excellent sample Suites still remain unsold, on which you can save 20% to 50%.



Handsome Walnut Dining Suite

This Dining-Room Suite must be seen to be appreciated. It is finished in antique walnut and is a splendid example of good cabinet making—dust-proof construction throughout.

The nine pieces, as shown, consist of china cabinet, extra-long, 72-inch sideboard, table has 45x60-inch top with an 8-foot extension, four side chairs and two armchairs; seats covered in heavy tapestry.

The nine pieces reduced Monday and Tuesday from $395 to $295

Ten pieces, with serving cabinet, not shown above, reduced from $445 to.. $335

Eight pieces, sideboard, table and six chairs, reduced from $335 to $245

This Dining-Room Suite is a close-out pattern by the manufacturer—there are but eight of these Suites available.

Bedroom Suites

—are also included in this clearance sale. A four-piece walnut Suite, including tall broad vanity, chest of drawers, full-size bow-end bed and bench, is reduced from $254 to $175

Extended Payments

—can be arranged. We will allow you to pay as little as one-fifth cash, balance in ten equal monthly payments. Or 2% discount for all cash.

ARE YOU A FINISHER?

Lack of success in various walks of life can be directly traced to LACK OF THOROUGHNESS!

People who reach the goal of their ambition do not "arrive" suddenly; they set for themselves a task, then work to COMPLETE it, when that task is completed they seek another, but they always have uppermost in mind that the ONE MUST BE FINISHED ERE THE OTHER IS STARTED.

Our allotted years of three-score-and-ten may seem long to look forward to, but they pass only too soon.

By doing JUST ONE THING THOROUGHLY as we pass through them we have set an example sure to be beneficial.

Don't start anything you can't finish!

(Signed)

Harry Prufrock

VERYBODY TO HEAR NAME OF V. P. QUEEN

Loud Speaker at Ball Will Make Announcements Plainly Distinguishable.

Guests at the Veiled Prophet's ball the night of Oct. 7, will not have to depend on whispered information, bulletined from seat to seat, for the names of the Queen and the special maids who precede her in the royal progress through the Coliseum arena. They will hear the names announced through the loud-speaker horns.

The loud speaker apparatus, with radio station KSD, of the Post-Dispatch, as an outside connection, will enable everyone in the hall, and everyone "listening in" at points outside the Coliseum, to hear all that is said, as well as the music. The names of the young women especially honored will be announced by a herald and then the transmitting apparatus will do the rest.

Details of the decorations, it was announced yesterday, will be embroideries, tapestries and Oriental rugs, and a royal purple carpet, the floor coverings being on the path traversed by the Queen and maids of honor, and on the steps leading to the royal dais.

A symphony orchestra of 60, led by Gene Rodemich, will be a part of the preliminary musical entertainment. Two dance orchestras of 16 men each will furnish music for the dancers at the ball proper.

Wall Addresses Republican Club.

Director of Public Utilities Wall addressed the Twenty-eighth Ward Republican Club last Thursday evening at Rose Hill Hall, Maple and Hamilton avenues, on the water works system.

FIFTH LIST OF DEFENDANTS IN INCOME TAX SUITS

Court Actions Are Based on Returns Made Under State Law for Years 1919 and 1920 and Not Paid.

The Post-Dispatch herewith prints a fifth list of persons who were sued last week by City Collector Koeln for failure to pay State income taxes.

As has been told, the amounts asked for are based on incomes for the year ending Dec. 31, 1919, and Dec. 31, 1920, and suits were brought at this time to be within the five-year statute of limitation period.

About 2500 similar suits arising from delinquent State income taxes of a later period will be filed in November by Collector Koeln. To date 2400 such suits have been filed. Among those sued, with the amounts claimed, are:

APPETITE REGAINED SKIN CLEARED UP

The usefulness of Thedford's Black-Draught has long been known to Mrs. A. B. Leach, of Yale, Okla., who says that she has been using this well known vegetable liver medicine for 28 years.

"I was in very poor health," says Mrs. Leach, telling of her condition at the time she first began to take Thedford's Black-Draught.

"I would eat, but it didn't seem to satisfy or do me any good. I was bloated, felt oppression at the stomach. The fullness in the right side was awful.

"I did not feel like doing a thing. Eating even made me tired. I sat around, feeling so miserable. One day I looked in the glass and my complexion scared me—no color in my face. My ears looked waxy; skin flabby, pale. I was in a bad fix.

"I had been taking medicine, as I was told that it was inactivity of my liver that was causing this trouble. About this time—nothing having done me any good—I began to look for relief.

"I read of Thedford's Black-Draught, and my husband went to the druggist for it. I began its use, and my! how I began to improve. My appetite became more normal. Gradually the bloating disappeared and my skin cleared up. I began to see marked improvement and, from then till now, I have praised Black-Draught as the best liver medicine made.

"I keep Black-Draught in the house and have used it ever since. I regard Black-Draught as my family medicine and expect to keep it for years to come."

Thedford's Black-Draught is made from selected medicinal roots and herbs and contains no dangerous or harmful mineral drugs. It has been in use for 80 years and has been found to relieve constipation, indigestion and biliousness, when due to a torpid liver.

Sold everywhere. Price 25c. 1A-14

Acids in Stomach Cause Indigestion

Create Gas, Sourness and Pain. How To Treat.

Medical authorities state that nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, sourness, heartburn, bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach and not as some believe to a lack of digestive juices. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows only too well.

Artificial digestants are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. By laying aside all digestive aids and eating what you desire, then taking a dose of Bisurated Magnesia, and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water after eating. This neutralizes the excess acid, omits the formation of gases, and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia, in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk of magnesia—is the stomach antiseptic to take. It is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals without fear of indigestion.

Wrong Defendant Named in Income Tax Suit.

August Kurtzeborn of 7028 West Park avenue declared yesterday that the wrong defendant had been picked for one of the suits for delinquent income taxes filed last week by Collector Koeln. A list of defendants, as published in the Post-Dispatch on Friday, gave "August J. Kurtzeborn, 7028 West Park avenue," as being sued for $99.55. Kurtzeborn, who has no middle initial, said he had paid his taxes and thought his address had been mistaken for that of another Kurtzeborn.

2 Eden Tubs FREE

for Only 12 More Days with The Eden

The Washer Now in Over 33,000 St. Louis Homes

We know of no more convincing argument as to the merit of the Eden than its day in and day out, year in and year out continual faithful service in over 33,000 St. Louis homes (many for fourteen years or more)—washing the clothes of practically one fifth of the entire city's population. It is the new, improved 1926 model of this incomparable Eden that we are offering now with the two tubs ($15 value) free.

Last Day Oct. 10th

We are privileged to extend this liberal offer for only a few more days. Saturday Oct. 10th is positively the last day for you to receive the pair of tubs free. After that date you will have to pay the regular price for them.

Two Tubs $15 Value

These tubs, shown at the right, are a great help on wash day, they hold a large tub-ful of clothes and water, one for rinsing one for bluing. They roll easily to faucet, to drain, to washer. They are self-draining and are finished to match the Eden. Just think of having two big laundry aids like this without having to pay one penny for them.

The Finest Product of Engineering Skill

The Eden is powered like an automobile. It employs only steel-cut gears, moving in oil-filled leak-proof cases. These gears are built for endurance and almost endless wear. This is one of the many reasons that our confidence in the Eden is well founded.

The biggest improvements made on washers in years are found on the Eden. New silent automobile-gear drive. Sanitary washing cylinder. Solid aluminum swinging wringer. The celebrated Eden Sediment Zone, a patented feature that can't be copied, balloon casters and other new advantages.

The Eden really combines in one, all of the principles of other washers. Its specially designed and patented cylinder washes by vacuum suction, mild agitation, oscillation and by dipping up and down, as gently as you wash fine things. And, too, it is a big convenience to have hinged cylinder doors which stop on top, ready to open.

Only $2.75 Cash

Just pay only $2.75 and a brand new Eden is delivered to your home at once—after thirty days start paying the balance a few dollars a month—spread out over eighteen months. This is the best way to buy an Eden because it pays for itself while you use it, in its saving in clothes wear, time and toil.

Fully Guaranteed

We stand squarely back of every Eden washer sold. Union Electric Co's. laboratory experts have put the Eden through many severe tests for several years and we know you can depend on the Eden to give complete satisfaction. In addition to the one year guarantee you also receive one year free service. This double guarantee, over the names of the stores below, is no idle promise!

STORE DOOR DELIVERY BY RAILWAYS BROUGHT NEARER

Service From Stores to Destination Also Seriously Considered in New York — Step Toward It Taken in Twin Cities.

By JAMES SPENCER,
Automobile Editor.

Daily the trend toward store door delivery and shipping systems by which railroads will deliver and accept freight at merchants' places of business, instead of at freight depots, becomes more pronounced.

The Great Northern Railway has just announced plans for a system that is to be developed into store-door delivery in Minneapolis and St. Paul, Minn. Mercantile and shipping interests in New York City are drafting plans for a similar system which they will ask the railroads to adopt. The use of motor trucks by Eastern railroads for short-haul freight in less than carload lots, and for partial store-door delivery, is rapidly increasing.

The Twin Cities Plan.

At Minneapolis and St. Paul railroad terminals less than carload freight is to be sorted into trucks which will haul it direct to boxcars scheduled direct to destination. This will eliminate much of the "peddling" of small amounts of freight from cars to various stations, and will save 6 to 24 hours of the time now required to get loaded cars of Minneapolis and St. Paul freight moving toward their destinations.

It is expected that this service will lead soon to collection of small freight shipments by railroad belt line trucks which will take it direct to "destination" cars. Promiscuous dumping of freight into cars at the terminals in the two cities will be done away with, as will reassorting of shipments at transfer yards or other clearing points, and waste of time in handling freight from car to platform and then into other cars. The next step, obviously, will be use of trucks in a simplified system of delivering freight from car to store door.

What Is Proposed in New York.

In New York a committee of the Atlantic States Shippers' Advisory Board has been working with a railroad committee headed by J. W. Roberts, general transportation superintendent of the Pennsylvania Railroad, on a two-year investigation of store-door delivery possibilities. Questionnaires have been sent to 7000 shippers in the New York district, asking for comments on the proposed plan, under which truck delays at piers and charges for loading trucks would be eliminated, and the trucking charge would be added to the freight rate.

Reduction of depot space because of prompt removal of freight after its arrival in the yards, and increase in freight handling capacity of present terminals, would be advantages the railroads would derive. They would be able to avoid costly terminal addition which, as a matter of fact, soon will become prohibitive in expense, anyway.

RAPID PROGRESS BEING MADE ON ROUTE 2 TO KANSAS CITY

New concrete sections of State Highway No. 2 to Kansas City are being opened to traffic every week, and it will be only a short time when the whole route will be open as an all-weather highway, with only the Calwood-Fulton-Columbia section gravel instead of concrete. The detour through a cornfield at Jonesburg has been shortened to a matter of a block or two. Eighteen miles of concrete were opened the past week east of Boonville.

DETOUR IN INDIANA ON LOUISVILLE SHORT ROUTE DONE AWAY WITH AT LAST

THE detour in Indiana on the short route from St. Louis through Vincennes and Paoli to Louisville has been eliminated, and Indiana highway No. 5 is now open from Vincennes to Louisville. For months No. 5 has been closed between Shoals and Paoli, necessitating a detour over No. 41 to Mitchell and then south on No. 22 to Paoli. This route uses Illinois highway No. 12, which is paved except for a gravel detour east of Lawrenceville, to the Indiana line, then is mostly good gravel to Palmyra, then pavement into Louisville.

PAVEMENT TO SPARTA TO BE OPENED NEXT FRIDAY

Although the new pavement on Illinois State Highway No. 13 from Belleville south to New Athens and from Lenzburg to Sparta will not be opened officially until next Friday, motorists already are using a greater part of the road. Traffic goes on the highway six miles south of Belleville to Mulberry Mine, where a four-mile detour must be used to Freeburg. From Freeburg to Sparta the road has been unofficially open for the last week. As has been told, the four-mile section of highway between New Athens and Lenzburg is dirt.

FAMOUS FOREIGN CARS WILL BE SHOWN AT NEW YORK SALON

More than 110 individual cars representing manufacturers of six nations probably will be displayed at the Automobile Salon Nov. 15 to 21 at New York City. The exhibit is expected to include the largest exclusive showing of motor cars ever held in the world.

The following foreign cars will be represented: Amilcar, Isotta-Fraschini, Mercedes, Minerva, Renault and Rolls-Royce. Special coach work exhibits will be made by Brunn, Derham, de Causse, Dietrich, Fisher, Fleetwood, Holbrook, Judkins, LeBaron, Locke, Merrimac, Rollston and Willoughby.

LITTLE 91 1-2-INCH RACERS EXPECTED TO BREAK RECORDS

Harry Miller, Noted Engine Builder, Predicts They Will Surpass Speed of Present 122-Inch Cars.

New speed records on the big bowls with the racers powered with the little 91½ cubic inch engines required under the rules for American speedway contests next year are predicted by Harry Miller, the noted Los Angeles automobile engine builder. Miller, whose racing "specials" share with the Duesenbergs all speedway honors in this country, believes that within two years the present 122-inch cars now in use on the tracks will be overshadowed by the 91½-inch machines.

In this connection, it should be remembered that 122-inch cars have made laps of the faster speedways at average speeds up to almost 140 miles an hour. It was reports of these terrific speeds on the American bowls this year that deterred several European manufacturers from sending racers to compete in the 500-mile Indianapolis race and other circuit events. They feared overwhelming defeat and consequent impairment of their prestige.

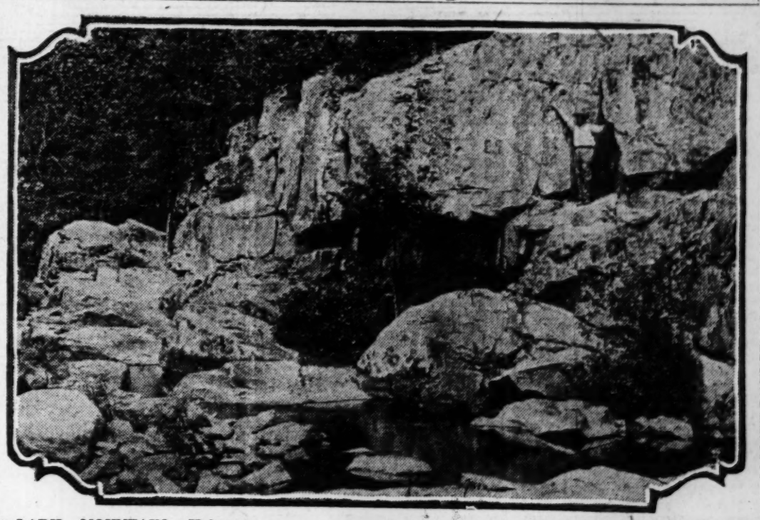
The 1926 American racers will weigh 1200 pounds without driver, gasoline or water—about the same as the 122-inch machines. But their eight-in-line engines will have cylinders of only about two-inch bore and three-inch stroke. Their cylinder capacity will be only about that of a powerful motor cycle engine, and only half that of a Ford motor.

Since 1912 racing engines have been progressively reduced in size, but engineers have been able so to perfect the internal combustion engine that it has gained speed rather than lost it in the process.

The 1911 and 1912 races were for engines of 600 cubic inches or less, which developed less power and speed than the engines of 1923 and 1924, consumed many times the gasoline and lubricating fill and were bulky and heavy pieces of machinery.

In 1913 the displacement was reduced 25 per cent to 450 cubic inches or less, which maintained until 1915, when it was reduced one-third to a maximum of 300 cubic inches, which was not reduced until after the World War, the 300-class racing in 1915, 1916 and 1919. In 1920, 1921 and 1922 the maximum was 183 cubic inches and in 1923 was reduced to the present 122 inches.

Another Week-End Trip From St. Louis



CLARK MOUNTAIN, Holmes and Patterson caves and Piedmont Canyon, which is pictured above, are only a few of the attractions on a week-end trip of some 300 miles from St. Louis.

One can start out the Lemay Ferry road and go via Festus and Hematite to De Soto, or go out the Gravois road to Morse's Mill and go via Hillsboro to De Soto. From De Soto the route goes south through Desloge, Flat River and Farmington to Fredericktown, where it picks up No. 23 and follows it to the intersection of No. 22 and No. 34, just north of the small town of Sylvia, then swings over No. 34 for Piedmont.

Driving over No. 34, Clark's Mountain may be seen from almost any point. It rises just north of Piedmont and is one of the largest in that part of the Ozarks.

After leaving Sylvia and driving one mile west, one should stop. About 100 yards off on a side road is Holmes cave. It is a beautiful cavern, extending back a quarter of a mile, and has stalagmites and stalactites of large size. Mrs. Ruth Holmes, owner of the land on which the cave is located, takes pleasure in showing tourists into the cave. She makes no charge.

Five miles north of Patterson is Patterson cave. It is much larger than Holmes cave, but more difficult to reach.

A mile north of Piedmont, on a side road leaving highway No. 34 about 200 yards east of the iron bridge at the east edge of Piedmont, is Piedmont canyon. It lies between two hills and water from springs falls from rock to rock.

One can then swing onto route No. 49 and drive north. From Piedmont to Des Arc the road is an all-weather country highway, through beautiful country. From Des Arc to Glover the road is very fair. At Glover the motorist goes north on Route No. 21 through Arcadia, Ironton, Iron Mountain, Caldonia and Potosi to De Soto, then via Hematite and Festus to St. Louis.

By reversing this trip, driving south on No. 21 from De Soto, the motorist can make Arcadia by dark after leaving St. Louis in the early afternoon. There is a camp ground at Arcadia, and fine scenery. Then, leaving Arcadia early the following morning, he may continue south to Piedmont, then east on No. 34 to Sylvia and north over No. 23 and No. 9 to De Soto, thence back to St. Louis.

PAVEMENT FROM ST. LOUIS TO JACKSONVILLE, ILL., TO BE OPENED NEXT FRIDAY

A SHORT strip of pavement between New Providence and White Hall, on Illinois State Highway No. 3 is to be opened Friday. It will be possible to motor from St. Louis north through Alton and Jerseyville to Jacksonville on paved road. Highway No. 3, at Jacksonville, meets Highway No. 10 to Springfield and Highway No. 36 to Quincy.

BLUE LIGHT ON KING'S CAR CLEARS WAY IN LONDON

Whenever a large automobile with a powerful blue light on the front of the canopy over the driver's seat appears at night on a London street, it is given immediate right of way. Such a car, London traffic men know, is one of two used by King George and Queen Mary. The distinguishing light is to make sure royalty is not held up in traffic.

FLORIDA ROUTE VIA EVANSVILLE ALREADY IN USE

About 40 Miles Longer Than Short Cut Via Paducah That Has Been Used for Several Years.

A detailed description of the Illinois, Indiana and Kentucky sections of the new route to Florida via Vincennes and Evansville, Ind., Henderson, Ky., and Nashville, which was told of briefly in last Sunday's Post-Dispatch, and has been opened to traffic a week earlier than was expected, is now available. The distance over it to Nashville is approximately 400 miles as compared with 360 over the Ashley Junction and Mound City, Ill., and Paducah, Ky., short route, that has been generally used for several years. The Vincennes-Evansville route has about as much concrete pavement as the other route and avoids ferrying the Tennessee and Cumberland rivers in Kentucky.

Which route to use appears to be a matter of individual preference.

There is now yet another route to Nashville—via Belleville over Highway No. 15, through Ashley Junction and Fairfield to Albion, then No. 1 to Mount Carmel, ferry the Wabash River and to Princeton, Ind., then south over the same route as above, through Evansville and Henderson. This route is approximately 280 miles from St. Louis to Nashville.

Here is a condensed description of the Vincennes-Evansville route:

Belleville to Vincennes, State highway No. 12, paved except for a couple of cindered stretches on fills and a gravel detour beyond Lawrenceville; Vincennes to Evansville, some gravel, but mostly pavement; Evansville to Henderson,

ST. LOUISAN BACK FROM 20,000-MILE AUTO TRIP

Henry A. Keitel and Family Made Camping Tour Through 13 States and Into Canada.

A year of motor camping, in which he drove his Olds car 20,000 miles through 13 states, was finished recently by Henry A. Keitel, 6938 Horton place. Mrs. Keitel, their daughter, Miss Margaret and their son, John Keitel, accompanied them. They became such confirmed motor camping devotees that already they are planning an even longer trip.

They left St. Louis July 12, 1924, and drove through Illinois and Wisconsin to Minneapolis, whence they ran north to St. Cloud, then west through Fargo to Fallon, Mont., where they picked up the Yellowstone Trail and followed it through Montana and Idaho to Spokane, Wash. From Spokane they dropped down south on good roads to Pendleton, Ore., then west over the famous Columbia River highway to Portland, Ore. They rambled north to Seattle and Vancouver, B. C., then retraced their course to Portland and went south over the Pacific Highway to Sacramento, Cal., to Oakland and San Francisco, then over the Coast Route to Los Angeles, where they arrived two months after leaving St. Louis.

Among the Giant Redwoods.

They spent the winter at Long Beach, motoring 250 to 300 miles in every direction, their trips including one into the heart of the Mojave Desert where they visited the Randsburg gold mines, and another to San Diego and Tia Juana, Mexico. They left Long Beach May 12, and followed the Ridge route to San Francisco; then the beautiful Redwood Highway to Crescent City, Cal., whence they had 19 miles of one way, but wonderfully scenic road to Grant's Pass. The giant redwood trees, which they saw in great groves, or rather forests, made this highway, they agreed, one never to be forgotten.

From Grant's Pass they went north to Portland, then followed the Columbia River Highway and the Oregon Trail to Pendleton, Umatilla, La Grande, Boise, Pocatello, Idaho, to Salt Lake City where they stayed two weeks. The roads from Portland to Salt Lake City, they said, were very good.

From Salt Lake they drove via Provo, Duchesne and Vernal, Utah, to Glenwood Springs, Col., then through the canyon of the Grand River and on over Tennessee Pass to Leadville. From Leadville they drove past Mt. Massive and Twin Lakes, above which tower mighty Mt. Elbert and its brother peaks, and on to Buena Vista lying placidly in its valley dominated by the huge peaks of the Collegiate Range. Crossing South Park, they drove to Colorado Springs, then home via the Victory Highway, Kansas City and Jefferson City.

Keitel said they traveled comfortably all the way, never driving Sundays, and holding themselves, as a rule, to about 150 miles a day, with an occasional 250-mile day. They also made it a rule to be in camp early enough to have their evening meal before sunset.

Keitel rigged a special support so that he could lash his tires on in front, ahead of the radiator, yet in such fashion as not to cut off air from the engine. He carried his folding bed and cots on the front bumper. By lengthening the irons of his rear bumper 20 inches he was able to build a platform on which he set blanket box, kitchenette and tool and odds and ends boxes, lashing the bedding and tent on top of the boxes and covering all with a water proof tarpaulin fitted with a draw string. Thus he was able to keep the sides and body of the car free from luggage. Fully loaded, the car, an Olds Eight, weighed 4800 pounds, including the four passengers.

The car had run 11,000 miles before he started on the 20,000-mile trip. Its speedometer showed 31,130 miles one night the past week, and Keitel said it performed splendidly through the trip and was apparently in excellent condition and good for as many more thousands of miles.

He said he fitted 32x4½ Goodyear oversize tires on the rear wheels when he left St. Louis a year ago and returned on the same tires.

paved and ferry over Ohio River; Henderson to Hopkinsville, consistently good gravel highway, except for some rough stretches in towns, for 145 miles; Hopkinsville to Clarksville, Tenn., rough much of the 20 miles, with some rutted dirt stretches and some good gravel; Clarksville to Adams, 21.2 miles of good gravel with some pavement; Adams to Springfield, Tenn., 16.5 miles of good gravel with a little asphalt; Springfield to Goodlets, 16.7 miles of pavement, except for a short stretch near Green Brier; Goodlets to Nashville, 19.3 miles of pavement into Nashville.

The road scout who reported on the route from Evansville south to Nashville warns against using the Dixie Bee highway direct from Hopkinsville through Trenton and Guthrie to Adams, saying this is one of the meanest stretches of road he ever traversed. He describes it as "the last word in highway difficulty and hazard."

Chandler Six Feat One of Greatest by a Car

Record-Breaking Victory On Pike's Peak Recalls Fine Local Performance

Chandler Also Holds World's Record for 1000 Miles by a Stock Car With Same Body as Is Sold on Standard Models.

By Spence.

The victory of the Chandler six in the Pike's Peak climb, and the setting by the car of a new record for this annual 12½-mile race to the top of the famous mountain, is of special interest in St. Louis, because the Chandler was powered with the same engine which has enabled Chandler cars to conquer all the different hills in this region. The same kind of a Pike's Peak Motor," which was developed in 1922 through arduous tests on the mountain itself, was in the Chandler car with which J. D. Perry Lewis, president of the Lewis Automobile Co., and the writer climbed the notorious hill on the Old State road from Glencoe to the Manchester road, in high, going over the top at 29 miles an hour.

Recalls Other Chandler Feats.

It was the same "Pike's Peak" power plant and traffic transmission that enabled Lewis to pull seven automobiles in high along Lindell boulevard, a feat witnessed by the writer, which caused comment all over the country. It has enabled Chandlers to play with Beckman hill, Monarch hill, Calvary hill and other well-known grades.

It was the same "Pike's Peak motor" that enabled a Chandler two-passenger roadster to break all records for 1000 miles by a stock car with stock body by covering the 10 centuries on a California track in 689 minutes, averaging 86.96 miles an hour.

Climbed Peak "Wide Open."

Three events have come to be recognized as the blue ribbon contests for American motor cars—the Pikes Peak climb, the 1000-mile speedway contest for stock cars for a cup offered by a Los Angeles newspaper, and the annual Camp Curry-Yosemite Park economy run. The Chandler six now holds the records for two of these three.

News dispatches, describing the Chandler's cutting of the old Pike's Peak record of 18 minutes 18 seconds to 17 minutes 48 4-5 seconds, emphasize the same features in the behavior of the car that were so apparent in the Old State road climb. The surging acceleration, the bull dog hanging on, the easy steering and brake control that the Chandler showed on the local hill were the same that enabled Charles Myers, driver of the other Chandler, to open his engine wide on Pike's Peak and keep it there, to speed whenever the road straightened out, to take his curves fast and fairly dart out of the bends and on.

The writer climbed in his own car to the top of Pike's Peak soon after the motor road was first opened to traffic, and so knows by personal experience the difficulties of the course. While the roadbed, which then was gravel, has been improved, nevertheless driving that 12½ miles of steady upgrade, with constantly changing air pressure and temperatures that create new carburetion problems continually and reduce the sea level power of an automobile engine materially, is an ordeal for any car at ordinary speed. When it is driven as Myers drove the Chandler, the normally safe curves become possible death traps, the dizzy drops on both sides of some stretches are a constant threat, a continual menace to a driver's courage, and the strain on a car's mechanism is tremendous.

Beat Record by Half Minute.

For the Chandler to beat the second car by almost a full minute, to clip nearly half a minute off the old record, and to run the entire distance to the mountain top wide open and without any mechanical trouble, was one of the greatest feats ever performed by an automobile. If the average St. Louis driver could urge and persuade and push his own car up that mountain, and then was invited to accompany Myers up it at the speed he made with the Chandler, he surely would think he had been asked to commit suicide.

Myers, by the way, had driven the Chandler only five days before he took part in the climb, although he had won in a previous year in another make of car. He found the Chandler so powerful yet easily handled that he predicted too all his friends that he was sure to win.

The testing of the first "Pike's Peak Motor" designed by the Chandler factory was unique. The engineers and F. C. Chandler, president of the Chandler plant, went to the mountain and proceeded to try out four cars powered with the new engine as cars never were tested before. They hammered those Chandlers up and down the mountain day after day until they got the facts on which changes were made that enabled them to announce "the motor that mastered a mountain." Since then Chandlers have climbed famous grades throughout the country.

HUP EIGHT SALES IN YEAR EXPECTED TO TOTAL 15,000

"The international demand the Hupmobile eight has created will result in its sales for 1925, its first year, exceeding 15,000," says O. C. Hutchinson, general sales manager of the Hupp Motor Car Corporation. "What Hupmobile has actually done has been to increase its initial estimates for eight-cylinder output over 50 per cent. Last December we made plans to produce 10,000 of these cars in 1925. We have exceeded our production estimates every month since the first car was built. Within five months the eight became the most-demanded car of its type in the world. Since it gained that honor, its sales have been even greater, until today they are rapidly approaching a point where they will surpass those of all other eight-in-line cars put together.

Sales by Hup distributors and dealers for the last three months have exceeded those for the same period a year ago by nearly 50 per cent. Its export sales likewise show an unusual demand abroad, more than $2,000,000 worth of these cars having been shipped overseas in the first months of 1925.

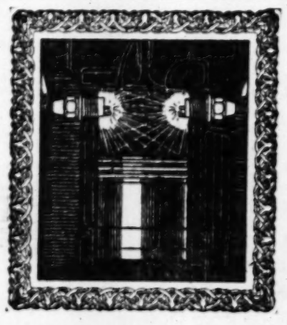
PRODUCTION OF RUNABOUT TO START AT FORD PLANT

Production of the improved Ford runabout is expected to start this week at the St. Louis Ford plant. The first lot will be distributed for sample purposes among 300 dealers in the Eastern Missouri and Western Illinois district.

The new Tudor sedan is in production in limited quantities at the plant. Dealers will get the first sedan for samples before orders are filled. Unless additional parts are available, dealers will not be supplied until 10 days or two weeks before the first sedans and runabouts are put on the market.

A parade of new style Ford coupes, the first built at the local assembling plant, was held Tuesday morning through the residential and business sections. Twenty-one city Ford dealers participated.

When all dealers in the territory have samples, orders will be filled. With the demand greatest for closed cars, the local plant continues to average an output of 300 units daily.



Caught between two fires, every cubic of gasoline is exploded instantly and completely by Marmon's new and ingenious system of combustion, utilizing DOUBLE-FIRE IGNITION in combination with the efficient New Marmon gas intake system in the proved Marmon valve-in-head type of engine.

Now the NEW MARMON

with its new and exclusive features becomes an even Greater Automobile

The new ability of the Greater New Marmon is evident in the first half-mile you drive the car

—Even smoother power-flow, even more pronounced acceleration and even greater power on hills due to Double-Fire Ignition in combination with other new developments.

New Body Styles—making line of four luxurious Standard Closed Cars at exactly open car price.

NEW MODELS NOW ON DISPLAY

We shall be pleased to place a demonstrating car at your disposal.

THE NEW MARMON has struck an entirely new theme in motor car performance . . . By a new and ingenious application of proved principles, Marmon engineers have endowed the New Marmon with a magna-power quality which is conspicuously evident, even in the first half-mile you drive the car.

It is evident in a new wealth and smoothness of power-flow—a new aggressiveness and a new eagerness.

It is evident in a startling new rapidity and quietness of acceleration—particularly at traffic speeds.

It is evident on hills—especially difficult hills, where the car hangs on and pulls in high gear, quietly and without the slightest apparent effort.

Even the non-technical layman can understand the reason for these amazing results in Marmon's new system of combustion which squeezes every ounce of power out of the gasoline—even the lowest grades of gasoline.

Also—New factors of economy and convenience, including Chassis Self-Lubricator and Three-way Oil Purifier (exclusively Marmon).

Remember that you can get this new combination of qualities in a Marmon and in a Marmon only, and that these new improvements have been added at no increase in price

What's New in Cars

NEW JORDAN LINE EIGHT, WITH ALL-STEEL SEDAN, LOWEST PRICED OF EIGHTS

The lowest priced eight-cylinder line in the automobile industry is announced by the Jordan Motor Car Co., which has begun shipments to its distributers, among which is the MacCarthy-Archer Automobile Co. of St. Louis. The Jordan Company plans to concentrate production on the eight-in-line car, maintaining characteristic Jordan quality and attaining low prices through increased volume.

Fully as important as the low price on this new Jordan eight is the fact that the new sedan on this chassis is to be all-steel, of the broad vision type, Jordan thus taking the lead among cars of better quality in this respect.

The new series is being produced in two models for the present. The "observation sedan" is so called because of the advantages of the new, all-steel type body from the viewpoint of vision and safety, while the companion of this sedan will be the Playboy roadster, the popularity of which has long since been established by the Jordan Company. The sedan will list $1845 at the factory, while the Playboy will sell at $1695 at factory.

Recognizing the demand for cars of light weight lessed bulk, shorter turning radius to meet traffic conditions and greater economy, Jordan has designed a spacious sedan and roadster with a wheelbase of 116 inches.

The bore of the new line-eight motor is 2⅞ inches and the stroke 4¾ inches, with total piston displacement of 246.6 inches. Actual brake horsepower is 64 at 3000 R. P. M.

The crankshaft has five bearings, the main bearing being 2⅝, with 2¼-inch diameter at the crank pin. The crankshaft is machined all over.

The brakes are hydraulic with drums 14⅜ inches outside diameter and 2½ inches wide. Springs are all of chrome vanadium steel.

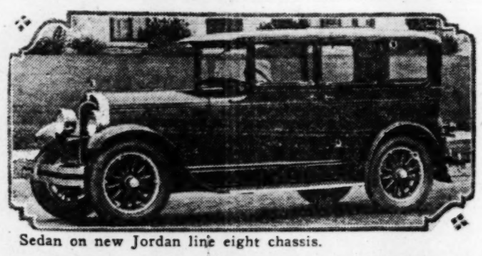
In adopting the all-steel body, Jordan has taken the stand that this is an age of steel, and that all motor car bodies must follow the lead taken by builders of railroad equipment, ships, bridges and buildings.

While a large investment is required to start production of all-steel bodies, from the standpoint of endurance, safety, vision and economy, Jordan considers the all-steel body to be the type which will dominate in the future.

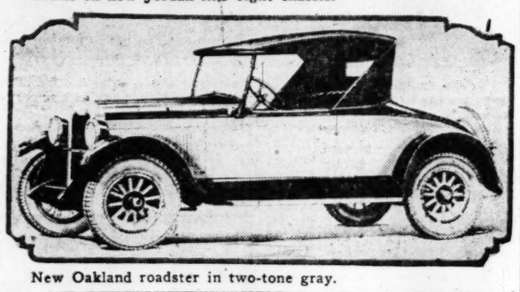
A feature of the new all-steel Jordan body is the removable upholstery. This makes it simple to repair a dent in the body, clean the upholstery or reupholster the car.

Jordan, through acquisition of a new plant in Cleveland with 175,000 square feet floor space, is now equipped to paint and trim all Jordan bodies, and production is now at the rate of 60 bodies a day.

New Cars Shown in St. Louis



Sedan on new Jordan line eight chassis.



New Oakland roadster in two-tone gray.

NEW ROADSTER ADDED TO OAKLAND SIX LINE

THE Oakland Motor Car Co. and its local distributer, the Mississippi Valley Motor Co., announce addition of a two-passenger roadster to their line of new Oakland sixes.

This new type has the same distinctive body features as all other cars in the line. It is finished in bright colored two-tone Duco. The body, hood and wheels are in Pyramid gray, with a darker shade of gray above the beading on the deck and upper part of hood and cowl. Red striping on body, louvres and wheels contrasts smartly with the body colors. The car is upholstered in genuine leather.

A one-piece windshield, as providing in the touring car, swings from side posts near the top, affording ventilation as well as vision. A collapsible top is made a feature of the car. It may be lowered in a few moments. All the new mechanical features of the Oakland Six line are embodied, including the harmonic balancer, air filter and oil cleaner, four-wheel brakes and full balloon tires.

KISSEL HAS OIL FILTER AIR CLEANER, 'GAS' STRAINER

OIL filter, air cleaner and gasoline strainers are now standard equipment on Kissel sixes and eights. New color combinations in highly polished Duco or in paint are available on all Kissels, and all striping is now done in 3-line effects. A notable example of the new colors and striping is the brougham on the eight chassis in gun metal with ivory striping. This brougham, which is a recent addition to the Kissel eight line, is on a 127-inch chassis. Another new model is a de luxe sedan on the 137-inch eight-in-line chassis.

NEW DIANA "ARROW HEAD" PHAETON IN PRODUCTION

THE Moon Motor Car Co. has in production a five-passenger Diana straight eight "Arrow Head" phaeton. In this new touring car, the molding has been eliminated and a raised panel substituted by offsetting the body panels at approximately the same location formerly occupied by a molding. This offset eventually works itself over the cowl and hood and forms an "arrow head" with an apex at the rear end of the radiator shell.

The European tendency to raise the body sides, which gives the appearance of a passenger sitting in rather than on the car, has been followed.

The body of the car is in two-tone Duco, the offset panel being finished in sage green while the lower part of the body and hood are in soft French gray, this color combination being neutralized by a green stripe about one-quarter of an inch wide which runs along the raised portion of the body and hood.

Equipment of the car, which lists at $1895 at St. Louis, includes hydraulic four-wheel brakes, "easy park" cam and lever type steering gear, one-piece ventilating vertical windshield, heat indicator on the instrument board and a light control lever on the steering column.

NEW 4-DOOR BROUGHAM ON GARDNER SIX CHASSIS

A smart new 4-door brougham on the Gardner six chassis has just been announced by the Gardner Motor Co., and arrangements for its first showing in St. Louis have been completed by the Tilton-Gardner Motor Co., local Gardner distributer. The new model lists at $1595 factory.

This new brougham has long, low racy lines, given added charm by a colorful finish of two-tone lacquer, large nickle-trimmed lamps, cowl lamps, nickeled radiator and balloon tires. All windows are of plate glass with satin window curtains. All instruments, including gasoline gauge and heat indicator, are grouped on the dash under a single glass panel and indirectly lighted. Doors are unusually solid and substantial, and body noises and squeaks are permanently silenced by use of leather insulators. A one-piece ventilating windshield is used, and there is an additional ventilator in the cowl. Enclosed 4-wheel brakes are standard. Additional equipment includes snubbers all around, rear vision mirror, automatic stop light and automatic windshield wiper.

FRANKLIN COUPE HAS NEW UPRIGHTS OF STEEL TUBING

WHAT is said to be a distinct advance in automobile body design is the new style Franklin coupe which embodies construction entirely different from that hitherto employed in closed car manufacturing.

The Franklin coupe employs steel tube uprights, an ingenious arrangement which has marked advantages from the automobile owner standpoint in that it provides real driver visibility.

CHEVROLET SETS HIGH MARK FOR DELIVERIES

The Chevrolet Motor Co. has added another record to sales and production marks established this year. The new record is represented by deliveries to Chevrolet dealers in August of 41,500 cars, a larger number than the company ever has placed with its dealers in any preceding August. August deliveries even exceeded those in June or July of this year.

ESSEX COACH
Why Consider a Lesser Car?—It Has Beauty—Performance —Super-Six Smoothness—Economy and Endurance

This is the greatest Essex value in history. It is the finest Essex ever built. The price is the lowest at which Essex ever sold. The largest production of 6-cylinder cars in the world, giving economies in purchase of materials, manufacture and distribution exclusive to that position, make this value possible alone to Hudson-Essex.

The new low price places it within the reach of all, and it has the brilliant performance, reliability, riding ease and fine appearance for which Essex is famous. No wonder everyone is saying these things about Essex.

MANY AUTO FACTORIES WORKING AT CAPACITY

Production in September Likely to Set a Record for Motor Car Industry.

By a Special Correspondent.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 26.—Production in September is going to establish a record for the automobile industry. Many plants are working at capacity and with sufficient unfilled orders on their books to keep them busy for some weeks, in some cases through October.

Cadillac is breaking its September month record.

Chrysler is turning out 800 cars daily.

Dodge has moved output up to 1100, as against 900 during the summer.

Setting Records.

Chevrolet is one of the favored companies, as it has been all year, turning out cars at the rate of 2200 to 2400 a day, and unable to keep up with demand.

Buick is now hitting the fastest pace in its history, more than 1000 cars daily, as the result of its August announcement of a new line of cars at greatly reduced prices.

Studebaker is amply supplied with business.

Nash, as it has done every month this year, threatens to establish a new September record. The activity of this company this year has been a revelation.

Hudson-Essex operations are extremely high, around 1275 cars a day.

Oakland is turning out more cars each day than it has done at any time since 1921, and Oldsmobile is on a three-shift daily basis.

Willys-Overland is putting out cars at the fastest fall rate in its history.

Hupp is decidedly in the lead in eight-in-line production, and has been forced to concentrate on models in this line.

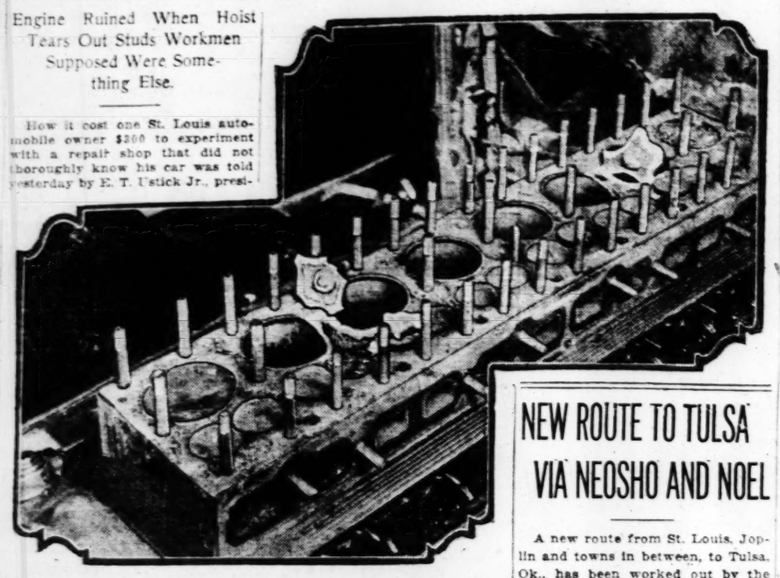
Sales Continue Excellent.

Sales of cars throughout the country continue on an excellent basis, especially in the agricultural districts, where the farmer is just beginning to come into the automobile market on a large scale.

'Supposing' in Repair Shop Costly

Engine Ruined When Hoist Tears Out Studs Workmen Supposed Were Something Else.

How it cost one St. Louis automobile owner $200 to experiment with a repair shop that did not thoroughly know his car was told yesterday by E. T. Ustick Jr., president of the Rickenbacker St. Louis Co. The $200 by no means covered the whole cost, as the owner also suffered the loss of his $8000 closed car while a new engine was being obtained and mounted in the chassis.



Engine block of Rickenbacker car that was ruined because a repair shop did not know all construction details of the car. Picture shows how studs and pieces of cylinder walls were torn out by use of chain hoist to take head off engine without making sure that all studs were taken out.

It appears that a repair shop worker removed all the studs holding the top of the Rickenbacker car's engine—that is, he supposed he had removed them all. Two long projections that hold wires from the distributer he took for granted were merely fastened to the top of the engine. As a matter of fact, these projections are studs that serve a double purpose. The repair man fastened a chain hoist to the engine top and hauled away, tearing out the two studs and with them large pieces of the sylinder block, running the engine.

"Nothing like this could have happened if the owner had taken his car to a Rickenbacker service station," said Ustick. "There is hardly a car made that has not something about it that the ordinary repair shop does not understand fully.

"Every day we get cars whose timing has been upset by a repair man who does not know exactly what he is doing with a Rickenbacker car. One owner reported he could get only 11 miles to the gallon of gasoline. We found that the flywheel mark was a full inch off. We adjusted it properly, and now he gets 18 miles to the gallon.

"On another car we found the timing gear set three teeth off. That car couldn't pull your hat off your head.

"These are only a few of the cases illustrating the necessity of a car owner going to a service station where everything about his machine is thoroughly understood."

How to Go

Post-Dispatch Travel Bureau:—Please tell the way to Steelville, Mo., by way of Union, how far, and condition of roads? J. A. C.

The best way to Steelville does not go via Union. It goes out the Lemay Ferry road to Festus, then to De Soto, then over Highway No. 21 to Potosi, then No. 62 to Steelville. The distance is about 125 miles, and the roads are concrete and mostly gravel. Would not advise going by way of Union. However, you can go out the Manchester road to the Melrose road, then detour via Allenton to Pacific and back to Highway No. 12, then go over No. 13 through Union to Beaufort, then over a country road south to Sullivan, then west over No. 14 to Cuba, and south on No. 19 to Steelville. The road is reported very rough beyond Union, and there is a lot of none too good going on this route beyond Beaufort, also. Highway No. 14 is under construction on the St. Clair-Sullivan section, and should not be used.

Post-Dispatch Travel Bureau:—Please publish best route from St. Louis to Okarche, Ok. F. A. W.

Follow above route to Steelville, then go north on No. 19 to Cuba, west on No. 14 to Rolla, south on No. 7 to Cabool, west on No. 16 through Springfield, Monett and Neosho, then south on No. 1 through Noel to the Arkansas line, then south to Siloam Springs, Ark., west through Choteau to Tulsa, Ok., then via Sapulpa to Oklahoma City, west to El Reno, and north to Okarche.

NEW ROUTE TO TULSA VIA NEOSHO AND NOEL

A new route from St. Louis, Joplin and towns in between, to Tulsa, Ok., has been worked out by the Automobile Club of Oklahoma and the Springfield (Mo.) division of the Automobile Club of Missouri.

From Joplin, it runs south over Missouri State highway No. 1 through Neosho and Noel to the Arkansas line, then continues south through Gravette, Decatur and Gentry to Siloam Springs, Ark., then west through Rose, Ok., Locust Grove, Choteau and Inola to Tulsa. This route is reported to be all-weather from Joplin to Tulsa, except a stretch of graded dirt road in the Verdigris River bottoms, between Inola and Tulsa.

By the new route via Siloam Springs it is 168 miles from Joplin to Tulsa. By the old route via Chetopa and Vinita the distance was about 140 miles. But the road scouts of the automobile clubs report that the new route is so much better that the greater distance does not matter.

MOTORISTS REGRET NOT HEEDING ADVICE

Were Persuaded to Disregard Counsel of Post-Dispatch Bureau on Memphis Route.

Motorists who were advised by the Post-Dispatch Resort and Travel Bureau to use the Dexter-Leachville route through Southeast Missouri and Arkansas to Memphis and Little Rock, but allowed themselves to be persuaded by ferry men and garage men to use Highway No. 9 south from Sikeston, are continually returning to express regret that they did not heed the bureau's counsel.

Official Report on Routes.

The following official statement from the State Highway Department only bears out what the bureau has told motorists: 'The detour around the 27-mile section of Route No. 9, under construction in Pemiscot County, is in bad condition on account of heavy rains during the past four days. All traffic to Memphis, especially from St. Louis or near St. Louis ,should go south from Fredericktown to Poplar Bluff, thence east to Dexter and south from Dexter on Route No. 25 through Dunklin County to Leachville, Ark., thence east to Blytheville and south to Memphis. This road is hard surfaced the entire distance. The detour in Pemiscot County will probably not be in very good condition again this fall, and all traffic to Memphis and points in the east part of Arkansas should take the Dexter-Leachville-Blytheville route." This applies also to traffic to Little Rock, Hot Springs, Texarkana and Texas cities.

The highway department's statement presupposes that St. Louisans go to Festus, then to De Soto and south on No. 9 to Fredericktown. As a matter of fact, most St. Louisans use the Illinois paved highways to Cairo, ferry the Mississippi River and go west on No. 16, which is paved and graveled all the way to Sikeston and Dexter.

A detailed report on the Sikeston-Blytheville and Dexter-Leachville-Blytheville routes was brought to the Post-Dispatch bureau Wednesday by George R. Dunville, manager of the Hudson-Essex West Side branch. Dunville said he found the long detour south from Sikeston very bad, so deep in dust when dry that the dust rolled up onto the running board, and villainous when wet.

He said the ferry boat employes and garage men at Sikeston were advising motorists to go south over No. 9 and save time. This advice, he declared, should be ignored, for the Dexter-Leachville route was incomparably better, was only 30 miles or so longer, and was all-weather going. Most of the highway south from Dexter to Leachville, he said, is nine-foot concrete on one-half of the road and gravel on the other, while the Leachville-Blytheville road is paved.

He reported also that it is now possible to go over or around the bridge over a slough of Big Lake, between Leachville and Blytheville, at any time of the day or night. For a while this bridge was closed all night for repairs, but now an automobile runway has been built for use when the bridge is closed.

Dunville said it took him one and one-half to two hours longer to go from Sikeston to Memphis via Dexter than going south over No. 9, but that no one who had gone over the two routes would think of using No. 9 to Blytheville.

REBUILDING CLAYTON ROAD IN CITY TO BE BEGUN SOON

With the laying of a section of water main completed within the city limits, reconstruction of Clayton road is scheduled to be begun probably before Oct. 1. The work is expected to be completed before January.

Clayton road in the city and as far out in the county as Clayton where the main is being laid, though passable and open to traffic, is in bad condition, and not recommended for driving. When the street has been filled and graded, a temporary brick pavement will be laid and the ground allowed to settle 60 to 90 days before permanent pavement is laid. Unless residents desire otherwise, Clayton road will be reconstructed as a "partially improved street, or hard surfaced without curbing. Laying of the water main in the county has proceeded as far as Clayton.

The Grand boulevard viaduct was opened for traffic Wednesday night, making the street open its entire length, except for 12 blocks from Neosho street south to Carondelet Park.

Not only in the purchase price but in the results it gives reflected impressively in repair bills.

Idio-X is a quality product. The average layman knows little about anti-freeze solutions. You are forced to accept the word of the manufacturer for you cannot tell by looking at an anti-freeze solution whether it is good or bad. In that respect Idio-X has a tremendous advantage for it is manufactured by the Idio Chemical Company; the integrity of the company is back of every drop.

Idio-X is not composed of sodium, salts or acids of any kind. We want state and county distributors.

Always consider——what you get for the price you pay!

The Coach $695

F. O. B. Flint, Michigan

Always consider what you get for the price you pay! You do this every day in your general purchases. For example, you pay a little more for good shoes because you know from experience that they will wear longer, give greater comfort and greater economy in the long run. The same fundamental principle applies a hundredfold to the purchase of an automobile—the travel shoe for the entire family for years, not months.

Because Chevrolet offers the greatest amount of quality, performance, comfort and endurance for a small amount of money, over two million people have become enthusiastic owners and Chevrolet has become the world's largest manufacturer of automobiles with sliding gear transmission.

In your purchase of an automobile be sure to balance price with quality and service. Thus only will you achieve true economy.

for Economical Transportation

CHEVROLET

The following features indicate why Chevrolet offers greater value than any other low priced car.

Body Construction

Fisher built bodies of wood and steel construction with the flexibility and strength which enable them to withstand hard driving over rough roads—every joint in the hardwood frame carefully glued and screwed together—every door hinge attached with a through bolt in addition to wood screws—every steel panel carefully fitted—a rigid top construction—all evidences of Chevrolet quality and the body construction used on all of America's finest cars.

Appointments

Everything for your convenience and comfort. An automatic windshield wiper—a turn of the dash control button and clear vision is automatically maintained in any weather. A dome light—always convenient and often a necessity. A dash light—with its simple control switch illuminating the instrument panel whenever desired. Quick-acting Ternstedt window regulators on all windows. Windows and windshield of clear, heavy, plate glass. A silk shade over the rear window—protecting you from the reflected glare of cars coming from the rear.

Windshield

The Fisher VV one-piece windshield—undoubtedly the greatest step forward in automobile body construction in recent years. Easily raised or lowered by a Ternstedt regulator—absolutely watertight in all kinds of weather. No adjusting nuts to bother with. Full ventilation across entire cowl. A feature you should become acquainted with.

Instrument Panel

The instrument panel is complete. On it are mounted the windshield wiper control, the lighting and ignition switch, the speedometer, the oil gauge, the ammeter, and the choke rod. Paneled type instruments are used and the instruments are neatly grouped. The panel itself is finished in Duco.

Motor

The powerful, well known valve-in-head Chevrolet motor, unusually high in its efficiency and therefore economical in its operation. Carefully balanced running parts made of fine materials result in that smooth flow of power desired by everyone.

Lubrication

Combination splash and force feed lubrication is used. An oil pump maintains a continuous supply of oil, and the oil gauge located on the instrument panel tells the driver that the system is working properly.

Cooling

Few cars are as efficiently cooled as the Chevrolet. A Harrison honeycomb radiator with ample area not only insures efficient cooling, but, in combination with its polished, non-rusting airplane metal shell, adds greatly to the beauty of the car. A water pump cooling system provides ample circulation and minimizes the possibility of freezing in cold weather.

Alemite

The Chevrolet chassis is equipped throughout with Alemite fittings, making the necessary job of lubricating a thoroughly simple and easy one to do.

Duco Finish

Chevrolet cars are all finished in Duco—a finish that retains its luster and color indefinitely. There are many imitations but only one Duco.

Springs

Chrome vanadium steel springs, extending over 88% of the wheel base, give you riding comfort that is unexcelled.

Chassis Construction

The foundation of the Chevrolet car is its long, rugged 4½-in. channel steel frame with its five sturdy cross members. This construction provides unusual strength and adds materially to the life of the car. Chevrolet's sturdy yet simple frame design reflects the application of obviously correct engineering principles. Units are thoroughly modern in design and perform with the maximum of efficiency.

Vacuum Fuel Feed—Gas Tank in the Rear

The gasoline tank is located at the rear of the chassis and all models are equipped with the Stewart vacuum fuel feed system—insuring the utmost convenience and safety.

OLDS SIX SMASHES STOCK CAR RECORDS

New Model Sets Mark for Pike's Peak and Lookout Mountain Course.

Stock car records on two of the most trying courses in this country have been captured by a new Oldsmobile six. A car taken from a factory shipment smashed all previous stock records up Pike's Peak and on the Lookout Mountain-Bear Creek Canon run.

The Oldsmobile clipped one minute and four seconds from the best previous stock car record. Sept. 5, one week later, Clymer piloted the Oldsmobile up the Pike's Peak course in 28 minutes, 49 seconds, the fastest time ever made by a strictly stock car. This run is 12½ miles long. The elevation is 9150 feet above sea level at Crystal Falls, where the run starts, and is 14,109 feet at the summit of the mountain. In one two-mile stretch the elevation rises 995 feet.

This stock card record of 28 minutes, 49 seconds is within 11 minutes, 30 seconds of the record time made by a special car in the annual Pike's Peak race. The Lookout Mountain record and the Pike's Peak run were officially timed and checked.

Taking "One-Shot" to the Fairs

Cleveland six chassis with which the "One Shot" lubricating system peculiar to this line is being shown at county fairs in Missouri and Illinois. When this picture was taken the car was being driven by Miss Lucy Jane Meissner, daughter of E. C. Meissner, head of the Cleveland Motor Sales Co. Her passenger is Miss Dorothy Burdette.

IMPROVEMENTS IN MARMON CAR INTEREST MOTORISTS

The three improvements and the three additional body styles announced last week by Marmon have been accepted with unqualified approval by those who make it a point to keep in touch with advancement in automobile design and efficiency, according to the More Automobile Co., local distributer. Marmon salesrooms generally are reported to have been crowded with visitors since the arrival of the new cars.

The three improvements include double fire ignition, in which the ignition spark is shot into the combustion chamber of each cylinder from both sides of the engine; the exclusive Marmon three-way oil purifies which retains the viscosity of the lubricating oil, and the Marmon self-lubricator, by which all bearings or wearing surfaces of the chasis are lubricated simply by pushing on a pedal, conveniently located under the cowl. Additions to Marmon body styles include a Victoria for four passengers, a two-passenger coupe and a two-passenger speedster with a rumble seat in the rear deck for two extra passengers.

WAR OF AUTO GIANTS BENEFITS PUBLIC, SAYS HUDSON-ESSEX DISTRIBUTER

Former Head of National Automobile Dealers' Association Reviews Battle of Prices.

One of the leading automobile distributers in the Middle West, William J. Brace, who handles Hudson and Essex cars in the Kansas City territory was in St. Louis the past week visiting R. C. Frampton, president of the Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co.

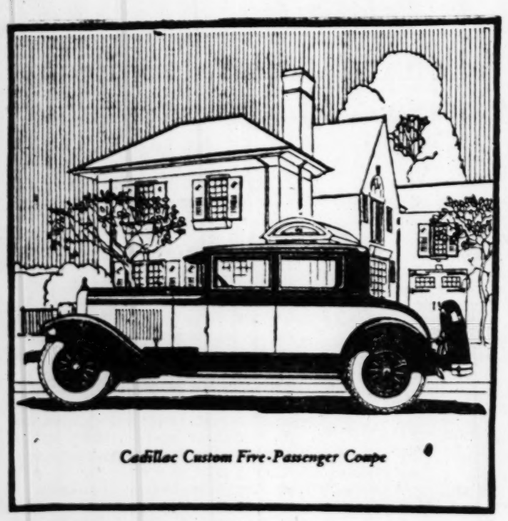
Brace, who has served as president of the National Automobile Dealers' Association, sees great gain for the car buying public in the war of prices that is being waged in the automobile field. "Ninety-two per cent of American cars are made by 9 manufacturers," he said. "So we are past the days of survival of the fittest. We are now in the war of the giants, and the issue will be determined largely by price. While the war is on the public will get more for its money than ever before and possibly more than it ever will again.

"There will always be smaller automobile factories, as is the case with all older business. But the giant factories set the pace and establish the standards of price and value. It is their enormous production that has made possible lower prices, and their lowering of prices has made volume production possible. The two things go hand in hand."

Brace remarked that Hudson-Essex was now in third place among automobile factories, and was spending $5,000,000 on additional plants to step up its present average of 1275 Hudson and Essex cars a day.

AUTO CLUB'S SAFETY FILM NOW READY FOR SHOWING

The film, "Food for Thought," which has been prepared under direction of the Automobile Club of Missouri to inculcate lessons in safe driving, is now ready for public showing. It shows, in guise of a story, what a motorist should do and should not do in driving a car.



Cadillac Custom Five-Passenger Coupe

Simplicity in the NEW CADILLAC

Only a gigantic organization such as Cadillac, containing within itself the necessary resources of men and machinery, could institute improvements and refinements at once so vast and so minute as those of the new Cadillac.

In this new Cadillac engine, for example, there are no rocker arms or levers. The valve action is positive and direct. The cam slides or tappets through which the valves are opened and closed are operated directly from the camshaft by means of rollers contained in the cam slides themselves.

This ultra-refinement eliminates thirty-two wearing surfaces. It increases the durability of the engine and makes operation even more quiet.

To guard and protect Cadillac quality in even the smallest detail has been the constant aim, and the result, in this magnificent new Cadillac, is ample reward and justification for the painstaking effort.

Try This New 90-Degree Cadillac

You will agree that it rises to heights of performance you never dreamed could be achieved. It is mobile and facile as thought—exuberantly responsive to every demand you make of it. Everywhere it is meeting enthusiastic and eager welcome as the finest car in the world today.

NINE VITAL FACTS

Here, in brief form, we present for your information nine vital facts underlying the success of Dodge Brothers, Inc., and the goodness and value of their product.

Dodge Brothers, Inc., consider these facts so fundamentally important to the motor car buyer that they will be repeated, from time to time, until every newspaper reader in America may be presumed to have read them:

Dodge Brothers, during the past eleven years, have built and sold more than one million four hundred thousand motor cars—and more than 90% of these cars are still in service. This record requires no comment. It stands impressively alone in motor car history.

It has never been Dodge Brothers policy to build yearly models. When an improvement, that is really an improvement, is discovered, it is made at once. Their slogan, "Constantly Improved But No Yearly Models" is familiar the world over.

Dodge Brothers build one chassis and only one. This policy materially lowers manufacturing cost. It also enables Dodge Brothers engineers to concentrate their entire time and thought on the betterment of this one type.

Dodge Brothers have never had an "off year" or an "off car." This is because they have never used the public as a testing ground for "new models" or lowered the quality of their product in the slightest degree. Every change has been an improvement on the original design.

Dodge Brothers pioneered in building the first all-steel open car and the first all-steel closed car. These epochal developments have saved Dodge Brothers owners many millions of dollars by materially prolonging motor car life and by effecting marked economies in manufacture. This construction has also reduced incalculably the danger from accident and fire.

Dodge Brothers sell directly through their dealers to the purchaser. There are no sectional distributing agencies to increase the cost of distribution and the cost of the car.

Dodge Brothers have never given so-called "free service." The car is sold at a fair and honest price. Nothing is added to this original purchase price to pay for service that the owner may never need.

Dodge Brothers Dealers were pioneers in unanimously adopting the flat rate service system. By this system, the owner knows in advance what any service job will cost. There are no unpleasant surprises in his bills.

The sturdiness and long life of Dodge Brothers Motor Car is reflected in its resale value. Comparatively few Dodge Brothers Motor Cars are advertised in the resale columns of the newspapers. The values they bring testify unanswerably to their goodness—and the public's belief in their goodness.

The purchase of an automobile is a serious and important business. The time has passed when transient novelties can lead a thoughtful buyer to overlook the great essentials of motor car worth.

A few of these essentials are clearly outlined above. They go far to explain why Dodge Brothers name is accepted, the world over, as the hall mark of dollar-for-dollar value.

WHO MAKES IT?

Every day this question becomes of more importance to motor car buyers.

Case cars are built by an institution founded in 1842—19 years before Lincoln became president. Three quarters of a century of manufacturing experience, tremendous manufacturing facilities and unusual financial strength are back of the New Case—The 10 Year Car.

DUESENBERG STRAIGHT EIGHT TO BE SOLD IN ST. LOUIS

THE Duesenberg Motors Co. of Indianapolis, which makes the Duesenberg straight eight, has appointed Walter Shawvan manager of its St. Louis sales and service branch at 5502 Delmar boulevard. Shawvan, who has been connected with sales and service of automobiles since 1905, is a new comer to this city, having spent most of his time in the industry in Detroit and New York territory in sales of high-priced cars. "Duesenberg racing cars, at home and abroad," said Shawvan, "have conclusively established their supremacy, and the Duesenberg company declares that racing is the crucible out of which has come a surpassing car for private owners. No car ever has been built as the Duesenberg is built, whether for racing of private use. It takes six months to build a Duesenberg, which is probably the most slowly built car. The Duesenberg is sold in only 12 of the principal cities of this country. Production is limited to 10 cars a week. Virtually every Duesenberg is finished entirely to the individual purchaser's specifications, necessitating a wait of 9 to 12 weeks for delivery. For this reason, finished Duesenbergs are not usually shown in salesrooms, except such as are used for demonstrating. It is worth recalling that the Duesenberg was the first straight eight built in the United States for private owners and also was the first to use four-wheel brakes. Even today it is the only American car that has internal expanding hydraulic four-wheel brakes."

Tire Sale—30% Saved

Our contract with the India Tire Co. requires us to sell India Tires exclusively in future, therefore we are obliged to close out all other makes, regardless of cost. No telephone prices given, as you must compare quality and prices to appreciate these genuine bargains on standard guaranteed Tires of proven quality. You leave nothing to chance when buying from Glenn, his 26 years in St. Louis, handling quality Tires, is your assurance of value.

WEBSTER DODGE DEALER TO OPEN NEW BUILDING, OCT. 1

A DINNER for 150 Dodge dealers in the St. Louis territory, a parade, reception and dance, will be held in connection with the opening Thursday night, Oct. 1, of the new Phillips Motor Co. building, Lockwood and Summit avenues, Webster Groves. For seven years the Phillips company, 720 Big Bend road, of which Robert Phillips is head, has had the Dodge agency at Webster Groves.

The new building, 100x130 feet and two stories high with a basement, has 36,000 feet of floor space.

The dinner will be held at noon Thursday at the building. It will be followed at 3 p. m. by a parade of Dodge cars and trucks, at 7 p. m. by a band concert, and by dancing from 9 p. m. till midnight.

CHRYSLER DOES 55 MILES AN HOUR IN CHICAGO-DETROIT RUN

An average speed of 55.3 miles an hour has just been made by a stock Chrysler in a run from Chicago to Detroit. The car was driven by R. C. Foster, and the Chrysler is said to have set a new record for the run between these two cities.

NEW WIPER CLEANS WHOLE TOP HALF OF WIND SHIELD

An automatic windshield wiper that cleans the upper half of the windshield is being shown in St. Louis by the Electric Garage and Service, Grand and Lafayette avenues, which has been appointed distributer in this city. The wiper, which is motor driven, runs steadily back and forth across the windshield. Raymond Pence, head of the distributing company, said he operated the wiper, which is called the Storm King, for 24 hours without stopping.

LEWIS AUTOMOBILE CO. REDECORATES QUARTERS

The showroom of the Lewis Automobile Co., 4700 Washington boulevard, is being repainted and redecorated. The walls are being finished in light gray and the woodwork in white.

FAST RUN WITH KISSEL.

A. A. Segelhorst and Paul Rehan of the Remaud Motor Co., Kissel distributer, report driving one of the new Kissel eights to Chicago in 7 hours and 40 minutes, and to the Kissel factory at Hartford, Wis., 482 miles from St. Louis, in 14 hours, despite the numerous cities and speed traps on the way.

DRIVES BUS THROUGH.

George P. Fields drove a Reo intercity bus through the past week from the Reo factory at Lansing, Mich., for the Kardell Motor Car Co. for delivery to Costa Bros., for a bus line between Taylor and Hillsboro, Ill.

AUBURN HAS RECORD WEEK IN PRODUCTION

The Auburn Automobile Co. has just completed the biggest week in its history, according to E. L. Cord, vice president and general manager.

Production has averaged 50 cars per day for the past week, a 25 per cent increase over any previous production. Unfilled orders on file continue to increase and there is no immediate prospect of production keeping pace with the demand, officers say.

OVERLAND CO. PLANS EXPANSION PROGRAM

Willys-Overland, Inc., states that $2,000,000 will be spent by the concern in the next 12 months in new buildings and improvements, increasing production from 1200 to 1350 cars a day and adding more than 1000 employes. Contracts are to be let within 30 days.

SCHMID CO. DISTRIBUTES WINDSOR STABILIZER

The Windsor motor stabilizer for Ford cars and trucks, is being distributed in the St. Louis territory by the Schmid Sales Co., 1531 Pine street. It is said to eliminate motor vibration. The device fits around the crank case and makes the supports and motor one unit. It is said to prevent breakage and loosening of bolts and nuts, thus reducing repair bills. The Schmid Sales Co. distributes through Ford dealers, service stations, and accessory dealers in Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois. The Schmid Sales Co. is successor to the Wonder Spark Plug Co. Joseph H. Schmid is president and sales manager. Harry C. Hosft is vice president and general manager.

MORE PAVING OPEN ON ROAD TO FLAT RIVER

Only Two Detours Now From St. Louis to Within 10 Miles of Lead Belt City.

Progress on paving State Highway No. 9, the St. Louis-Festus-Flat River-Fredericktown-Jackson-Cape Girardeau-Sikeston route to a connection at the Arkansas line with the all-weather route to Memphis, warrants a hope that it will be thrown open to motorists as far as Sikeston within six weeks.

An additional six miles of concrete has been opened to traffic on No. 9 between Festus and Flat River. By using a two-mile detour immediately south of Festus motorists can drive on pavement as far south as Bonne Terre, where they must detour back to the old road. This Festus detour is reported narrow and rough, but passable. The five-mile detour from De Soto east to the pavement still can be used. State highway engineers say they may have the entire 40-mile strip of concrete from Festus to Flat River open within a month. As it is, there is now concrete from St. Louis to within 10 miles of Flat River, except for the detour on the old gravel road between Pevely and Festus and the two-mile detour beyond Festus.

BUS BOOKING AGENCY STILL CONTINUES IN BUSINESS

A statement that the Midwest Transit Co., a bus line booking agency with headquarters at the Marquette Hotel, had been taken over by the newly organized St. Louis-Chicago Motor Transit Co., was in error, according to W. L. Hinton, president and manager of the agency. The St. Louis-to-Chicago part of the agency's business was taken over, he said yesterday. But he said that the Midwest Transit Co. was still doing business as a booking agency for trips to Kansas City, Denver, Los Angeles and other Western cities, as well as Eastern cities and Florida and the South generally.

Another Romance in Real Estate

A few years ago, a prominent St. Louis surgeon, whose name is withheld for ethical reasons, bought real estate in one of the many desirable subdivisions in St. Louis. He began by making small monthly payments and in a short time the lot was his.

But this was not enough for the ambitious, far-sighted surgeon. He decided to have a home of his own. Accordingly, he immediately made plans to build on his lot. Again, it was necessary that he make only small installments, but his home was soon completed and only a comparatively short time later—he owned his own home!

That was just a few short years ago. Recently, he was offered three times the amount of his investment. In refusing the offer, the doctor said, "My home is a priceless possession—a place where my children can grow up, happy and contented amid fresh air and growing things."

Men and women of foresight today are buying real estate, either for a home or for investment purposes. Well-selected real estate is a sound investment—permanent and profitable. Discrimination is necessary in buying. That is why wise investors and home-seekers consult the Real Estate columns of the Post-Dispatch. There is wisdom and profit in reading the Real Estate columns of the Post-Dispatch constantly and carefully—today and every day until you find the property you want.

The Post-Dispatch, alone, carries far more Real Estate Advertisements than ALL other St. Louis newspapers COMBINED.

RADIO FOR THE AMATEUR AND EXPERT

EXPERTS TO STUDY FIELD INTENSITY

One Factor in Interference Which Thus Far Has Been Practically Ignored.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—In an effort to lessen interference, the Bureau of Standards is developing a portable apparatus for radio supervisors which will enable them to measure the field intensity of transmitters and regulate the power of stations so that they do not produce excessive interference.

During the past few months a study has been made of several methods hitherto used for the measurement of field intensities. It has been learned that the factor which determines the strength of signals produced in a radio receiving set by the waves from any transmitting station is the field intensity produced by the station. This field intensity is not determinable from a knowledge of the power of the transmitting station, and so the interference caused by a station at a given point is measured not by the station's power but by the field intensity which it produces.

With the advent of higher-power broadcasting this summer, the Bureau of Standards has measured the field intensities produced at Washington by a number of the higher-power stations. These measurements have shown that the effect of the higher power is to produce louder signals and to increase the radius of the small zone around the broadcasting station in which there is freedom from atmospheric disturbances and other interference. This gain is not proportional to the increase of power. The higher power does not materially increase the interference produced by the stations. Fading at a distance is not reduced by higher power and limits the zone of satisfactory reception. One of the greatest obstacles to good reception is fading. The bureau, in cooperation with about 40 other laboratories, has been making graphical records of fading on prearranged schedules to study the changes in fading during the sunset period. Accurate knowledge of the sun set fading phenomena should throw light on the nature and causes of fading.

Time for Battery Tests.

Batteries should be tested after a set has been in operation for an hour or more, and not when the batteries have been standing idle for several hours.

HOW ONE VIOLINIST GETS RADIO RESULTS

Noted Performer Plays So Softly That Notes Are Barely Audible in Studio.

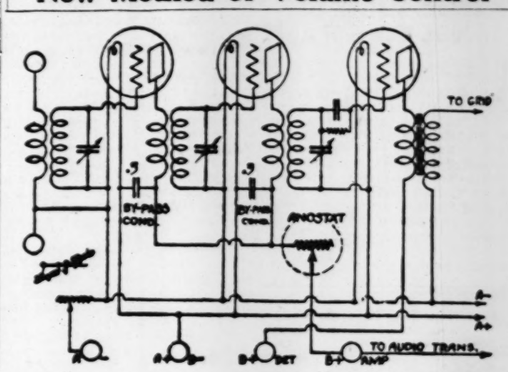
There are few performers who enjoy such popularity with the radio audience as Godfrey Ludlow, the staff violinist of Station WJZ, who broadcasts a recital every Sunday evening at 10 o'clock. There have been numerous comments made, not only by those who know little or nothing regarding violins and broadcasting, but by violinists of concert ability and by acoustical engineers, on the remarkable quality of tone attained by this artist in his radio work. The violin is a particularly difficult instrument to transmit. Its tone pitch at times reaches the highest of frequencies and at other times drops to a low frequency that almost strikes the other extreme. These variations occur with a rapidity that makes hand monitoring in the control room exceedingly difficult, if possible at all. Most violinists, when they enter the studio, attempt, as the control operators phrase it, to broadcast without the transmitter. By this it is meant that they attempt to play so loud that the entire world could hear the music without its going through the microphone.

With Ludlow, this is entirely changed. He enters the studio with the intention of playing as softly as possible, invariably using the mute to quiet his instrument. He takes his position at the microphone with his lift shoulder barely grazing the stand in which the "mic" is encased. This is known as hugging the "mic." When Ludlow starts to play, the notes of his Stradivarius are barely audible in the studio, but the microphone at the artist's side is absorbing all. The tones are not forced, but float into the transmitter as clear and sweet as when they left the Stradivarius.

Absorption and Signal Volume.

Absorption is one of the greatest drawbacks to signal strength. This may take place near the aerial in the form of absorption by trees or in the lead-in by having it parallel too closely to some grounded conducting material, such as a rain spout or metal frame of a building. Placing the set near a radiator or other body of metal will also invite absorption.

New Method of Volume Control



Resistances are an inseparable factor in all electrical circuits. It may not be there in the form of a rheostat, the potentiometer or other piece of resistance apparatus, but every part of the circuit, whether it is just copper wire connections, condensers, coils or any other unit, has some resistance value. It may be great or small, as the case may be, but it exists and is a factor in the circuit. Copper wire is a good conductor, meaning its resistance is low, while a nonconductor simply means something that has a very high resistance. Present-day radio apparatus is so designed as to reduce as far as practical all resistance in the tuned circuits.

This elimination of surplus resistance permits much sharper tuning and therefore improves selectivity. But in radio frequency circuits it multiplies the tendency of tubes to go into oscillation, producing the assortment of squeals, howls and whistles which not only come out of the loud speaker, but back up and go out in the air to play havoc with the neighbor's reception.

The old and incorrect practice was to add a potentiometer in the secondary circuit of the radio frequency stages. This was equivalent to replacing the resistance back into the apparatus. It reduced the oscillation tendency but it likewise killed the selectivity that was desired, and, in addition, materially reduced the volume. Resistance should not be added where it becomes an integral part of the radio frequency circuits.

The fundamental cause of oscillation is due to a great extent to the amount of voltage across the plate circuit. If this voltage is controlled so that it can be adjusted to a value just below the point where oscillation starts, then radio frequency amplification can be used to full advantages. But this control must not be such as to add resistance in the tuned circuits.

Oscillation can be effectively prevented if a variable resistance is connected in series between the plate or primary coils of the radio frequency transformers and the B battery to prevent oscillation by reducing the plate voltage on the radio frequency tubes. Now by connecting a ½ mfd condenser between the B terminal of the primary on the radio frequency transformers and the filament terminal of the tubes, this artificial resistance can be shunted out of the tuned circuit. Their condenser closes the plate circuit to the filament of the tube for the radio frequency currents. In other words, on account of the condenser these currents don't have to pass through the resistance—hence the resistance does not affect the tuning and selectivity.

This variable resistance provides a means of reducing the plate voltage and therefore controls oscillation. This means of controlling oscillation was first utilized commercially by E. F. Andrews in the Deresnadyne receiver. The use of this control for radio receiving sets is covered by patent applications but its use by the fan in building his sets or for remedying trouble in a set he has made is encouraged.

Andrews has now developed the use of this by-passed plate circuit resistance as a volume control, as well as an oscillation control. This is done by using an extremely high variable resistance having a maximum value of several megohms. The circuit is just the same as for the control of oscillation. The first part of the resistance can be used for oscillation control, and the high resistance part for controlling volume. Volume can thus be adjusted without the slightest distortion, and with great saving in B battery current. This combination control is known as the "Anostat," derived from "anode" meaning positive or plate and the word rheostat.

Defective Tubes.

A defective tube is usually denoted by a blue glow, but tubes sometimes go bad without giving any visual indication. In the latter case the fault can be determined only by substituting a new tube which has been tested and found all right.

SHORT WAVES BETTER WHEN FAR AW

Signals From WGY Inaud at 200 Miles Are Loud In Africa.

Short wave signals trans by WGY, at Schenectady, hav received with fair quality and read volume during the day miles from the sending stati have been inaudible 200 mile the transmitter. For several tests have been conducted by radio engineers of the Electric Co. on 41.88 meters length, using approximately kilowatt of power, and from reports received over a grea ritory it is apparent that thi length is especially suitable daylight transmission.

All programs of WGY have transmitted on 41.88 meters meters and 1560 meters, in addition to the assigned wavelength the station, 379.5 meters. 41.88 meters transmitter has used under the call letters SXAD

WGY recently received a l from Robert L. Simpson of Pretoria, South Africa, stating had picked up the short wave the morning of Aug. 4, at o'clock, South African time. log checked with that of the station. His most interesting statement was: "As it got lighter the signal strength increased gradually." Pretoria is 7988 miles Schenectady.

W. P. Huggins of Grey Auckland, New Zealand, reception of WGY's 41.88 signal on the afternoon of Aug. 4 and 5, between 2:15 and 3 o'clock. His log checked with records of WGY. Auckland is miles from Schenectady.

Stanley McClatchie, a radio experimenter, residing in Stuttgart, Germany, received WGY on a receiving set in the Alps in daylight. Fans living in Belfast, Ireland; Liverpool, London and Surrey, England; La Platta, Argentina; Calgary, Alberta, Canada, have successfully heard the Schenectady developmental transmitter.

In studying the behavior of short waves the radio engineers have made reception tests within a 200-mile radius of Schenectady. These tests have shown that the short wave signal was inaudible within that radius except on a few occasions, when very weak signals were detected. This is known as the "skip-distance" effect.

The transmitter used for the 41.88 meters broadcasting is located at the South Schenectady developmental laboratory of the General Electric Co., where engineers are carrying on intensive research in all phases of transmission. The equipment is located in a separate frame building and is not only the push pull circuits, but also intermediate amplifiers and crystal quarts in order to control the frequency.

The antenna used is known as the vertical doublet. This is simply a vertical wire tuned in the middle with tuning coil on each side. It is necessary on this type of antenna to have the meter in the middle with tuning coil on each side.

technical articles on the subject have been published in any of radio magazines so we can the device only by the description given in the report. That by the use of an underground antenna static had been reduced materially. It was admitted, however, that there was also a loss of signal strength and that in order to restore the signal to the original use a multi-stage amplifier was necessary.

A number of radio engineers carried on very exhaustive experiments during the late war with underground receiving antennae. A year ago an experimentor by the name of Rogers made some very interesting claims for the underground antenna, both for transmitting and receiving. In fact, this is said to have been the origin of the idea.

Experiments prove that radio waves go many miles upward into the atmosphere. One theory is that they travel upward until they reach the heavy side layer which is supposed to be at the outer edge of the earth's atmosphere, where the atoms are highly ionized. These ionized waves have their footing in the earth. The depth to which a wave penetrates the earth depends upon the length of the waves, the power of the transmitting station, the sensitivity of the receiver to pick up the signals.

An antenna buried several feet in the ground will reduce the strength of static though it also reduces the signal strength in almost the same proportion. To bring the signal back to normal a multi-stage amplifier is necessary, and this amplifies static the same as it amplifies the signal. So there is very little, if anything, to be gained by the system. The same is true of a loop antenna, except that the loop has the advantage of directional hearing and avoids the necessity of the construction of an outside antenna. After many years of research and experimental work radio engineers no longer strive to find a magic instrument that will receive signals without static, but rather they improve the transmitting and receiving stations until static is not bothersome. The trend is toward super-power at the transmitting end and less sensitive receivers to pick up the signals. This method does not eliminate static, because the signal to override atmospheric disturbances.

Battery Practice.

When charging a storage battery, be sure to open the vent caps so that the gas can escape. The temperature of the battery will go extremely high if the vent caps are not removed, and the battery may be damaged beyond repair.

The Ideal Aerial.

The usual length of a single wire aerial for the reception of radio broadcast signals is about 80 feet. The usual length of a two-wire antenna is about 80.

"What You Buy From Us Is Good"

When all the world is on the air

ON those prize evenings this fall and winter, when your favorite paper reveals a wealth of entertainment you want to hear, you'll appreciate the certainty with which the A-C Dayton filters through the scores of stations to pick up just the one you want, recording it just as you want to hear it.

Then you will truly enjoy A-C Dayton selectivity—A-C Dayton consistent performance. At will your set tunes in one station after another, always where you expect it on the dials, always as clear and true as you can ask from any set.

The A-C Dayton is not all-powerful,—no set can control such things as atmospheric conditions and outside interference—but it will do all that any other does,—and do so with ease and certainty and fidelity of reproduction. It is radio as you want it—a set of satisfactions, from purchase price to program reception.

A-C DAYTON RADIO

JUST TWO OF THE MANY A-C DAYTON SUPERIORITIES

A-C Dayton superior performance is born of A-C Dayton superior construction. Throughout the set, in each detail of assembly and selection of parts, the utmost care is used to assure the highest quality and the sturdiest construction.

As an example, straight line condensers are employed in the A-C Dayton in order to provide even distribution of stations and more exact tuning. Ordinarily, as shown at the left above, stations will be crowded together at the lower end of the tuning scale, frequently coming in within a single degree of each other. On the A-C Dayton, stations are evenly distributed over the entire dial as illustrated at the right, above. This means easier and more exact tuning at all times.

Another feature of the A-C Dayton is the air space winding of the coils. Coils are generally wound on two insulating cylinders, one fitting within the other, as shown at the right above. A-C Dayton coils are wound with narrow bridges only between the primary and secondary coils, as shown at the left, reducing the amount of insulation and, resultingly, the insulation loss. Greater clarity and finer tone result.

The A-C Dayton is built to be used with permanent outdoor aerials, as a properly constructed aerial gives uniformly better results with any set. A single wire aerial, not more than 125 feet long, is sufficient, and if absolutely necessary an indoor aerial can be used. If you want maximum results, however, do not risk performance by slighting this inexpensive yet important detail.

SHORT WAVES BETTER WHEN FAR AWA

Signals From WGY Inaudible at 200 Miles Are Loud in Africa.

Short wave signals transmitted by WGY, at Schenectady, have been received with fair quality and easily read volume during the day 8[illegible] miles from the sending station and have been inaudible 200 miles from the transmitter. For several months tests have been conducted by the radio engineers of the General Electric Co. on 41.88 meters wave length, using approximately one kilowatt of power, and from the reports received over a great territory it is apparent that this wave length is especially suitable for daylight transmission.

All programs of WGY have been transmitted on 41.88 meters, 1[illegible] meters and 1560 meters, in addition to the assigned wavelength of the station, 379.5 meters. The 41.88 meters transmitter has been used under the call letters 2XAF.

WGY recently received a letter from Robert L. Simpson of Pretoria, South Africa, stating that he had picked up the short waves on the morning of Aug. 3, at 4:30 o'clock, South African time. His log checked with that of the station. His most interesting statement was: "As it got lighter here the signal strength increased gradually." Pretoria is 7[illegible] miles from Schenectady.

W. P. Huggins of Grey Lynn, Auckland, New Zealand, reported reception of WGY's 41.88 meter signal on the afternoon of July 4 and 5, between 3:15 and 4:[illegible] o'clock. His log checked with the records of WGY. Auckland is 8[illegible] miles from Schenectady.

Stanley McClatchie, a radio experimenter, residing in Stuttgart, Germany, received WGY on a receiving set in the Alps in daylight. Fans living in Belfast, Ireland; Liverpool, London and Furness, England; La Platte, Argentina and Calgary, Alberta, Canada, have successfully heard the Schenectady developmental transmitter.

In studying the behavior of short waves the radio engineers have made reception tests within a 200-mile radius of Schenectady. These tests have shown that the short wave signal was inaudible within that radius except on a few occasions, when very weak signals were detected. This is known as the "skip-distance" effect.

The transmitter used for the 41.88 meters broadcasting is located at the South Schenectady radio developmental laboratory of the General Electric Co., where engineers are carrying on intensive research in all phases of transmission. The equipment is located in a separate frame building and uses not only the push pull circuits, but also intermediate amplifiers and crystal quarts in order to steady the frequency.

The antenna used is known as the vertical doublet. This is simply a vertical wire tuned in the middle. It is necessary on this type of antenna to have the meter in the middle with tuning coil on each side.

IC REMAINS TO BE CONQUERED

ite Many Claims by Inventors and Experimentors Atmospheric Disturbances Still Hinder Reception.

By WILLIS P. CORWIN, Of the KSD Staff.

An article recently appeared in one of the leading newspapers in the country telling of the invention of a device that eliminated static. A number of letters have been received by the radio editor asking if there was any truth to the report.

No technical articles on the subject have been published in any of the radio magazines so we can say that the device only by the description given in the report. This is true that by the use of an underground antenna static had been reduced materially. It was admitted, however, that there was also a loss in signal strength and that in order to restore the signal to the original strength a multi-stage amplifier was used. This system is not at all new. Many radio engineers carried on very exhaustive experiments during the late war with underground receiving antennae. A year or two ago an experimentor by the name of Rogers made some very startling claims for the underground antenna, both for transmitting and receiving. In fact, this is said to have been the origin of the idea.

Experiments prove that radio waves go many miles upward into the atmosphere. One theory is that they travel upward until they reach the heavy side layer which is supposed to be at the outer edge of the earth's atmosphere, where the rays are highly ionized. These rays have their footing in the earth. The depth to which a wave penetrates the earth depends upon the length of the waves, the power of the transmitting station and the sensitivity of the receiver used to pick up the signals.

An antenna buried several feet in the ground will reduce the strength of static though it also reduces the signal strength in almost the same proportion. To bring the signal back to normal a multitube amplifier is necessary, and this makes static the same as it amplifies the signal. So there is very little, if anything, to be gained by this system. The same is true of a loop antenna, except that the loop has the advantage of directional effect and avoids the necessity of the construction of an outside antenna. After many years of research and experimental work radio engineers no longer strive to develop a magic instrument that will receive signals without static, but rather they improve the transmitting and receiving stations until static is not bothersome. The trend is toward super-power at the transmitting end and less sensitive receivers to pick up the signals. This method does not eliminate static, but causes the signal to override the atmospheric disturbances.

Battery Practice.

When charging a storage battery, always open the vent caps so that the gas can escape. The temperature of the battery will go entirely too high if the vent caps are not removed, and the battery may be permanently damaged beyond repair.

The Ideal Aerial.

The usual length of a single wire antenna for the reception of radio broadcast signals is about 80 feet, although the usual length of a two wire antenna is about 60.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

The Post-Dispatch Radio Department cannot undertake to answer questions by mail.

Q.: I have a three-tube regenerative receiver and I put three new tubes in it a short time ago. The receiver seemed to be working alright until I put in the new tubes when the volume dropped to about half. I looked for the trouble and found that the tubes lit up with a bluish glow. I disconnected the B batteries and the light changed to the normal red. Upon putting the batteries back the blue glow returned. Could you suggest what makes the tubes burn blue? R. E. X.

A.: The tubes are defective. A certain amount of gas was either left in the bulks when they were made or has leaked into them since you obtained them. Reliable tube manufacturers replace all such defective tubes no matter how long you have had them.

Q.: Can a spark coil be used for the plate supply of a tube transmitter? 2. What makes the prongs on the base of a tube have small sparks around them when the key is down? 3. Must the vibration on the spark coil be screwed down when using it as a source of high voltage for the transmitter? Will a toy transformer hold up if used to supply the current for the filament of a transmitting tube? 5. What will be the capacity of a 23-plate condenser with the plates double spaced? T. D. M.

A. 1. Yes, simply use the output of the spark coil in place of the high voltage D. C. leads. The spark coil, however, will cause your emitted wave to be modulated at the tone produced by the vibrator. This tone is usually more or less scratchy and the make and brake of the vibrator causes the output of the set to vary. For these reasons the system is used very little. 2. Poor contacts. 3. No. 4. It would probably hold up if used with a 5-watt tube. 5. Approximately .00025 mfd.

Q. Please print the ratings, filament voltage and amperes, plate voltage and milliamperes of the De Forest H tube. Radiotron UX 120, UX 112 and UX 210. G. F.

A. We have no data on the De Forest tube. The ratings of the new Radio Corporation tubes are as follows:

	UX 120	UX 112	UX 210
A battery volts	4.5	6.0	8.0
A terminal volts	3.0	5.0	7.5
A battery amps	1.25	0.5	1.25
Max. plate volts	135.0	157.5	425.0
C battery for max. plate volts	22.5	10.5	35.0
Plate mils at max. plate volts	6.5	7.9	22.0

Q. Would you kindly publish plans and specifications for making an eight-tube super-heterodyne receiver? L. M.

A. Limited space in these columns prohibits our publishing complete details of an eight-tube super. An excellent article on the subject appeared in the last issue of Radio, a copy of which may be obtained from the Pacific Radio Publishing Co., Pacific Building, San Francisco, Cal.

Q. Can you furnish me with specifications for building the binocular coil for use in a five-tube neutrodyne? O. R.

A. Obtain two pasteboard tubes two inches in diameter and three inches long. On each of these wind 40 turns of No. 20 double cotton covered or silk covered wire. Wind the coils in the same direction so that if the two windings were placed end to end and the two loose ends of wire connected together the result would be a continuous winding. Place the two coils on end and in such a position that a line drawn through the centers of the tubes would be perpendicular to the panel of the set. Connect the two upper ends of the coils together. The lower end of the front coil should be connected to the filament end of the circuit and the lower end of the rear coil is connected to the grid. To use the binocular coil as a radio frequency amplifier or as an antenna tuning coil wind the primary which should consist of approximately 15 turns of No. 28 or 30 cotton or silk-covered wire on a tube that will just fit into the inside of the coil that is connected to the filament end, or in other words, the front coil. You might find that the total of 80 turns on the binocular coil will have a natural period that is too high and the long wave stations come in at the center of a .00025 or .0003 mfd condenser. In that case take an equal number of turns off the two windings until you have found the correct number of turns.

WANT FOREIGN SETS

Despite the efforts of the British Government to induce fans to buy and dealers to handle only home manufactured radio receivers, there seems to be a desire on the part of the retailers to handle what types of apparatus they choose regardless of the country or origin. A report received by the Department of Commerce indicates that, with the protest of the retailers to the National Association of British Radio Manufacturers and Traders, objecting to the requirement that they not handle imported goods, American radio equipment may yet receive a welcome in the British Isles. According to the chairman of the Wireless Retailers' Association there is a growing demand for imported radio sets and equipment. In Sheffield district, certainly, there has been an increased interest in American circuits, high-grade sets and parts.

Keep Filament to Normal Point.

Do not burn the thoriated filament tube at too great a brilliancy; do not turn up the filament rheostat above normal. This will force too much current through the filament and release the electrons so fast that the filament will become "run out" of free electrons in a short time. The filament will burn all right, but there will be few or no signals.

NOTED ANNOUNCERS FOR RADIO SHOW

Southwest National Exposition in St. Louis to Entertain Microphone Stars.

Listeners-in will have an opportunity of seeing and meeting their favorite announcer at the Southwest National Radio Exposition, which will be held in the Coliseum Oct. 12-17 inclusive, under the auspices of the St. Louis Radio Trades Association.

The Entertainment Committee, of which ScottGardner is chairman, is negotiating with leading announcers of the country to appear at the radio exposition. They will announce from the broadcasting station at the exposition. Among them will be Harold Hough of the Fort Worth Star, Fort Worth, Tex., who is known to thousands of listeners-in as "The Hired Hand," broadcasting from WBAP.

While simplicity and reliability of operation are prime essentials for the home-type of receiver, it is the artistic cabinet and the perfection of tonal reproduction, with the absence of self-generated discords, that is placing the radio set in the drawing rooms of the finer homes.

The eye appeal of the modern art design of cabinet housing the radio receiver is due to woman's innate love for beauty. She demands that objects of utility and pleasure must also possess beauty. This is no more true in the selection of the piano on the style of its case and its finish, as well as its tone quality, than in the selecting of the radio receiver. The radio receiver as offered this season is an artistic piece of furniture, displaying the craft and skill of the cabinetmaker in the fullest measure. There seems to be a division of opinion as to whether the furniture models shall be in the form of consoles, highboys, writing desks or tables.

The Southwest National Radio Exposition will include exhibits from the leading radio manufacturers throughout the country, showing from the small crystal set to the most elaborate tube set in artistic furniture. All of the improved radio loud speakers will be displayed.

What Farmers Think of Broadcast Service

By THOMAS STEVENSON.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—An analysis of the survey just completed by the Department of Agriculture reveals that while the number of radio sets in use by farmers has nearly doubled during the past year, only about 8½ per cent of the farms of the country have receiving apparatus.

The popularity and need for radio sets on all farms is undisputed by farmers possessing them, but these two obstacles stand in the way:

1. Lack of information regarding the installation and operation of a receiver.

2. The high cost of a receiver capable of bringing in distant stations.

To attempt to explain the technical details of a set to a farmer (or, for that matter, to anyone else unacquainted with the phrases used by the elite of radio clerks) is wasted time; while the city resident may not admit his ignorance, the farmer wants to be shown.

The survey estimated that at present there are $53,000 receivers on farms throughout the country; this is nearly twice the total for 1924 and more than four times the number of 1923. Due to greater interest and lower prices, it is considered probable that there may be even a bigger increase during the coming year.

"The increasing number of radio sets on farms," says the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, which conducted the survey, "places a responsibility upon those who conduct broadcasting stations and those who have information to distribute. When half a million farmers turn a listening ear toward the broadcasting stations of the country, they expect to hear something worth while.

The survey was made through a questionnaire sent to all county agents who were also invited to give their views as to the value of radio in their district. Some of the replies follow:

J. M. Eleazer, Sumter County, South Carolina: "If improved a little more to eliminate static, it will come to be one of the greatest educational factors in the advancement of educating the farmers that we have today."

J. A. Barton, Comanche County, Texas: "Radio fully equals the automobile in making country life more pleasant and gives the farmer, who has always been circumscribed by his circumstances, infinite reach."

Harry P. Muffly, Hard County, West Virginia: "A large per cent of the farmers do not know which are reliable sets and are afraid to buy on account of getting stuck.

J. A. Hearn, Huntsville, Ark.: "There is no question but that the farmers are putting in receiving sets to a greater extent than town people in my county, and I look upon it as a great educational broadening factor for the rural folks."

H. A. Wemland, Senema County, California: "The greatest value so far, in my mind, has been the removal of the feeling of isolation and the fact of being able to receive important news as rapidly on the farm as in the city. The real practical values outside of this in radio to my mind must come from the development of services in the nature of weather forecasts, market predictions, and pest and disease control warnings which will really apply to the farm."

L. C. Gilbert, Hugo, Colo.: "The radio is doing wonders for our isolated districts in keeping them in touch with the outside world. The weather report is especially useful to the stockmen, the market conditions help in marketing, the entertainment features help to brighten the home life and in general it keeps them in touch with the outside world."

R. S. Doughty, Anniston, Ala.: "There is no question but what radio sets in farm homes are of untold value. I cannot help feeling the crying needs in our rural homes today for good clean entertainment, and because of the remoteness of some homes, radio undoubtedly is the answer."

G. W. Sidwell, Ness County, Kan.: "I think the radio for rural people is one of the greatest inventions of civilization. The big problem is to be sure the receiving sets are standardized and reliable. Cutting out all regenerative makes to prevent interference, then a thorough educational campaign to get farmers to buy them personally and save their gasoline. Good makes at reasonable prices with honest local dealers will radioize the rural sections."

B. S. Russell, Clay Center, Neb.: "On the whole I find the farmers in my county are open minded and well posted on current events and town topics. This is largely due to the information received by radio."

W. E. Hanlen, Hebron, Neb.: Every elevator in this county receives its market reports by radio. I look on the radio as one of the biggest factors in keeping the present generation on the farm, as you are able to keep in touch with the world through them. Most of the radios in this county are operated by the young folks.

Charles L. Doughty, Chattanooga, Tenn.: Farmers in our county have not bought outfits very much as yet. Possibly the biggest reason is that no one has gone out on their farms to sell them and no particular advertising has been done, and no special effort has been made to sell radio outfits to farmers. Possibly another reason why farmers have not bought outfits in great numbers is that for the last few years, excluding last year, farmers have made very little money.

G. W. Vergerent, Jackson County, Wis.: I believe that the radio is a wonderful invention and that farmers are buying them whether or not they can afford them. I also feel that it is not the duty of an agricultural agent to urge the purchase of such commodities when they are now selling far above their value.

Robert H. Zieger, Laramie County, Wyo.: I believe that many more of our ranchers and farmers will buy radio sets when agricultural conditions have improved and they can afford them. We can use only the expensive multitube sets, because of distances from broadcasting stations.

AIR COLLEGE CREDITS

Fourteen semester hours of credit under leading professors for a total cost of but $66 is the program outlined by the University of Iowa radio school WSUI, according to Edward H. Lauer, director of the extension division and ex-officio dean of the college. The lectures, to be given over the regulation period of 12 weeks, will be broadcast every Monday evening from 7:15 to 8:50 o'clock and Wednesday from 7:45 to 8:45 p. m., central standard time.

The courses offered by the air school cover the following subjects: Early Iowa history, American literature, Iowa flora, problems of population, the teaching of English, political parties in United States and elementary psychology. Two semester hours will be awarded for satisfactory work in each course for a registration fee of $2 and a charge of $4 for each hour of credit. The student is required to hear all the lectures, which begin Oct. 5, and must write four papers and an examination under any recognized official. If he is unable to hear a talk because of static or other radial disturbances he will be mailed a copy of the lecture upon request.

Valley Tone Radio Receiver

Selectivity means more with the Valleytone

Potential Balance exclusive in the Valleytone

The potential balance method of suppressing oscillation and preventing distortion is used for the first time and exclusively in the Valleytone Radio Receiver.

Reception is clear and mellow—free from the thin, hard, metallic sound and the howls and squeaks which have been the plague of radio.

Valley Toroidal Coils

The Valleytone is the first manufactured set to use Toroidal coils. The Valley Toroidal winding allows a greater coupling ratio between primary and secondary. The result is an appreciable increase in volume.

Appearance

The Valleytone is mounted in a solid walnut cabinet, finished in two tones with inlaid gold stripes. Also built in beautiful console models. Special Valley tables as shown above with built in loud speaker may be obtained for the cabinet model.

Get the Valley Radio Book

Write us or ask your dealer for your copy of the Valley Radio Book. Contains interesting information on Valley Products and an up to date radio log. Free.

Finer tuning becomes a reality . . . selectivity means more with the Valleytone Radio Receiver.

For instance: The Valleytone has regularly received and separated clearly and distinctly, radio programs broadcasted simultaneously from stations on wave lengths from four to five meters apart.

Such selectivity is attained in the Valleytone because of the Toroidal coils. The Valleytone circuit brings in stations sharply, clearly, and free from distortion.

With the Valleytone, you can enjoy radio as never before. You can get a station if it is on the air and transmitting strongly enough to reach you. You can choose your stations by the clock and hear them with the Valleytone.

The Valleytone is a five-tube set. It is manufactured by an old established company with the experience and the resources to assure you always the utmost in radio value.

Before you buy a radio, see the Valleytone. Hear it. Let an authorized Valley dealer give you a demonstration.

The SAAL '25 Soft SPEAKER

combines volume with a velvet tone

IN buying a radio reproducer you need no longer choose between volume and tone quality. You can now buy a speaker with both. The Saal Soft Speaker combines volume with a velvet tone. And tone quality is what counts after you have owned a set a while.

The Saal has no blare, no blast, no metallic ring. It is not a fad. It is a faithful reproducer of radio programs. It is properly constructed for the accurate reproduction of sound. The reproducing unit is of all-metal construction, and cannot be harmed or "blasted" by the loudest receiver. It maintains its tone with any volume. There is no adjustment knob to complicate tuning.

The Saal Soft Speaker is made to last a lifetime. The neck is of aluminum, a porous and non-vibrant metal with no tinny ring. The bell is of genuine Bakelite, the most perfect and most resonant of all radio materials. There is no wood, no tin, no composition. It has nothing to warp, crack, wear out or deteriorate. It is guaranteed to give you satisfaction.

In appearance the Saal, with its large black bell, black crackle throat and graceful lines is the aristocrat of horns. Also furnished with a brown bell and gold or silver stippled throat at $5 extra. Hear it at your dealer's today.

SAAL Jr. The same in every respect as the Saal Soft Speaker except it measures 16½ instead of 21½ inches in height. $20

NEW CLASSIFICATION FOR THE CONDENSER

Latest Models Tune by Frequency Variations, Not by Wavelengths or Capacity.

To classify condensers by the number of plates is just like marking barrels by the number of staves instead of the amount of material they will hold. An 11-plate condenser may have any capacity from zero to infinity, depending on the size of the plates, the thickness of the dielectric and other factors.

Broadcasting stations are placed on certain wavelengths and even today the position of a station is given in meters, while actually the stations are placed at equal divisions of frequency. The condensers were accordingly made to tune by equal changes in wavelength. The frequency difference of two stations on a low wave may be 10 cycles, yet they both may be located within a band of two meters. If these two stations were located on high waves and separated by 10 kilocycles, the wave length of the two might be five or six meters apart. This makes the lower wavelengths appear to be very congested when ordinary variable condensers are used for tuning. Stations on the high waves are just as close together and, in fact, every available frequency band has been occupied by one or more stations.

This matter is now being corrected by designing condensers that tune by equal variations in frequency, rather than changes of capacity or wavelength. The best new condenser has a straight line frequency calibration curve, that changes the tuning of the circuit in approximately ten kilocycles for each division on the dial.

Stations are spread over the dial equally with stations on the lower end of the dial separated and the high wavelength stations crowded together a great deal more than on ordinary condenser dials. This makes tuning easier and eliminates the need for hair line tuning devices and vernier controls and helps to clear up the apparent congestion on the lower wavelengths.

RADIO CLASSES AT SOLDAN

Radio enthusiasts of all varieties will find something to suit their needs or tastes in the courses just opened in the Soldan Evening High School, 914 Union boulevard.

One of the classes is designed to prepare students for an operator's license. This class, which is in charge of an experienced operator, gives instruction in sending code and all matters pertaining to duties of a regularly licensed operator.

Another class is for the benefit of those who are chiefly interested in the instruction and theory of operation of the various types of receiving sets. Classes meet on Monday and Wednesday evenings from 7:30 to 9:30. Instruction is free.

NEW STATIONS IN SOUTH.

A record of broadcasting increase is to be set this season by the Southeast, according to Maj. Walter Van Nostrand, United States supervisor of radio in that district, whose official records show that there will be at least 20 high-powered national stations broadcasting from Dixie out of a total of 39 stations in the locality. The 19 new stations now being completed will represent a total investment of over $800,000, a sum greater by $100,000 than the total cost of the 29 stations now operating.

The new broadcasting units, located in Florida, Tennessee and the Carolinas, are: Mizna Developing Corporation, Boca Ratone, Fla.; WFOF, Chattanooga, Tenn.; WGHB, Dunedin, Fla.; University of Florida, Gainesville, Fla.; WFOH, Henderson, N. C.; WJAX, Jacksonville, Fla.; Miami Shores, Miami, Fla.; Miami Daily Tab, Miami, Fla.; Carl G. Fisher Properties, Miami Beach, Fla.; WSM, Nashville, Tenn.

Chicago has a broadcast listeners' association of radio fans.

Women are to be employed exclusively as announcers in the new broadcasting station in Tokio, Japan.

Italy has "penny-in-the-slot" radio stations. For the equivalent of 1 cent, phones are placed on the head of the listener and he is allowed to hear a selection.

NEW ARRIVALS

The American Bosch Magneto Corporation has placed on the market a radio receiver called the Amborola. The exterior appearance of the Amborola instantly appears as being in good taste. The cabinet is of finest wood, beautifully finished. Satin bronze finished metal ware enhances the cabinet work. The absence of a multiplicity of dials is expressive of the simplicity of operation. But two indicators are needed for all tuning. There is no fussing with dials. In addition to its great power, the Amborola is extremely selective, insuring a penetration of the local or close-by stations, and the reception of the more distant programs with power and clarity.

The S. L. Brach Company announce that they have solved the problem of distortion in resistance coupled amplification and in a new resistance audio coupler known as the Pur-a-tone have incorporated their latest developments. The Pur-a-tone is made up in the form of a flat transformer with a bakelite case having the four regular terminals. The resistance and capacity of one microfarad are designed to handle all frequencies in the entire musical scale with no cut-off point within the range of audibility. The unit is standardized for all stages and in addition can be used for long-wave radio frequency amplification.

The Brandes Company, which has been making headphones for years, has added several new products to its line. There is a new Brandes loud speaker, which is of the horn type, a new cabinet type loud speaker an da phonograph attachment. They are still making the table talker. The latest product added to the line is an audio-frequency transformer having a ratio of 5 to 1. It is supposed to amplify without distortion.

The "X" Laboratories are now making a new type of straight line frequency condenser with plates which are beveled and buffed. The insulation used is pyrex. This condenser is made with or without a vernier and has a rugged metal frame housing the rotor and stator units. The vernier is micro geared with a ratio of 200 to 1.

NO STATIC IN ALPS.

There is no midsummer static, except for a brief period around sundown, to bother the radio listener-in who sets up his aerial on the slopes of certain of the high Alps peaks in Switzerland, according to a report to Westinghouse Station KDKA from one of the station's European observers who are co-operating with the KDKA engineers in their short wave experimental work.

The static that is observed in the Alps locations at the sundown hour is merely occasional cracks, and not of the 'grinder' variety that is so destructive to good summer reception, according to the observer, Stanley McClatchie, an American electrical engineer living in Stuttgart.

He believes that the high potential electric disturbances in the Alps regions are absorbed by the high peaks of the Bernese Oberland mountains, thus eliminating static.

A Suggestion.

The best and quickest way to add water to the cells of a storage battery is to siphon the distilled water from the bottle through a rubber tube. Set the bottle on a shelf above the battery and start the action of the water by sucking on the open end of the tube. The flow of water may be regulated by pinching the tube.

BIG STARS ENGAGED FOR RADIO CHAIN

Atwater Kent Gives Out Imposing List of Performers for Coming Season.

A. Atwater Kent has announced that arrangements have been made to broadcast over the radio the world's leading opera singers and other musical stars starting Sunday night Oct. 4. These artists will broadcast at the Atwater Kent hour through WEAF and as many more stations on the WEAF network as can be arranged to handle these concerts at 9:15 each Sunday night from now until May 1. In addition to the 30 weekly Sunday superprograms through the WEAF network, a limited number of individual programs will be broadcast from stations in other cities. The details of these additional programs are being worked out as they depend upon the schedules of the famous artists in their concert tours throughout the country.

The first four superprograms will be: Oct. 4, Reinald Werrenrath; Oct. 11, Tescha Seidel; Oct. 18, Louise Homer; Oct. 25, Mabel Garrison. Among those artists who are definitely engaged for these programs are Homer, Garrison, Werrenrath, Spaulding, Case, Hempel, Lashanska, Seidel, Johnson, Brallowsky. Others for whose appearance negotiations are now pending are Schumann-Heink, Josef Hoffman, Metzanauer, Chaliapin, Mischa Elman and Bori.

FLORIDA NEWS

VOL. 1 — A NATIONAL NEWSPAPER, PUBLISHED BY THE FLORI DA SOCIETY OF AMERICA, HOLLYWOOD, FLORIDA — NO. 1

SPECULATORS WILL NEVER STOP FLORIDA

State's Future Is Absolutely Sure

Hollywood, Florida, Sept. 26.—"It is true that there is a great deal of speculation in land in Florida and it is probable that in some quarters prices at which sales are being made, do not correctly reflect actual values."

This is the frank answer of Joseph W. Young, founder and builder of Hollywood By-the-Sea, in Florida, to a question asking his opinion of the future of Florida.

"But in spite of speculation and some inflated prices," he continued, "the future of the state of Florida is assured.

"The growth of Florida during the next ten or twenty years will be on a foundation as substantial as was that of Ohio or Indiana or any of the other states that are so far ahead of Florida.

"Just at the minute this state is suffering with growing pains. So many people have been attracted suddenly that existing facilities are not adequate to take care of them. Some of them are going back to their original homes. But others keep coming.

"Unfortunately there is abroad in the land a feeling that money is growing on bushes in Florida. That misconception is attracting some people who have no business down here. They are the ones who are liable to get hurt. They have come merely to gamble and many gamblers lose.

"But gambling and speculation can not hurt the chief asset of Florida—her wonderful all-the-year climate. More and more people will come to Florida because they want to live here three months or twelve months of the year. They will buy land to use themselves. Cities like Hollywood By-the-Sea are being built by just that sort of people now—permanent cities where the population will continue to grow. And with steady, sure growth of permanent population naturally come commercial and industrial opportunities, which mean prosperity.

"The present hectic conditions will pass in due time and those individuals, institutions and communities that are keeping their heads clear and their feet on the ground, will emerge to reap the rewards of the pioneer. The speculator and the gambler will pass and their going will have only a helpful influence on the future of Florida which is as sure and certain as the rising of the sun tomorrow."

PEOPLE THINK OF FLORIDA IN NEW TERMS NOW

Up to the present time most people in Florida, and out of Florida, have thought of that state only for its climate, its timber, its agriculture, its citrus fruits and its early vegetables. They have not thought of it as having resources for great manufacturing interests. But today the industrial potentialities are beginning to attract attention. Manufacturers from other sections realize it has advantages for industrial pursuit far greater than those of many other states. It has many raw materials as its basis for industrial interests. A thorough industrial survey of the state would open up opportunities for the utilization of raw materials for industry not even dreamed of today by people who think they are fairly well informed as to the state.

The world has thought of Florida for its climate, as a winter resort for health and pleasure and for its fruits and vegetables; but now the world is thinking of Florida as the center of gigantic building operations, where marvelous hotel structures of today are being erected, and where scarcely a day passes that there is—not some announcement of a great scheme for apartment buildings, for costly hotels, for railroad expansion, for the utilization of the coast line in helping to take care of its ever increasing traffic.

Florida Leads Country In Phosphate Rock

Florida produces more phosphate rock than all the other states put together. In 1923 the phosphate rock mined in Florida amounted to 2,421,871 long ton out of a total for the United States of 2,943,566 ton. The value of the phosphate rock sold in the United States in 1923 was $11,576,049 and of this Florida sold $9,059,427 worth.

The government has two extensive phosphate reserves, one in Florida and the other in the western states. A total of 152,816 acres of phosphate land that's been reserved is in Florida. This is in small lots ranging from less than forty acres to one hundred and sixty acres in thirty-one counties. It is distributed in a broad belt that extends from the Apalachicola river at the northwest as far south as the mouth of the Caloosahatchee river, near Ft. Myers, and is from ten to one hundred miles wide.

DIVERSIFIED LINE OF PRODUCTS IS MADE IN FLORIDA

According to a report issued by the Department of Commerce the leading manufacturing industries in Florida produced last year manufactured products valued as follows: Lumber and timber products, $45,150,478; turpentine and rosin, $12,892,326; cigars and cigarettes, $35,958,350; car and general construction and repairs at steam railroad repair shops, $12,805,053; planing mill products, $7,758,482; boxes and wood packing cases, $5,241,906; ice, $5,686,090; printing and publishing newspapers and periodicals, $7,131,233; fertilizers, $12,038,885; bread and other bakery products, $5,304,056; cigar boxes, $2,236,151; foundry and machine shop products, $3,286,387; beverages, $3,419,618; books and job printing, $3,559,603; manufactured gas, $2,825,609; ship and boat building, $1,332,455.

CASH AWARDS ARE ANNOUNCED FOR JUNE 1 WINNERS

Hollywood, Florida, Sept. 26.—Dr. Charles Northen, 105 East Fifteenth Street, New York City, received $1,000 in cash from the Florida Society of America for the best suggestion of products to be manufactured, submitted before June 1. Earle D. Phillips, of Jacksonville, Fla., received $500 as second prize and Arthur Stanley Riggs, of Northport, Long Island, N. Y., received $250 as third prize.

These were the first cash awards made in the big Florida Industrial Contest being conducted by the Florida Society of America in an effort to obtain practical suggestions of products that can be economically manufactured in Florida. Similar special cash awards will be made by the Society for the best suggestions received between June 1 and October 1, and final grand prizes of $10,000, $4,000 and $1,000 with ten additional prizes of $100 each will be awarded later.

Persons desiring to enter the contest may do so without expense or obligation by sending their suggestions to the Florida Society of America, Joseph W. Young, President, with headquarters at Hollywood in Florida.

Reasons for Faith in Future of Florida

Florida today is dotted with hustling, thriving, growing cities. That is one of the solid reasons for faith in the permanent future of the state. On the east coast, on the west coast and inland there are numerous towns and small cities, industrial communities as well as resort centers, steadily and soundly making progress.

The state is steadily gaining in permanent population, offering a bright future to sturdy Americans. In every community are being constructed permanent buildings to meet the needs of the growing population. The certain and continued advancement of these towns and little cities of today is the bed-rock basis of Florida's prosperous future.

Hollywood in Florida Advertised Nationally

Hollywood, Florida, Sept. 26.—Florida is being nationally advertised for the first time by J. W. Young, president of the various Hollywood By-the-Sea enterprises, who is using national magazines with a total circulation of over 16,000,000, to present the story of Florida's attractiveness.

The first of the series of advertisements appears in October monthly magazines and mid-September numbers of weekly magazines. The advertisements are in four colors and present an alluring picture of the land of sunshine and flowers.

MANY RARE PRODUCTS GROWN COMMERCIALLY IN STATE OF FLORIDA

Here are a few of the many rare products of Florida which are grown commercially. Many others are being introduced.

Australian blackberries, Avocados, Blueberries, Bananas, Cocoanuts, Chayotes, Cherimoyas, Maumee Apples, Mangoes, Mangosteens, Natal Plums, Ornamental Plants, Palms, Papayas, Pineapples, Sapodillas, Sugar Apples, Tangelos, Tongue Oil Trees.

The board lumber output is 980,000,000 feet. The turpentine output is 8,920,000 gallons annually. The rosin output is 600,000 barrels.

Salt-water scale fish annual shipments amount to 58,400,000 pounds. Some of the leading edible salt-water fish are mullet, speckled trout, Spanish mackerel, king fish, shad, sturgeon, pompano, red snapper and the grouper.

The truly sport fish are the tarpon, sailfish and great barracuda.

The shellfish are the oyster and the clam. The output of these is 95,000 barrels a year. The shrimp and the crab are also caught in large quantities.

Sponges are marketed annually to the number of 2,000,000.

HOLLYWOOD IS TO HAVE DEEP WATER HARBOR

War Department Issues Permit For Florida

Washington, D. C., Sept. 26.—The War Department has issued a permit for the construction of a $15,000,000 harbor at Lake Mabel, Hollywood, Florida, and work has already begun on this enterprise which is expected to contribute more to the upbuilding of industry in Florida than any other single influence.

Plans for the Hollywood Harbor were approved by Gen. George W. Goethals, chief consulting engineer of the project, and submitted to the War Department under his direction. The engineers of the War Department made a thorough inspection of the site as well as a careful examination of the plans before the official permit was issued. The harbor is being built by private enterprise and no financial assistance from the government is asked.

The plans call for the cutting of a channel through a narrow neck of land which separates Lake Mabel from the Atlantic Ocean, and the deepening of the basin of the lake to accommodate ships of 35 feet draught.

The Hollywood Harbor will be one of the most complete deep-water harbors between Philadelphia and South America. Both passenger and freight boats of large capacity will be accommodated. Extensive tracts of land have been reserved for manufacturing plants near the wharves and there will be ample space for attractive homes for those who are employed in the factories.

The addition of this modern port terminal to those at Jacksonville and Miami, which are already overtaxed, will materially increase the transportation facilities of southeastern Florida and thereby contribute to the industrial welfare of the whole state.

FLORIDA MAKES NEW RECORD IN MANUFACTURING

Florida's manufactured products in 1919 amounted to $213,327,000 as compared with $72,889,659 in 1909. Since 1919 a large number of manufacturing plants have been established in Florida and the value of products is greatly increased.

Florida lumber and timber products in 1923 were valued at $35,150,478. There is estimated to be in Florida 36,429,300,000 feet of merchantable pine lumber standing. Only Louisiana and Mississippi of all the southern states have more available pine lumber.

Florida exports for the first quarter of 1925 were valued at $7,867,726, an increase of approximately $1,800,000 over the corresponding period of last year.

$20,000 IN CASH WILL BE PAID FOR NEW IDEAS

Florida Wants to Know What to Manufacture

Hollywood, Florida, Sept. 26.—More than $20,000 in cash prizes will be distributed to persons who make the best suggestions of products to be manufactured in Florida.

This is the offer made by the Florida Society of America, through its president, Joseph W. Young, and thousands of suggestions have already been entered in the contest.

It is the belief of the Society that Florida is destined to become one of the world's important industrial centers and that the general prosperity of the United States will be advanced by increased industrial activity in this oldest, yet in many respects, newest state of the Union.

The Society has prepared for free distribution a booklet telling of the natural resources of Florida and explaining the industrial contest in detail. This booklet will be sent free and without obligation to anyone who requests it from the Florida Society of America, Hollywood, Florida.

CITRUS FRUIT INDUSTRY IS ON INCREASE

During the season of 1924-25 Florida produced twenty-two oranges and five grape fruit for every man, woman and child in the United States. In the last twenty years California's production of citrus fruits has more than doubled while Florida has recorded an increase of one-hundred thirty-five per cent within the last five years.

The growth of the citrus industry in Florida reads almost like a fairy tale and it has not yet begun to approach its peak. There is almost no limit to the amount of citrus fruit that can be produced in Florida. Production now is limited almost entirely by the capacity to market these fruits. There are wonderful opportunities in Florida for men capable of developing more efficient methods of distributing and marketing citrus fruits.

Miami Bank Clearings Reflect Money Turnover

Miami, Florida, Sept. 26.—Bank clearings in this city are averaging from ten to fifteen times the amount of the same day last year. The daily clearings are now running from five to seven million dollars a day.

The grand prize for the best suggestion submitted is $10,000; the second prize is $4,000; the third prize is $1,000 and there are ten final prizes of $100 each.

MORE PRIZES TO BE GIVEN OCTOBER 1

There Is Yet Time To Enter Contest

BULLETIN.

Hollywood, Florida, Sept. 26.—The second period of the Florida Industrial Contest closes October 1 and special prizes of $1,000, $500 and $250 will be paid in cash for the best three suggestions of products to be manufactured in Florida, submitted between June 1 and October 1. These prizes will be in addition to the grand prizes of $10,000, $4,000 and $1,000 to be awarded later. Suggestions postmarked October 1 at place of mailing will be considered in making the special awards.

The Florida East Coast Railway double track work is being vigorously prosecuted. The company is building a $3,000,000 bridge over the St. Johns river.

How Much of This $20,000 Will We Pay You for Your Suggestion?

We will pay you $10,000 in cash—the first grand prize—if you are the one who tells us what is best suited for manufacture in Florida.

We will pay you $4,000 in cash—the second grand prize—if your suggestion is the second best received during this contest.

We will pay you $1,000 in cash—the third grand prize—if you are the one who gives us the third best suggestion.

We will pay you $100 in cash—one of the ten final prizes—if your suggestion is among the next ten best received.

And we will pay you one of the three extra cash prizes of $1,000—$500 or $250, if your suggestion is one of three best received during the second period of the contest ending October 1.

Mail The Coupon Below Now!

The coupon below will bring you free and without obligation, the Florida Industrial Contest booklet. It gives full details of the Contest—the complete list of cash prizes—and it tells you how to submit your suggestion. Mail the coupon NOW, so you may get your copy of the contest booklet and have your suggestion in the mail without delay.

The Florida Industrial Contest is a movement in the interest of further development of industry in the state of Florida as a whole, and in the city of Hollywood By-the-Sea—a thriving, growing sea-side city situated about 20 miles north of Miami.

The contest is divided into three periods. The first period ended June 1—and we have already paid $1,000, $500 and $250 for the three best suggestions received. The second period of the contest will end October 1, and similar cash prizes will be paid. And at the end of the contest, the grand awards will be made.

It costs you nothing to enter this contest. There is absolutely no obligation on your part. You have everything to win and nothing to lose. You owe it to yourself to mail the coupon now.

A Plea for the Return Of Romance to the Stage And Less "Slices of Life"

By HARRY R. BURKE.

"WHITE CARGO" has finished three weeks in St. Louis. "No, No, Nannette" is entering upon its second week of three at the American and tonight "Rose-Marie" opens a three weeks' engagement at the Shubert-Jefferson. That scarcely is coincidence. There has a change come over Broadway's dreams of what it calls "the hinterland." The New York managers seem to have had a flash". Possibly they have discovered indications of a theater-going public in St. Louis. It seems impossible that things could have gone on as they were. St. Louis, with its great theatrical tradition, was rapidly becoming less than a "week-stand" town. Yet lovers of the drama are not few in this city. Broadway had produced a vicious circle. It had advertised "original New York casts" until those words became a talisman. It had failed—and notably failed—to keep its promises. The result was inevitable and obvious. St. Louis waited before it purchased the Broadway wares. Two and three days of an engagement passed with the players facing half-filled auditoriums. Then—if the wares were up to St. Louis standard—St. Louis bought. The last three days of many an engagement made the difference between a handsome profit and a likely heavy loss.

That was the story, if you please, of three quite significant plays in the last five years: that rollicking Irish comedy, "The White-Haired Boy," "The Emperor Jones" and "He Who Gets Slapped." So much at the time did the managers confide to me. And in each case they volunteered a conviction that a second week of each of those plays would have been greeted by full houses.

At the same time "Smilin' Thru" was successfully returning to St. Louis and "Lightnin'" was repeating extended engagements here. Possibly New York was testing out our mettle by its Broadway yardstick. Then came "Abie's Irish Rose"—13 weeks of it!

All these things are but straws to indicate the wind's direction. Certainly the test of "White Cargo" is no more than a straw. It survived a three weeks' run, but not with great profit here. Opinions differ widely on the merit of the play. That need not be discussed just now. It is obvious that as weather for the first two of its three weeks' engagement would have driven almost anyone from the theater, not into it. Nor can the experience of "No, No, Nannette" and "Rose-Marie" be of real significance in measuring St. Louis as a dramatic purchaser. Musical comedy is not drama.

SHUBERT-JEFFERSON—"Rose-Marie," a musical play which has been highly successful in New York and elsewhere. The cast is headed by Maria Shamshon, Hungarian prima donna, and among others in the company are Gy Robertson, Sibylla Bowhan, Charley Sylber, Arthur Cunningham and Betty Byron.

AMERICAN—Second week of "No, No, Nannette," one of the most delightful and entertaining musical comedies which has ever been seen in St. Louis. Julia Sanderson, Donald Brian, Frank Crumit, and charming Ona Munson are the stars.

ORPHEUM—Miss Alba Tiberio, Italian actress who gives a whole vaudeville show alone; "Oklahoma" Bob Albright, tenor; Harry Kahne, mental wizard, in a new act; and five other variety acts.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE—"Echoes of Scotland," a song dance and music revue, and seven other vaudeville turns, with "The Love Hour," featuring Huntly Gordon and Louise Fazenda, on the screen.

EMPRESS—The Woodward Players in "The Whole Town's Talking," a farce comedy in three acts, by John Emerson and Anita Loos. The more important roles will be carried by Glynn McFarlane, Leona Powers, Gilberta Faust, Raymond Brown, Arthur Allard, Georgia Neese and Bobby Reed.

YIDDISH THEATER SEASON OPENS AT ODEON OCT. 3

Musical Play to Start the Season With a Company of New York Performers.

The regular season of the Yiddish Theater in St. Louis will begin Saturday evening, Oct. 3, at the Odeon Theater with a cast of actors from New York. This year's plays will be produced on an elaborate scale, particularly the musical productions. In addition to the regular company a permanent chorus and ballet will be employed.

A novelty of the coming season will also be the engagement of a musical director who will direct an orchestra and also write appropriate music for the various plays. S. Steinberg, whose name is well known in Yiddish theatrical circles of New York, has been engaged for this purpose. Isidor Klein, veteran of the stage, has been appointed stage director.

For the opening performance the "Golden Bride," a musical play has been selected.

At the Movie Houses

LOEW'S STATE—Mary Pickford in "Little Annie Rooney."

MISSOURI—Thomas Meighan in "The Man Who Found Himself." On the stage, Harry Jolson and Southern Serenaders.

GRAND CENTRAL, WEST END LYRIC AND CAPITOL—Milton Sills in "The Knockout."

DELMONTE—"Rugged Waters," with Lois Wilson, Wallace Beery and Warner Baxter and Buck Jones in "The Timber Wolf."

KINGS AND RIVOLI—Eugene O'Brien and Claire Windsor in "Souls for Sables."

MORNING CHORAL CLUB'S LOAN FUND FOR SINGERS

The Morning Choral Club will have a hearing on Thursday afternoon, Oct. 15, for the club vocal scholarship loan fund, which is open to either young men or women singers in St. Louis or within 25 miles radius of the city. A thousand dollars may be borrowed by the one who, according to a committee of judges, including Charles Galloway, E. R. Kroeger and Mrs. A. D. Chappell, is best qualified and most deserving of aid in completing his or her musical education.

At a hearing last spring, which was the first for the loan fund, no award was made as the committee found no one qualified.

A form of requirements for the loan may be obtained from Miss Lavinia Gauen, 4012 Flora boulevard.

U. S. COMPOSER HONORED

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 26.—Maurice Arnold, a New York composer and a pupil of Anton Dvorak, has been honored by having his "String Quartet in G" accepted for production this winter by the Issay Barmas Quartet in Berlin and the Zimmermann quartet in Amsterdam. His violin concerto also is to be produced by Fritz Kerkhoff in Amsterdam.

The quartet abounds in American motifs and humor, especially in the scherzo part, but in form follows Brahms and on the whole is an exposition of the romantic school of composing. Arnold ascribes his ease in placing the quartet to the fact that there is a definite reversion in Germany and Holland from extreme futurism in music, as exemplified by Stravinsky, to more conservative and melodious forms.

Second Thoughts ON First Nights

By Alexander Woollcott

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.

WITH their second play called "First Flight," the authors of "What Price Glory" have come a considerable cropper. By the time these lines are read, the fading fineries of earlier failures will be huddling closer in some cold warehouse to make room for its tawny buckskin breeches, its coonskin caps, its rusty flintlocks and long braces of wicked old pistols, its noggins of rum and the tall kegs from which enough potations could be poured in 10 minutes to make even the Major a tolerably inaccurate spitter. This is as it should be. For "First Flight" was garrulous and at times unbelievably aimless, presenting an uncommonly difficult problem to any producer who ventured to transfer its manifold excellence from the library to the stage. Arthur Hopkins met this challenge by sponsoring a performance so slovenly, inert and excruciatingly uninteresting as to place an indelible stain upon his record as a producer.

As the yawning and indifferent trucks back up to the stagedoor of the Plymouth on Monday morning to tote away the memorabilia of "First Flight" they will have to drive carefully through the clamorous crowds surging towards the box office of the Music Box across the street. There a tide of bawdry (wherein three neglected middle-aged women are wooed to the squealing edge of disheveilment by three undergraduates in need of pocket money) is drawing such a multitude and eliciting therefrom such howls of delight as not only to make the judicious grieve, but to make the judicious actively ill.

And this obituary notice is written here only in an effort to make it quite clear that I would far, far rather have written "First Flight" than "Cradle Snatchers."

FOR "First Flight" was a fine aspiration, a play glamorous now and then with some beautiful writing, a hearty man's-size work with the smell of the American earth in it, and in it, too, a relish for an elder day as warming to the heart as might be some stout punch lovingly brewed by a chuckling darky behind the jealousies of an old New Orleans house.

It is an infuriating thing that Arthur Hopkins should have joined with the authors to make a frowsy and prodigiously dull evening out of what might so easily have been a magnificent experience in the theater, a desolating thing that such mischievous forces of carelessness and bad luck should have combined malignantly to frustrate so noble an intention.

FOR "First Flight" was one of the few plays written in my time that really attempted to catch up and convert to the uses of the stage some fragment of the American epic, some bit of the infinite wealth of American folklore, some recaptured scene and hour of an America that used to be.

For the most part, one play is written from another, its puppets dancing their little rigadoon of love and hate in wingless space. There are, to be sure, occasional efforts largest possible first-night audiences for a few plays of eminent worth. The group is small, as yet, but determined. It seems to have made the difference between profit and loss in more than one instance last season. Such organizations co-operating in a dozen key cities would have assured profitable tours to productions which in the past have languished and died on the way to St. Louis. And if the Guild here is a success, similar organizations elsewhere will follow.

Something like this must be done. Not to secure success to a garden of "Abie's Irish Roses," for they will take care of themselves, but to prevent the art of drama from being engulfed by musical comedy and the movies.

They are the Scylla on one hand, the Charybdis on the other, which sore beset the drama's barque, and Augustus Thomas, though he be a Nestor among playwrights, is no Ulysses.

It is easy to remark that the movies and musical comedy have driven drama from our national stage—unless sporadic efforts on Broadway may be considered national affairs—but one must ponder long before essaying to say why. My own conviction is that the matter is not a question of economics but of art. The fascination of art is in an escape from reality to beauty. Art is more rare in musical comedy and pictures than it is on the stage. But it is easier to escape from the realities through the movies or musical comedy than through the great flood of inSignificant and realistic pseudo-drama poured forth upon this country every year. Man will escape from gray humdrum and routined perplexities. If Beauty opens her doors he will enter. If not, let Cheapness beckon him and he will go. Musical comedy and the movies offer the escape of cheapness—a very different word, you will perceive, from inexpensiveness—and they have been offering it for years, while the spoken stage through its prophets has been preaching a "return to nature" by holding up the mirror to humdrum insignificance.

A Plea for Romance.

SO that at last my conviction becomes a plea for a return to the romantic stage. The whole history of the stage reinforces this plea. The very physical facts which surround it are the props of the theory. Romance does not mean fustian, but—the gods be thanked—it does not mean a "cross-section of life." The stage is not a microscopic slide, nor are we scientists to study thereupon the tortured wrigglings of that microcism, Man. It is a land of Make-believe. It is the toy with which we—as our children with less expensive toys—may "play pretend." So it has always been except when, as in the days of ancient Greece, it was a place of worship to celebrate the mysteries of life. Never—you see—a place to analyze life, but always a dominion wherein to escape from life.

In the end realism and romance are but relative terms. The thing which counts is the magic of escape. The method may be as romantic as Shakspeare's, as realistic as Eugene O'Neill's—so long as it is but method. But the latter years of the last century made a god of method. Name Mr. Thomas and Mr. Belasco, who survive into this century, and you will see the point. With the rule of photographic likeness in the theater the escape from life went out.

Then, so it seems to me, the doom of our present theater was sounded. What it refused the movies and musical comedy in their cheaper way provided. This at least was some sort of release. Not only did the theater suffer. Life itself suffered. I was not one of those fortunate enough to know the days of the Olympic, Tony Faust's and the Southern Hotel. The theater then had carried over its land of make-believe into the margins of real life. It had provided still another escape—through social graces, gentle manners, gay wit and humorous persiflage. There are some of us who feel the need of that social margin in our lives quite as much as the need of the theater's escape from humdrum. It has been shouldered aside to make way for the movies and jazz dancing, but the theater itself first opened the way when it refused the more graceful and romantic scene.

A week ago today the Post-Dispatch chronicled the passing of Caesar's cafe—the last leaf on the tree of those old memories. Within the week Clark MacAdams has arisen in the forum of "Just-a-Minute" to bury Caesar's (and to praise it). Doubtless it is true that prohibition helped to weave the winding sheet. But the old life, with its laughter, its charm, its wit, its grace of manner, began to pass long, long before the prohibition era. Who, indeed, can say how much Realism hurried on the latter. Alcohol itself is an escape from the humdrum into the purple patches of romance. Did drinking increase when romance was driven from the stage? That is a question for a Federal Council of Theaters. I do not know. But I suspect it did.

Some day, perhaps, we will take our theater for what it is—a mental playground, an escape from life. Its field will be as broad as man's imagination. Everything will be possible to it. The catchwords of technique and the various schools will be forgotten. The play, the thought, will be presented in the mood that gives us greatest freedom from our workaday selves. The release will be complete, and it will come to us as it only can come, through Mystery and Romance, those great springs which have been the fountain of drama since the days of ancient Greece.

WOOLLOTT'S SECOND THOUGHTS ON FIRST NIGHTS OF PLAYS

to transfer some striking historical figure to the stage. Thus in recent years Washington, Lincoln, Jackson, Grant have trod our boards in an intensely biographical manner, stalking through plays that have ranged all the way from really fine to really awful.

But for a playwright to bring back for its own sweet sake a lost day out of the American story, breathing the air of a cleaner-greener land, speaking the argot of a now obliterated frontier, lingering as long and fondly in forgotten folkways as, for instance, Winston Churchill loitered in the cobbled streets of old Annapolis to write the fine, neglected early chapters of "Richard Carvel"—such an achievement is rarer far. Such an attempt, at least, was "First Flight". Wherefore I take it to be a considerable impertinence even to mention in the same breath with it such gimcrack, popinjay playwriting as "the Awful Mrs. Eaton."

THE year of "First Flight" is 1788, the place a logwood settlement on the still perilous trace that led over the hills from the Carolinas to the turbulent village of Nashville. Into such a community of buckskin farmers and blackleg lawyers, a clearing in the forest primeval filled with the rough talk of vigorous men, rides a red-headed lad with a racing mare, a spot-in' dog, a dusky servitor and two fighting chickens. His name is Captain Andy Jackson and at the end of his road are the seats of the mighty.

But at this time he is just a braggart nobody who has seen a sight of killing in his day, his brow scarred with the sword of the red-coat lieutenant whose boots he had declined to polish as a boy, his cheek pocked with the smallpox he had caught in a British prison. A good deal of a mucker is Captain Andy—a mucker and a bully, a lad that has learned everything out of books and taverns and nothing from his mother.

In the 24 hours which "First Flight" allots to his youth, he drinks a double glass of the finest, sits in for a time in a whist game, picks a quarrel with two hard-rowelling, close-shooting gentlemen, attends the shivaree and shakedown at the clearing that night, dances a reel at moondown, fights a pistol duel with the two best shots in all the countryside and at dawn rides off along the trail to Nashville, leaving behind him a little mountain girl to sit forlorn on her hope chest in the loft and cry her heart out for love for one who had looked so young and pretty, in his owl-blue uniform.

All this, mind you, against a background of buckskins who end-up their demijohns and talk thick and wild in the moonlight, thick and wild. All this in a community of which the already legendary hero is Dan'l Boone, who once fit for seven hours and stopped only because his two arms were broken. Dan'l Boone, who dwelt with the Indian tribes for 307 days and after whose escape, the lamentations of his widows started the Elk River out of its banks and cleaved its present bed deep enough for flat-boat navigation. Why, gentlemen, the tale of Dan'l's offspring numbered 314 infants, only seven brace of them being born twins.

SUCH a play, windy as the tavern speech it relished so greatly, would need as perfect a cast as was the portion of "What Price Glory?" to have made it seem half as interesting. The role of Capt. Andy Jackson was played by Rudolph Cameron, whom Mr. Hopkins found treading a neat measure and singing "A Year From Today" in "Sitting Pretty."

But ten years ago, he had seemed destined for better things in the theater, for at that time he gave a really extraordinary performance in a short-lived play called "Rich Man, Poor Man," which was attended by very few persons besides himself.

One of them, however, must have been Mr. Hopkins. Perhaps Mr. Cameron was unequal to the role of the fiery Capt. Jackson, or perhaps he was overawed by the Hopkins tradition of restraint and subdued soft speech. At all events he played the terrifying and insolent young captain in so mild mannered and meek a fashion that the very sense of the scenes evaporated.

Then, the wild, sweet-blooded wonderful mountain girl was played by a young actress so sweet and so civilized and so immature that the love scenes took on the flavor of a cantata written and acted at Miss Spence's for the commencement exercises. And finally the long, long scenes of unctuous and savorous verbiage which were supposed to recapture the spirit of a more specious day were rendered into leaden tedium by the circumstance that the players (going the Hopkins tradition of restraint and soft, subdued speech one better) restrained and subdued themselves to a point where they could not be heard at all.

Jeritza Here Oct. 16

MARIA JERITZA is to open the St. Louis music season with a song recital under the direction of Elizabeth Obeny at the Odeon on Friday evening, Oct. 16. Assisting the prima donna will be Maxmillian Rose, violinist, and Emil Polak, pianist. Mme. Jeritza's concert tour will precede her winter engagement at the Metropolitan. She arrives in New York from Europe tomorrow, and will include Montreal, Toronto, Wheeling, St. Louis, Cleveland, Rochester and Providence in a brief tour before reporting to Manager Gatti-Casazza.

Will Rogers Coming to the Odeon.

Will Rogers, the humorist, comes to the Odeon Friday evening, Nov. 9, in company with an American singing organization, the De Reszke Singers, a quartet of young men who were coached by Jean de Reszke and whose work, it is said, has been indorsed by such singers as Mary Garden and John McCormack. The members of the quartet are Hardesty Johnson, Floyd Townsley, Howard Kellogg and Erwyn Mutch.

Civic Music League Concerts.

Members of the Civic Music League will fill at least two-thirds of the capacity of the Odeon for its course of concerts during the coming season. Final notice to delinquents was mailed last week, and on Monday at the Cuney ticket office at 1004 Olive street new members will be accepted to fill any vacancies. The five numbers announced for this year's concert course of that organization includes the Pavley-Oukrainsky ballet, Nov. 3; Alexander Brailowsky, pianist, Dec. 1; Charles Marshall, tenor, with Katherine Meisle, contralto, Jan. 5; and the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, Feb. 2.

SIANS CALLING 'HELLO' AT PHONE

oting Other American Cus-ns and Reading Up on Ford,
Says St. Louis Traveler.

American business methods are g closely studied and followed Soviet Russia, according to Gus-e Klemmer, professor of ac-nting and industrial manage-t at St. Louis University, who rned recently from a three-nth tour of Europe.

The itinerary included England,
ce, Switzerland, Germany, Pod, Latvia, Lithuania, Austria, ce, Switzerland and Czechokia, but he spent most of his e in Russia, of which he is a ve. He has lived more than 30
rs in Europe.

I was surprised to find that one the favorite books of the Rus-ns is a translation of the autoraphy of Henry Ford," Prof. emmer said. "But then the ssians are much interested in erica and Americans, despite e fact that Americans themselves
e not exactly welcome in Russia e to lack of diplomatic rela-ns and trade.

Wage Plan Is Studied.

Even with the telephone sysm, however, the Russians are pting our customs and the word llo' is used on the phone instead some Russian equivalent. And erican plans of wage payments being considered and studied in ny of the large industrial dis-cts.

Food conditions in Russia, I und, were very good and living ts reasonable. The greatest draw-ck to the enjoyment of peace is e prohibition upon free speech d the resultant fear that one may e called before a court any mont to explain even a casual con-rsation. There is also a strict nsorship of press.

The turnover in social condins has allowed morality to drop to a low ebb, and there are ny illegitimate children. Relign, the lack of which had some-ng to do with the low moral el, is coming back to Russia
w, however.

Open Practice of Faith.

Due to an increasing public sen-ent, persecutions against relign have virtually ceased and the w now permits the open practice any faith. The Government is using influence to destroy region, however, and the public ools particularly are used as ans for winning the youth away
m the religion of their fathers d inculcating the characteristic eism of the soviet.

"Housing conditions are bad, parcularly in the large cities, and as remedy for congestion the Gov-nment has taken charge of habiions and apportions them, a cerin number of square feet to the rson. As an instance of the anner of this regulation, the ife of a friend of mine who had ed in Moscow was notified on the ath of her husband was buried that e must give up one of her rooms, ich she no longer needed it."

NAMES FOR CHEAP FURS

Fashion of Rat, Mole, Cat and Rabbit Erased.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Sept. 26.—The new furs which the world of fashion will ear this winter will introduce ral names that smack of the ay and strange. The list in-des "gallak," "Pahmd," "Burns-ky" and "sulesky" which will signate a variety of furs which l be worn in Paris by those who not attain to sables, silver fox d other varieties already famous.
ere are others, hardly less strikg—"golden brown beaver," "Inn mouse," "silver seal," "gae," "shaded, smoked and spot-d Mongolia."

A rose by any other name would ell as sweet, the furriers argue, t who believes that these furs
th strange new names would ell their attraction if they were ld with the names of the ins that originally wore them, the rate, mole, cat, rabbit and ons of this prosaic category?

HAMLET FIRST SHOWN IN 1600

Shakespeare League Member Says He Has Positive Proof.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 26.—W. J. Law-on of the London Shakspeare ague, claims that he has found disputable proof that "Hamlet" as first produced in 1600, instead the date usually assigned to this y, 1601, and that he will give tails of the opening night of akspeare's famous tragedy in tures which he expects to deer shortly at Harvard Univery.

Other members of the London akspeare League also report rent discoveries, giving new details garding the poet's career. St.
hn Ervine, the dramatist and ctor, recently found an old ok in an English country house hich makes many personal refer-ces to Shakspeare and proves, in
Mr. Irvine's opinion, that the mas-r dramatist was a man of emi-nce among his contemporaries.

Bachelor Offers to Sell Freedom.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 26.—"I will sell my sole possession, viz., my golden bachelor's freedom, to the highest bidder," is the frank matrimonial advertisement recently inserted by Heinrich Eisler, a merchant of Altona, in the Hamburger Fremdenblatt. Eisler describes himself as 35 years old, of an open and trustworthy character, a lover of art and nature. He announced that bids from women up to 40 years of age would be considered.

QUEEN MARY DANCED TANGO WITH SERVANT, RUMOR SAYS

Occasion Was Annual Ball at Balmoral Castle Where Royalty Mix With Maids and Milkmen.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 26.—If one can believe the gossip that comes filtering to Mayfair from Balmoral Castle, the royal residence in Scotland where the King and Queen have been spending the summer, Queen Mary recently danced the Frenchy tango with one of her head servants at the annual servants' ball, with which their majesties entertain their Scottish servants and tenants each September.

In former years the Queen has confined her dancing to the dignified waltz. It was only recently that for the first time she was persuaded to take up the fox trot, and now comes the story that she can do the tango, and in fact has done it.

Visitors to the servants' ball at Balmoral Castle are greatly sought after even by the aristocrats who go to Scotland every autumn, but few of them are allowed to join in those festivities in which royalty rubs shoulders with "gillies," chambermaids, valets and milkmen.

Jubilee Named for Jack Hobbs.

LONDON, Sept. 26.—A curious English counterpart of the all-time American habit of recognizing greatness by giving a man's name to a brand of liquor revealed itself at the horticultural show when a new multicoloured dahlia was shown and named. It was named the "Jack Hobbs dahlia," after the modern king of professional cricketers. Not only has he extended the record of 126 "centuries," made by the greatest of his predecessors, W. G. Grace, but in his benefit this year previous aggregate runs in a season, which was 2427 in 1901, A "century" is 100 or more runs scored by a batsman in a single inning.

Golden Wedding Medal Revived.

BERLIN, Sept. 2.—The pre-war custom of decorating married couples who celebrate golden wedding anniversaries is to be revived by the Prussian Government. A specially coined medal will be presented in each case.

Come to CORAL GABLES

THERE is only one Coral Gables. It is the finest suburb of Miami, Florida — the fastest growing city in the world. Its fame as the choicest beauty spot of the American Tropics has traveled far. It is the first place that the visitor from the North wants to see on arrival. He either stays here to make his home or goes away an investor.

Here is a great city-region of ten thousand acres richly endowed by nature and climate. Stately amid the graceful Caribbean pine, the coconut palm, the royal poinciana and the bougainvillea and hibiscus, rise more than a thousand distinctive homes built by people of discrimination and culture. Beauty is paramount everywhere. In the tinted tiles of the housetops, and the imposing stairway of the luxurious Miami-Biltmore Country Club. In the miles of Waterways winding down to Biscayne Bay and in the wealth of tropical foliage a-droop on their banks.

Promise and Performance

Coral Gables is noted for carrying to rapid completion great public and semi-public building projects that enhance the value of surrounding property many times over. A list of some of its more outstanding developments of recent months includes:

Completed
Bank of Coral Gables
Coral Gables Postoffice
Telephone Exchange
Congregational Church
Five modern fireproof hotels
Venetian Casino and Pool Administration Building
Coral Gables Country Club
Two fine golf courses
Nearly 1000 private homes
Coral Gables Military Academy
120 miles paved streets

Under Construction
Miami-Biltmore Hotel, 850 rooms
Miami-Biltmore Country Club
College for Young Women
Coral Gables High School
Ten miles of waterways
Two new golf courses
Coral Gables Theater

Announced
The University of Miami
Sanitarium and Healthatorium
Mahi Shrine Temple
Miami Biltmore Casino
1000 Riviera homes
Lido-Seville hotel
Anastasia Hotel

In every aspect, Coral Gables gives evidence of having traveled far on the road to becoming the outstanding residential, sports and educational center of America. Its thousand residences include cottages and palaces. Its institutional features number among others the proposed University of Miami costing $15,000,000. Its sports project reach their peak in the $10,000,000 Miami-Biltmore hotel and sports center.

These various features of delightful home life and of institutional investment are important factors in the enhancement of values. The investor who grasps their significance and buys now in the new Riviera section at pre-development prices is the man or woman who will reap the splendid profits of tomorrow. AFTER FORTY YEARS OF SUFFERING NATURE'S OWN REMEDY BRINGS RELIEF

Well-Known Saint Louis Woman Says the Famous Remedy, Herb Juice, Relieved Her of Stomach, Liver and Kidney Trouble, from Which She Had Suffered for Forty Long Years.

MRS. JOHN BUGH

"I am lost for words to express my gratitude for the wonderful relief which I have obtained through the use of your great remedy, Herb Juice," said Mrs. John Bugh, 1630 Arlington Ave., St. Louis, Mo., when I called to see the Herb Juice lately very recently.

"I think" continued Mrs. Bugh, "that Herb Juice is a God-send to humanity. I have never in all my life had the pleasure of using any medicine that so wonderfully purified my whole system. I am now 67 years old and forty years of that time I have suffered almost constantly with a very bad case of stomach trouble. I have never been able to eat the things I wanted without suffering great pain and gas on my stomach and around my heart. As I grew older my condition grew worse, and in recent years I have been extremely nervous. I was also very bilious and my kidneys gave me considerable trouble. It seemed that there was a uric acid condition in my blood which caused me to suffer a great deal from rheumatism. My joints were stiff and I had a numb aching feeling in my feet and lower limbs. I was in a terrible condition generally, and it seemed that nothing I could take would give me any relief until I started using your wonderful remedy, Herb Juice. Before I had finished my first bottle I noticed that I was beginning to feel very much improved, so I continued taking it and today I am thankful to say that I think it is the greatest medicine of all time. I am never troubled any more with my stomach; those horrible pains which I used to suffer from gas have entirely vanished. I am never nervous or bilious any more and my kidneys are in splendid condition. I now eat anything I want without having any bad after effect from it and my nerves have quieted down until I can rest peacefully and undisturbed. This is the first time since I was just a girl that I have really had so much energy and ambition. I feel years younger and my color is better. I really think that everyone should have a bottle of Herb Juice in their house at all times, because it is without a question of a doubt in my mind the greatest of all tonic laxatives. Let me repeat again that I think it is a God-send to mankind and that I will always be found boosting Herb Juice to everyone."

Hundreds are now calling daily to see the Herb Juice man, who has established headquarters at Judge & Dolph Drug Co., 514 Washington Ave., pending statements for publication and praising Herb Juice that their friends may be induced to try the great remedy which is relieving so many sufferers in St. Louis. Medical News Service of St. Louis Tuberculosis Society

No. 9—Tuberculin in the Diagnosis of Tuberculosis.

This is the ninth of a series of articles on matters pertaining to tuberculosis which are being prepared by medical experts and distributed among St. Louis physicians by the Tuberculosis Society of St. Louis. The others will be sent out every week, and will contain the latest medical information on the subject.

Tuberculin was first introduced by Robert Koch in 1890. Since then it has been used as a theapeutic agent and as a diagnostic measure in tuberculosis. It is a product prepared from the tubercle bacillus, the active principle being the product of the organism. Its chemical nature is not definitely known, but belongs to the split protein group. There are many varieties of tuberculin, but in general they may be classified under three groups, according to the manner in which they are prepared:

1. Those containing only the soluble products of the tubercle bacillus in the media in which they are grown.
2. Those consisting essentially of the water insoluble substances.
3. Those containing both one and two.

Koch's old tuberculin, OT, is an example of the first type; Koch's new tuberculin, TR, of the second; and Koch's bacillen emulsion, BE, of the third.

When tuberculins are injected even in large doses into an individual free from tuberculosis no reactions or symptoms take place. If, however, tuberculosis is present, there follows within 24 hours a rise in temperature and a feeling of general malaise. This general reaction is accompanied by a local reaction at the point of infection, which becomes hyperemic. Tuberculous patients react to very minute quantities of tuberculin, but when used properly, no danger is incurred from the reaction, which is even held by some to be a positive benefit, if mild.

The two tests most frequently used are the cutaneous and subcutaneous. Koch's Old Tuberculin is employed.

Cutaneous Method.

This procedure devised by Von Pirquet is as follows: On the cleansed forearm apply one drop of Koch's Old Tuberculin, undiluted and one drop of concentrated glycerin bouillon for control about two inches apart. A slight abraision of the surface of the skin is then made through these drops, sufficient pressure being applied to abrade the surface without drawing blood. If the patient reacts there will appear within 24 or 28 hours a papule surrounded by a hyperemic zone, one to one and a half inches in diameter. In children under 2 years of age a positive reaction is strongly suggestive of active tuberculosis. However, in the adult, a positive reaction does not necessarily indicate active tuberculosis. A negative test is of more value.

Subcutaneous Method.

A two-hour temperature chart should be kept for several days preceding the test as well as during the test. An initial hypodermic injection of 0.1 mg. of old tuberculin is given, and if no reaction follows this, it is repeated in two days, using 1 mg., and if that is negative it is followed in 48 hours by 5 mg., and if this is negative, a final dose of 10 mg. is given. Should a positive reaction take place it usually occurs within 24 hours, with a rise of temperature of at least 1 degree, headache, a local reaction and the appearance of rales or moisture (focal reaction) in the suspected area of the lung in some cases. When a focal reaction occurs, it is specific and nearly always means active disease. The danger of its use is slight. Reactions, even when severe, without focal changes may or may not mean active disease. Increase of physical signs occurs in about one-third of all cases. Tuberculin should be used diagnostically only in border-line cases, when all other means at our disposal fail to make a conclusive diagnosis of active tuberculosis. Patients running a temperature over 99.5 F. ore not suitable for tuberculin subcutaneously for diagnosis.

In practice, exposure to infection, characteristic symptoms, such as haemoptysis, dry pleurisy, localized persistent rales at one apex and afternoqn rise of temperature are diagnostic data of far more importance in clinical tuberculosis than those derived from the tuberculin test alone.

A positive general reaction when only doubtful symptoms of tuberculosis are present is of uncertain value, unless the pulmonary symptoms and signs are definitely increased during the reaction.

A negative general reaction is the strongest evidence we have against active tuberculosis. A positive focal reaction in an individual having fever is one of the strongest evidences we have for active pulmonary tuberculosis. Tuberculin for diagnosis is a valuable aid but should be used with extreme caution and only when other diagnostic measures have failed, and there still remains a suspicion of active tuberculosis.

For further information regarding tuberculosis, sanatoria, or general public health questions, call or write "Information Service," Tuberculosis Society of St. Louis, 702 Equitable Building, telephone Olive 4004.

C. A. NEWTON TO ADDRESS IZAAK WALTON LEAGUE

Congressman to Speak on Conservation of Resources Tomorrow Evening at Soldan H. S.

The principal features of the meeting of the Izaak Walton League to be held tomorrow evening in Soldan High School auditorium will be two addresses on "The Conservation of Missouri's Natural Resources" and "Bird Migrations" to be given by Congressman Cleveland A. Newton and Mr. L. M. Dougan, respectively.

The Izaak Walton League has extended its activities to all branches of conservation work, and is making a determined effort to conserve Missouri's natural resources, clean up polluted streams, and restock the Ozark woods and waters with game and fish. Moving pictures of the Winneshiek wild fowl and fish refuge made by Congressman Harry B. Hawes and his party will be shown at the meeting.

INDUSTRIAL SAFETY MEETINGS TO BEGIN MONDAY, OCT. 19

Seventh Annual Series to Be Held at Community Hall, Grand and Vista Avenues.

The seventh annual series of meetings on Industrial Accident Prevention will begin Monday evening, Oct. 19, at Community Center Hall, Grand and Vista avenues, under the supervision of the St. Louis Safety Council. The meetings, which are to be held every Monday evening from 8 to 10 o'clock, will be open to all who are interested in industrial safety. Further information concerning enrollment, which he expected to be very large, may be obtained by applying to the St. Louis Safety Council, 511 Locust street.

Russia May Drop Capital Letters.

MOSCOW, Sept. 1.—The Commissariat of Education has been considering a proposal to eliminate capital letters from the Russian script. In favor of the proposition it is argued that the Oriental nations incorporated in the Soviet Federation are not accustomed to employ capital letters and that it would be easier for them to learn Russian if capital letters were excluded.

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.

THE wedding of Silver Dollar Tabor's parents was a brilliant affair, even for Washington, the scene of many resplendent nuptials. It was done in a style quite characteristic of "Lucky" Tabor, the United States Senator and multimillionaire miner from Colorado. Of course the newspapers referred to him as Senator Horace A. W. Tabor, the golden man from the Golden West. He liked that. Tabor and gold were a magnificent partnership of words those days, although silver was his fortune.

His friends could not be quite sure which was the luckier and more splendid—the bridegroom or the bride. Against her prospective husband's millions and social position was Elizabeth McCourt of Oshkosh, Wis. could match only her beauty. It was Senator Tabor's second marriage, and when a rich man marries again somehow the world expects him to choose beauty. "Lucky" Tabor quite lived up to expectations. Elizabeth McCourt was one of those pink and gold women, just the sort to attract the opulent taste of Senator Tabor. She would adorn the Tabor estate.

Silk hats and cutaways, fine gowns and jewels set off the wedding party. The list of guests enrolled the most prominent names of the land. President Chester A. Arthur gave the bride away. At few weddings have presidents of the United States so honored bride and groom. It was a tribute to Tabor's wealth, his power in Republican politics, his knack for the spectacular. One can imagine how he boasted of his finest triumph. "Some blow-out, some blow-out," he would boom through the smoke of costly panatela. It was his way, his roaring way.

A Magnificent Wedding

He had been a Kansas farmer and a small town merchant before his strike. He never got over the magic of it. Everything he did, even his wedding was elaborately staged, as if to remind himself that it was all true; that he really was Senator Tabor, the multi-millionaire. Well, it was true and Silver Dollar Tabor's parents were married, grandly, and departed on an extravagant honeymoon.

Silver Dollar's sister, Lucy, was their first child. Her father appears to have been too busy trying to get himself elected Governor of Colorado and endeavoring to impress Wall Street with his financial acumen to take Lucy to his heart. But when Silver Dollar was born he paused to remember. He was a great friend of William Jennings Bryan those days and the Commoner, then a national idol, paid him the respect of noticing the second daughter. It is said that Bryan gave her her name —Silver Dollar Echo Tabor—because her happy laughter had the ring of a bright, new silver dollar. So she was christened and her proud father decided to celebrate the event in true Tabor fashion.

He had just built in Denver, at a cost of $1,250,000, the finest opera house west of the Mississippi—called the Tabor Grand Opera House. To make sure it was the finest, the great man sent East for yards and yards of Wilton velvet carpet.

"It will destroy the acoustics," the architects warned him.

"What are acoustics?"

Her First Party

He was informed, but insisted on the carpet. Only after he had heard voices in the silver-decked theater was he convinced. The carpet had to be taken up and was stored away, never to be used again.

He changed another thing about the theater. Artists had painted a portrait of Shakspeare on the drop curtain.

"What has Shakspeare ever done for Denver?" bellowed the rich man.

No one could say.

"Paint him out and put my picture in his place," Tabor ordered.

When this was done Tabor ordered golden tassels for the curtain. He imported Emma Abbott and company from New York to give the premiere performance. It was to be little Silver Dollar's first party.

When the especially invited guests had assembled the Tabor family filed into its flower-banked box. All eyes were on the child for whom this ornate show had been staged. Lucky Silver Dollar, they said. She was the fortunate daughter of "Lucky" Tabor. An heiress to piles of gold and silver. Could anyone's life be started under happier auspices? The years stretched away in dainty paths of ease to be danced along by Silver Dollar's feet. Gorgeous clothes, sumptuous homes, travel, European education, the kowtowing of society, the smirking of lackeys. Oh, life was bright and fair for her then.

As the climax of the celebration her proud father placed her little hand against the button which raised the curtain. There was applause for Silver Dollar; an expensive orchestra made music for her; high-priced actors and actresses bowed; a thousand of those new and costly electric lights blazed for her delight. Wherever newspapers were read in America people knew that Silver Dollar Tabor had been to her first party.

Silver Dollar knew very little and cared less in those days about her father's past. The years of grubbing and toil which had brought him so high were for several reasons taboo in the Tabor menage. Horace Tabor never liked to speak of them.

How He Made It

Next spring Tabor pushed on to California Gulch, staked a claim and began mining for gold. The first season he made $5000. With this he opened a grocery store and another season of joint activities in store and mines netted him $15,000. Then he moved to Buckskin Joe, a prosperous mining camp of the period not far from California Gulch. Here he became the leading merchant and was appointed postmaster.

After several years in Buckskin Joe camp he moved back to California Gulch which had taken the name of Leadville. He became postmaster of the new town and continued as a merchant for 20 years. During this period he amassed a competence. But it was not until 1878 that he made his big strike.

As a merchant and small capitalist he staked two shoemakers, August Rische and George Hock of Fair Play, Park County, who were searching for silver deposits. In 1880 this pair found ore and opened the Little Pittsburg mine. Tabor subsequently sold his interest in the mine for $1,000,000. Then he began to buy up other claims and pyramided his winnings until he was many times a millionaire. His best mine was the Matchless near Leadville.

As soon as he was established in Denver he tired of the companion of his early struggles. She obtained a divorce and he gave her $1,200,000 as a settlement. She declared at the time that her ex-husband would eventually go broke and she would keep the money for him until that time. But when Tabor went to Washington to fill a Senator's unexpired term and married Miss Elizabeth McCourt, the first Mrs. Tabor changed her mind. Not a penny of the $1,200,000 would she return to him. She kept her resolve and upon her death it was disclosed that she had willed the fortune to an adopted son, Moxy Tabor.

But Tabor was not worrying about that. What did a paltry $1,200,000 mean to him? He was thinking in tens of millions. Both he and the second Mrs. Tabor had known poverty, but they soon forgot. Their children had come into the world across a golden horizon. The glitter was in their eyes as soon as they would look about. To be poor was inconceivable to Silver Dollar and her sister, Lucy.

The magnificence of their father was everywhere to be seen in Denver. He had made the city his personal pride. He invested millions in handsome business blocks and gave the Government a valuable site for a new Postoffice. To his political achievements which included several terms as Mayor of Leadville, a short stay in the United States Senate and chairmanship of the State Republican Committee he added the post of Lieutenant-Governor of Colorado. He was in the late eighties the big man of the State.

Alas, "Lucky" Tabor went to Wall Street like a roaring lion. In 10 years he was a shorn lamb. The first Silver Dollar knew of it was when her mother said, as mothers do in the movies:

"Daughter, we have lost everything."

As fabulous as his rise was the utter completeness of Horace Tabor's fall. Every mine he had went under the auctioneer's hammer to satisfy mortgages. Even the Matchless mine was sold.

Taking pity on him, President McKinley gave him appointment as Postmaster of Denver. This alone staved off the final collapse. And that occurred in 1899 when Horace Tabor, once the richest man in Colorado, died penniless.

The Tabor Downfall

It was a sorry wreckage of proud years which Silver Dollar faced. Her mother was meeting the failure bravely and had instituted suit for recovery of the Matchless. Friends in Congress tried to get the Government to pay Mrs. Tabor for the Postoffice site her husband had given in Denver. But this plan failed. Mrs. Tabor did, however, succeed in getting the Matchless back, but this mine had been worked out years before.

She and her daughters moved to Leadville and started to work the ore dumps of the Matchless on a small scale. Numerous pathetic stories came of these women reared to luxury turned silver miners, grubbing away in rock and muck for a bare livelihood. Then the stories stopped and the world forgot the Tabors.

It is known now that Lucy, the elder daughter, went to Chicago to live with her grandmother. Silver Dollar stayed with Mrs. Tabor in Colorado and they managed to get along somehow. In 1910 she attended a press club gridiron dinner in Washington and was introduced to President Roosevelt. Later came the news that she had followed Lucy to Chicago and was intent on a literary career. It was also reported that Mrs. Tabor, once the beautiful and feted Miss McCourt, had sunk to a hermit's existence in a small mountain cabin near Leadville.

Again there is a gap filled only by word of Lucy Tabor's marriage to John Last, a wealthy tool manufacturer of Milwaukee, Wis. Nothing was heard of Silver Dollar, except that she had joined a somewhat Bohemian circle in Chicago and was prospering none too well.

Then came six years of silence.

Last week in the grist of cases reported to the Coroner's office came word that a woman of the underworld had been scalded to death in a cheap South Side apartment. Police were sent to investigate. The Coroner must have her name so as to give his verdict: "Accidental death." The officer on the beat was told by the janitor that he had found her unconscious on the kitchen floor, having apparently in a drunken frenzy pulled a pail of boiling water off the stove and onto herself.

"Name and address and age, please," said the policeman.

There was a pause among the little group of neighbors who had gathered.

A woman spoke, finally.

"She was Silver Dollar Tabor," said the woman," and I think she was well connected once. Seems like I heard of a rich fellow named Tabor from Colorado years ago. He was from out West some place and had lots of money."

Mystery Closes the Case

Silver Dollar Tabor? Was it possible.

There was a peculiar silence on the part of the Tabor family. Mrs. Last in Milwaukee at first denied having a sister named Silver Dollar. Then, she admitted that the dead woman in Chicago was her sister, but refused to take charge of the body.

"I never approved of my sister's life," she said. "Why should I who have pride and a sheltered life claim her in this sort of death? I don't see why she should be anything more to me than just a dead woman in Chicago."

While the body remained unclaimed and was destined apparently for the potter's field, Colorado authorities were searching for Mrs. Tabor. Before they found her a brother, Michael McCourt, resident of Denver, came

Fuller's Ride Recalled as Old Indian Fighter Who Made It Passe

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Sept. 26.

WHEN Col. Ezra B. Fuller died at the station hospital at Fort Leavenworth on the evening of Sept. 17 there passed one of the few remaining United States Army officers who could tell the story of the winning of the West. He lived those days in a cavalry saddle under the scorching heat of the plains in summer and buffeted by the wintry blasts which swept down from the Chinook. The great Northwest was the theater of his activities from the middle '70's when Sitting Bull made his last fateful stand at Wounded Knee in the early '90's.

He was one of the outstanding figures of the cavalry arm of the service. The times to which he lived gave him opportunity for service such as will not come again. The setting which formed the groundwork for his career has been erased by marching hosts of civilization. Where Col. Fuller threaded the wilderness there now nestle peaceful homes and the day of strife long since has passed.

Col. Fuller held the distinction of having served longest of any officer in the United States Army. His active service covered a period of 54 years. He was the last man accepted for enlistment in the Eighth Illinois Cavalry in the closing days of the Civil War.

He was born at Rockford, Ill., Oct. 4, 1843. That day 29 years later he commanded Company A, Seventh United States Cavalry at Bear Paw Mountains, Montana, when Chief Joseph and his band of Nez Perce warriors surrendered to Col. Nelson A. Miles.

The impressive years of Col. Fuller's life were lived in the throes of civil war. When 16 years of age he ran away from his home in Rockford and enlisted as a private in the 140th Illinois Infantry. He was accepted for service on May 17, 1864, and assigned to Company E. Because of his youth his father took steps to have him discharged. This was brought about the following Oct. 18.

Young Fuller's heart, however, was with the boys in blue and on Feb. 8, 1865, he enlisted as a private in Troop M, Eighth Illinois Cavalry. He served with this regiment until the organization was mustered out of the service on July 17, 1865.

Thoroughly imbued with life in the army, Fuller sought and received an appointment as cadet at West Point Military Academy. He reported for duty July 1, 1866. He was graduated June 12, 1871. He chose the cavalry arm of the service and was commissioned a second Lieutenant and assigned to the Eighth Cavalry. The regiment then was on duty on the western frontier.

Forty-nine years ago last June there was written the greatest tragedy in the annals of the United States cavalry, when Custer and his command yielded up their lives at the Little Big Horn. That portion of the Seventh Cavalry under Custer was wiped out and the regiment was replaced from other commands. Lieut. Fuller was assigned to Troop A.

August, 1877, found the regiment under command of Col. Sturgis and widely scattered along the Yellowstone country. Sturgis with two battalions was in that mountain fastness east of Yellowstone Park. Company A was encamped at the mouth of Tongue River on the Yellowstone, the point which later became Miles City. Col. Nelson A. Miles, in command of the Fifth Infantry, was there.

On the afternoon of Aug. 11 word had reached Col. Miles of the defeat of Col. Gibbon by Chief Joseph at the Big Hole River, in Western Montana. The battle took place near the present town of Gibbon. Chief Joseph with 300 warriors and 550 women and children had escaped from the Nez Perce reservation in Northwestern Idaho and, taking the Lolo trail, had crossed the Bitter Root Mountains. Gen. O. O. Howard was in pursuit. Gibbon took up the chase from Helena and came upon Joseph at the Big Hole.

Gen. Howard and his command arrived at the battlefield a few hours after Gibbon's command had been shattered. He took up the pursuit, which led southwest across the Bitter Root range and into Southeastern Idaho. Howard was defeated at Camas Meadows and Joseph fled eastward through Targhee's Pass into the Yellowstone Park, after defeating Col. Gilbert.

Fuller's Ride

Gen. William T. Sherman, in command at Helena, had gone to the Yellowstone Park accompanied only by an escort. He had no information that Joseph had taken the warpath and then was very near the park. Miles decided promptly to warn him of his danger.

Col. Miles called Lieut. Fuller to his headquarters at dusk on the evening of Aug. 11 and gave him dispatches for Gen. Sherman. Fuller was told to leave the camp at 11 o'clock that night. An escort of five picked cavalrymen were to accompany him. A scout by the name of Jimmy Wood was to accompany the party. Fuller was instructed to complete the ride to Fort Ellis, Mont., in five days. There he was to turn the dispatches over to the commanding officer to be forwarded to Gen. Sherman. He also was to get any information possible as to the movements of Joseph and send this information to Miles.

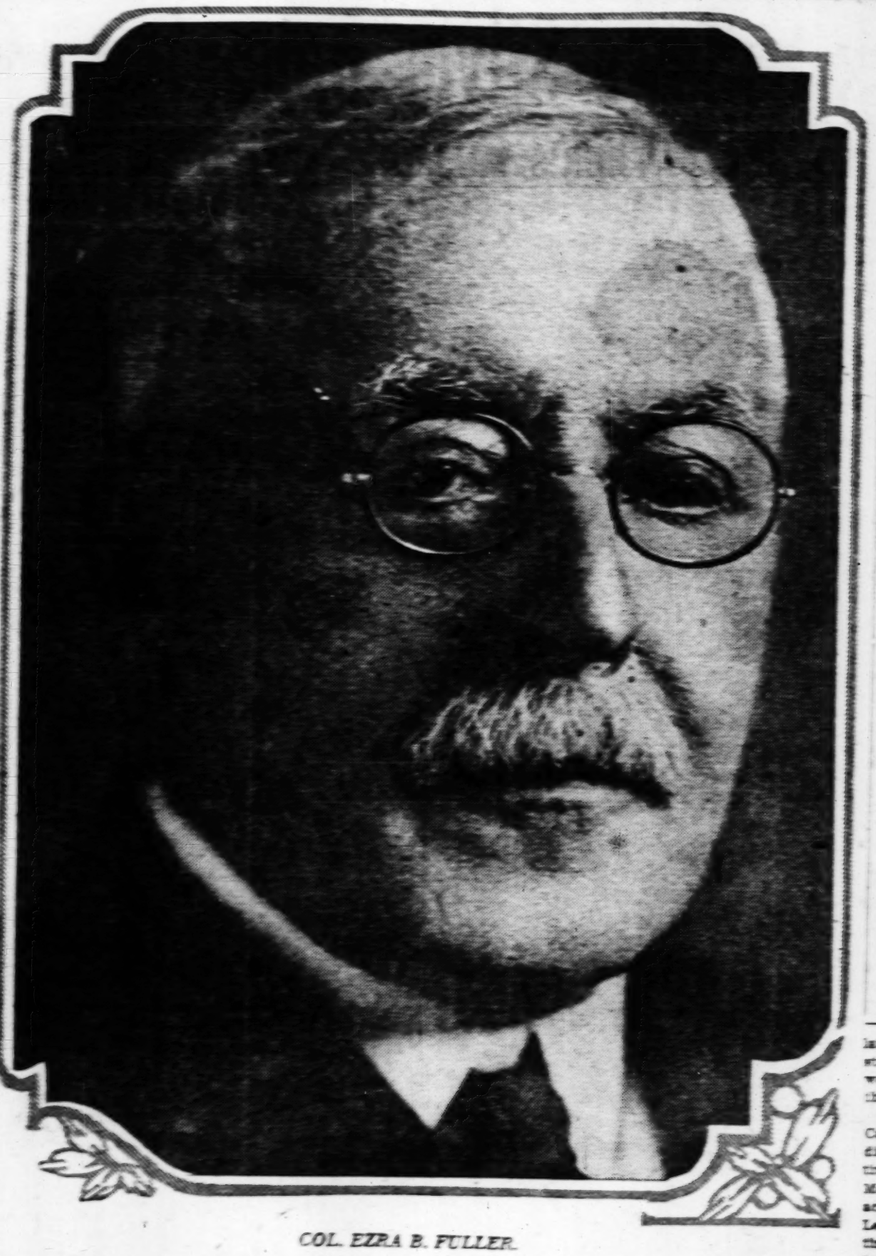
Fuller and his party were joined next morning by Woods, the scout, who had lingered over a poker game at the camp. He had been a bank teller in the East and knew nothing of the country beyond the mouth of the Big Horn.

Through the Wilds

Lieut. Fuller and his party pushed on and that night went into camp at the hill where on Aug. 11, 1877, Custer had battled with the Sioux. The distance was 195 miles from the camp of Col. Miles. After riding two miles the next morning Fuller and his party crossed the Yellowstone on a ferry and traveled all that day on the south side of the river. At nightfall they reached Baker's battlefield and recrossed the river. At noon the next day they were at Canyon Creek, near the present city of Billings, and entering a wild rough country as yet unpeopled by white men.

At the mouth of Canyon Creek Fuller found two families who just had settled there. They invited the officer to dine with them and furnished grain for the horses. Just one month to a day Fuller saw both these houses in flames, the stables and haystacks burning, the families fleeing to the timber and Chief Joseph and his followers fleeing to the north.

The day the troopers reached Canyon Creek one of the escort took sick and was left to work his way back to camp as best he could. Just before reaching the last ranch before Fort Ellis would be reached, Fuller met a man named McAdow who was planning to erect a sawmill. From McAdow Fuller learned that Joseph was in the vicinity of Henry's Lake, Idaho. Details of the fight between Gibbon and Joseph were learned. Fuller sent a courier to Col. Sturgis with this information.



COL. EZRA B. FULLER.

250 Miles in Five Days

On the afternoon of the fifth day Fuller reached the mouth of Shield's River where he left his escort and with only the scout pushed on over the mountains to Fort Ellis. He reached there as retreat was sounding, covering the 250 miles in five hours less than five days. The dispatches were forwarded that night to Sherman and he left the Yellowstone Park before Joseph entered from the west.

Leaving Fort Ellis Fuller and the scout started back to Carpenter's ranch at the mouth of Shield's River where the escort had been left. A messenger had been sent with instructions to have a skiff constructed. Fuller reached there at midnight to find the skiff not started. Working all night it was finished at sunrise and Fuller and Woods launched the frail craft. Passing out of Shield's River they entered the Yellowstone. Stripped to the waist Fuller carried the dispatches in the bosom of his undershirt. Rain fell in torrents. As night came on they heard the roar of rapids and the skiff was beached. They spent the night in the wet bushes and at daylight took to the river again. All day and all night they sped down the swift current. At 10 o'clock next day they reached the point where McAdow was building his sawmill. McAdow fed them fried trout and hot biscuits. They took along enough to last them.

Arriving at Baker's battlefield, Fuller attempted to buy a horse which to ride to Sturgis' camp. None could be had. A prospector named Leonard was promised $50 to carry the dispatches to Sturgis. He made the trip and was employed by Sturgis as a scout. He was killed by the Indians before the campaign ended.

Fuller then dismissed Woods and sent him on to Miles with dispatches. Fuller joined a mail carrier and started back up the river to meet his escort. He then joined Sturgis' command, having been absent twelve days.

The command of Col. Sturgis crossed the Yellowstone and marched south on Clark's Fork, expecting to intercept the Indians. At daybreak on the morning of Aug. 29 Fuller left camp with an escort of 15 men. A scout known as "Dutch Charley" accompanied the party. Soon the going was so rough the horses could not take the trails and the escort was posted. Fuller and "Dutch Charley" went on afoot. Soon they came to timber line and ascended Solitary Peak from where the country could be viewed for many miles. Fuller and the scout sat down and the officer took out his glasses. Suddenly "Dutch Charley" sighted the Indians going into camp in the valley below. Fuller and "Dutch Charley" hurried to camp where they informed Sturgis of the presence of the Indians.

The Indians Win

Before the troops could be placed in motion Chief Joseph and his band had escaped and headed north. Sturgis followed and overtook them at the mouth of Canyon Creek. There they found the homes of the settlers burning. Sturgis engaged the Indians on the mesa but they outfought him and escaped. Fuller commanded Troop H at the engagement.

Sturgis pursued the Indians to Cow Island, where they crossed the Missouri and headed for the Bear Paws. Miles, with the Fifth Infantry, mounted on Indian ponies, a battalion of the Seventh and a battalion of the Second Cavalry, had come up from Tongue River camp. Miles took up the chase and trapped Joseph in the mountains. Lieut. Fuller left the command of Sturgis and rode to the Bear Paws. He arrived there on Oct. 4, the day Joseph surrendered. Capt. Myles Moinan, commanding A troop, had been wounded and Lieut. Fuller assumed command. He had been promoted on Sept. 30 to First Lieutenant.

Col. Fuller, following the Indian campaigns, was stationed for a number of years at Fort Meade, Dak., and Fort Riley, Kan. At the latter post he was quartermaster and constructed many of the present buildings. He went to Pine Ridge when Sitting Bull took the warpath in the winter of 1890-91.

Col. Fuller was a major with the Tenth Cavalry during the Cuban campaign. For disability incurred in line of duty he was retired with the grade the Lieutenant-Colonel May 13, 1904. The next day he was recalled to active duty and detailed as librarian at Fort Leavenworth service school. He was retired with the rank of Colonel on July 1, 1918, but continued to hold the post until July 1, 1922.

Colonel Fuller for 14 years was edito the Cavalry Journal. The publication was printed in Leavenworth but upon his retirement as editor and upon his advice removed to Washington.

Col. Fuller last spring was elected grand commander of Kansas Knights Templar. He was a Thirty-third Degree Mason, and a member of Abdallah Temple of the Shrine.

Surviving Col. Fuller are his widow several children. Among these are Maj. Ezra H. Fuller, field artillery, Fort Leavenworth, and Capt. Sam G. Fuller, cavalry, Huachuca, N. M.

Other Men Who Have Won Fame by Horseback Rides

AMONG the historic horseback rides, more or less legendary, was the ride of Dick Turpin, famous English highwayman. Turpin, so the story goes, held up a man in London one evening. Mounted on his good mare, Black Bess, he fled from Gad's Hill to York, a distance of 190 miles in 15 hours. When arrested at York his alibi was that he could not have been in London at the time of the robbery and in York 15 hours later. The court agreed that it would have been impossible for a horse to travel that fast. The court was right.

Archibald Forbes, noted British war correspondent of the nineties, must be recorded among those who have made great horseback rides. During the first Zulu war in South Africa Forbes was present at the British victory of Ulundi. The nearest telegraph office was 120 miles away. He made the ride in 15 hours across trackless veldt and obtained a valuable news "scoop" for his paper, the London Daily News. He used more than one horse.

An unusual feat in cross-country riding was achieved by Sir Harry Smith, the English General who distinguished himself during the Kaffir wars in South Africa. In 1835 Sir Harry was at Cape Town. He learned that the British settlement at Graham's Town was in panic over a threatened Kaffir invasion. He rode the 600 miles to Graham's Town through enemy country in six days, rallied the faltering settlers and saved the outpost for England. Changes of horses were ready as he reached each post.

The Pony Express during the 18 months of its existence from 1860 until late in 1861 probably exemplified the utmost in speed of horses and endurance of riders. In March of 1861 the pony express riders carried President Lincoln's inaugural speech 1966 miles from St. Joseph, Mo., to Sacramento, Cal., in seven days and 17 hours, an average speed of 10.6 miles per hour.

One of the best rides in the annals of the Pony Express was made during a run by "Pony Bob" Haslam who traveled 120 miles from Smith's Creek to Fort Churchill in eight hours and ten minutes at an average speed of 14½ miles an hour. Another famous exploit was that of Jim Moore who made a round trip of 280 miles in 14 hours and 40 minutes at an average speed of more than 18 miles an hour. He, of course, changed horses every few miles.

Another hero of the Pony Express was Jack Keetly, who rode from Rock Creek to St. Joseph, then back to Rock Creek and on to Seneca and back to Rock Creek again—340 miles—without rest. He traveled continuously for 32 hours and rode the last five miles of his journey sound asleep in the saddle. Don Rising, who also rode on the eastern division is said to have averaged 20 miles an hour on several trips between Big Sandy and Rock Creek. He changed mounts every ten miles.

Supreme among the horsemen of the western trail was William F. Cody (Buffalo Bill). His route lay between Red Buttes and Three Crossings, Wyo., a distance of 76 miles. The territory was overrun with Indians and desperadoes. In addition Cody had to ford the icy and treacherous North Platte River three times to reach Three Crossings.

One day when Cody reached Three Crossings with his westbound mail he found that the rider who was to carry it on to the next station was ill. So he volunteered to go on to Rocky Ridge, 76 miles away. Arriving at Rocky Ridge he received the eastbound mail and galloped back without stopping at Three Crossings, thence over his own return route to Red Buttes, a total distance of 322 miles continuously in the saddle. This was the greatest ride in the annals of the Pony Express.

IN a concrete ledge along the bank of the Seine is the new paragon of all the shows of this earth. No one sneers at the Amusement Park of the Paris Exhibition of Arts. That would be neither superior nor popular, but dowdy. Critics with sore heads, the public with sore feet, always find their day at the exhibition with a passage along the mile of Attractions, and it is uncommon to miss more than a dozen on the way without trying them.

All the showmen, after a measure, have succeeded in divining the tastes of a large part of humanity; some of them have guessed or reasoned so well that they seem to have found the secret of a common denominator for the whole of the human race. So precious a help for politicians and sociologists cannot remain copyrighted; it must be stolen from them in the interests of civilization.

Even the conquest of the air would seem a minor thing to this, when you scan that uncountable crowd. The scientists' nickname homo sapiens, seems too risky a generalization for these constellations, who are more varied than a night full of stars. Sirius is infinitely more like Canopus than that narrow-collared Siamese to the English school mistress who had just been amused by the same apparatus. The study of these hosts makes higher astronomy seem plain arithmetic by comparison, for each of the units has its own orbit from mysterious birth to death. They have each their own ancestry, home, school, friends, desires, and the imagination totters at the thought of 100,000 memories, 100,000 intellects, 100,000 personalities to be pleased with the same thing. As they totter, physically, coming down the deal steps from the "Whip," the "Cascade," the "Knock-Them-out-of-Bed," which are the highest approximations of our times in practical psychology, the most popular side-shows of the Fair.

The crowd settles thick around the daubed face of the menagerie. They shove at the entry of the Algerian Harem Dancers. But at the glass box where they serve tickets for Three Great Shows mentioned they will stand for hours in a closed queue. The spectacle of freaks and wild beasts, and ugly but sufficiently clad dancers, teaches no one anything new about the imitative and cruel soul of mankind. But in the Knock-'em machines, there is something, not so new, for Coney Island and Wembley and a million satellites prepared the way, but because it is Paris, where every one is free and the police do not interfere, the spectacle of our times shakes itself out untrammeled.

There she read the story of Silver Dollar Tabor's wife.

She issued a positive denial that the dead woman was Silver Dollar.

"My daughter is still alive. I heard from her last week. She told me she was coming to Denver," Mrs. Tabor is quoted by the Denver newspapers as saying.

No sooner was her denial on the wires than Mrs. Last changed front again.

"The woman in Chicago was an impostor," said Silver Dollar's sister. "My sister entered a convent against the advice of the family. She has decided to hide her identity from the world. I intend to respect her wishes."

But the unfortunate woman was buried as Silver Dollar Tabor.

Here she read the story of Silver Dollar Tabor's end.

She issued a positive denial that the dead woman was Silver Dollar.

"My daughter is still alive. I heard from her last week. She told me she was coming to Denver," Mrs. Tabor is quoted by the Denver newspapers as saying.

No sooner was her denial on the wires than Mrs. Last changed front again.

"The woman in Chicago was an impostor," said Silver Dollar's sister. "My sister entered a convent against the advice of the family. She has decided to hide her identity from the world. I intend to respect her wishes."

But the unfortunate woman was buried as Silver Dollar Tabor.

MISS GINGER,' DARING CONFEDERATE SPY, REVEALS IDENTITY AT DEATH

She Was Miss Virginia Moon of Memphis, Tenn., and Later Lived in Greenwich Village

As a Spy for General Forrest During the Civil War She Obtained Information by Flirting With Union Soldiers—Often Ran Valuable Drugs and Medical Supplies Through the Federal Lines — Several Times Escaped Death by Wheedling the Blue Coats Into Giving Her a Chance to Escape—Up to the Last She Lived an Adventurous Life, Acting in the Movies at 80.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Sept. 26.

THE drums of war were sounding. All day long in a seemingly endless stream Federal soldiers were pouring into Memphis. The time was late August in 1864 and the city had been in the hands of the Northerners for ages, it seemed. Business, except that done with soldiers, was at a standstill. Had been for days and days. Only the soldiers came—and went. Memphis had been set up as a base of supplies and clearing house for the captured Confederate soldiers—rebels, the Northerners called them.

Down on Second street opposite Court Square there was great excitement. A prison had been established there. The Irving Block old-timers called it. Groups gathered only to be dissipated as the squads of blue-coated soldiers came. Over in Court Square, the town's center and parade circumference, three soldiers stood talking to a blushing girl of 20 summers dressed in frills and crinoline with long black curls that enveloped her half-disclosed shoulders. "We won't be here long. I'm certainly sorry to have to move," said the Corporal. He was talking to the girl whose sprightliness and sparkling eyes had attracted him the day before. "Where are you all going to?" she inquired with a touch of naivete.

"Headquarters says we are to prepare to move on up to Nashville," came back the Corporal. "Guess I'll be able to get down this way before Christmas and I surely do want to see you," he went on.

"I wouldn't mind seein' you, either," sparkled the girl, giving the youth in blue a handshake of understanding. Then she walked slowly out of sight of the little group.

Virginia Bethell Moon, one of the foremost belles of that day was the young woman. Born in Ohio of Southern parents she had grown up with a fear that her beloved Southland would be invaded by the host of Illinois, Missouri and the North who thought that the States, one and inseparable, should be preserved as an entity. "If they come," Virginia had said, "I'll give my life if necessary to drive them back." Down at the home of a friend near Fort Pickering, Virginia had worked, planned and fought to make good her pledge. The foe had come.

Twenty minutes after Virginia left her friends in blue she was out on the spacious lawn of her home. "I'm coming, dearest," she replied as an elderly woman called her into the house. From the back entrance a young man, worn and dusty, emerged. "Anything today?" he queried, a haunting fear enveloping his face.

"Tell Gen. Forrest that the Federals are to move out tomorrow, going towards Nashville. Something must be done to head them off. That's all," quickly replied the little woman of the Confederacy. The boy gave her a military salute and moved off. In a few minutes he was in a boat gliding past the city's defenses to Forrest and his forces.

One of Forrest's Aids

On that fateful day in June of 1864 Memphis fell, fell before the onslaughts of the Federals on land and on water. Something more than mere work was needed. The South was in dire straits for information of the plans and purposes of the Northern leaders. Spies were needed, men and women who were not afraid to face death, if necessary, to protect their flag. There was no hesitation in the mind of "Miss Jennie."

The South was in a bad way. Washburn was in charge of her home with his despised Yankees.

"Tell Gen. Forrest to count on me," was her message and there began a history of service not excelled during that struggle. No hazard was too great, no spread of chance too wide if her beloved Southland could be aided. Virginia Moon had a smile that at once made easy the unsatisfied mind of her questioner. A roguish twinkle in her eye meant only good-natured and innocent devilment.

So when Virginia wanted to see an imaginary aunt out in the country she was given a pass through the Federal lines, almost without an investigation. Yet, when, at the end of a 25 or 30 mile ride she stepped from her horse, wan and exhausted, yet smiling, her commodious clothing disclosed such stores of supplies, of quinine, morphine and medicines as a Federal officer would not have believed possible. Virginia ran the lines almost from the day that Memphis fell. Her youth and beauty stood her in good stead. Twice was she captured and the most dire punishment promised her.

On one occasion she pledged herself to meet her captor in the twilight and though her message had been destroyed she delivered to the substance of it to her sweethearts in Gray. In danger of capture on yet another occasion she tore into bits the letter she carried and swallowed it. The scene was on a steamer in the Mississippi River and Virginia prepared to chance her fate to the waters if her wits failed her—but they did not.

Miss Moon, in later years, when she did character parts for the movies, and lived in Greenwich Village.

A City Builder

After the heat of war had subsided Miss Jennie, as hundreds had come to know her, gave her heart and hand to the upbuilding of her adopted city and to the aiding of its people. In 1878 and again in 1879, when the pestilence of yellow fever struck the town and carried away thousands of lives, Miss Jennie remained and nursed the sick and dying. A brother and a sister were lost to her in those days, yet she never faltered. Thousands of persons, urged by the members of the Howard Society, left the city for safer ports in the North and East. But Miss Jennie carried on! George W. Person, one of Memphis' foremost realtors and whose wife is a first cousin to the little heroine, tells this story:

"You may have heard the history of Emily Sutton. A large tombstone in Elmwood pays tribute to her memory. When the pestilence of '78 laid its hand on Memphis, Emily Sutton was running a house of ill-fame on Gayoso avenue. Every inmate was either sent away or told that she must give her life to nursing the sick. Emily Sutton died a hero. Miss Jennie, with her usual disregard for commonplace conventionality, assumed charge of The Mansion and directed the care of the stricken. It was this same freedom from conventional restriction that marked her entire life. Yet Miss Jennie set a moral standard that was above reproach. Hers was a life that could well be emulated by all today. I have never known such a person. She was always for the 'under dog.' When Hunter Raine was charged with wrecking the Mercantile Bank and stealing more than a million dollars, no friend was left to him. He had abused the confidence and betrayed the trust of every person who had known him. Yet Miss Jennie remained staunch. Hunter Raine had been her friend and to him in jail she carried fruits, cakes and other delicacies. Even after he had been sent to the Federal penitentiary and again to the State prison at Nashville, she retained her spirit of fellowship. That's the stuff of which she was made."

Liked Children

On the site that is now occupied by the Nineteenth Century Club, Memphis' foremost women's club, she ran a boarding house for many years.

Miss Jennie's boarding house was exclusive. Here the first and many succeeding groups of English cotton buyers made their home. The circle was more that of the home than of the boarding house. A reader of all that was good in literature, on winter evenings the fireplace became likened to that of the old English home. Miss Jennie was an avid reader of books. She wrote novels and stories of fact with consummate ease and a style that was as free as her nature. After the shock of the great conflict had died away Miss Jennie went to Tortugas Isle, in the Gulf of Mexico, to inspect the fort for herself. Here Dr. Mudd and Grenfell had been incarcerated. The two men had been charged with aiding Wilkes Booth to escape, and Miss Jennie wrote the story of her adventure. Newspapers far and wide carried her story.

MISS VIRGINIA MOON
An Early Portrait of the Southern Belle.

Her burden was great but never too heavy of 75 "Miss Ginger" journeyed to California alone and by her brilliance and her fine personality gained a place in the picture firmament. She was soon playing character parts and in Douglas Fairbanks' "Robin Hood" she rose to undreamed heights as she did in "The Rustle of Silk."

for her to care for several children. She adopted little Viva Warren and when that young woman went East to become an actress "Miss Ginger" accompanied her. At the age

New York and her adopted daughter called her. She moved into Greenwich village and with characteristic independence she enjoyed to the fullest the life about her. Miss Warren, now Mrs. Oliver Jones, saw that she wanted for nothing. Thus did she live. Fear of the future never haunted her. To her associates she was known only as an agnostic who smoked innumerable cigarettes, boasted of 15 genuine proposals, a number of which were from Federal officers and confidentially told friends that she had been a Southern spy and Nathan Bedford Forrest's ward. At 80 she was deriving the fullest pleasure from living. The years had not dimmed the lustre of her eye or taken one jot from her joy in fellowship.

A Rebel to the Last

Then one day, Miss Martha Sawyers of Texas, a stained glass designer whom she had favored, found her in her apartment, cold in death.

"She died as much a rebel as ever," declared Oliver Jones. It was her wish that her body be cremated and that her ashes be permitted to lie where her heart had been during all the years. Memphis was her Mecca. There all that remains of the proud and fearless little woman will go to await all that of which the littlest rebel was unafraid.

Mr. Jones made the final years of Miss Moon's life secure from fear of want. With characteristic independence the little woman wanted to live outside of the realm of family life and Mr. Jones, formerly vice president of the Victor Talking Machine Co., but now a large real estate operator of New York provided her with a monthly income that permitted her to maintain a satisfactory apartment in Greenwich Village, that Bohemia of lower New York. It was here that the end came to the brave woman who had fought the fight of her country, had braved the dangers of pestilence and plague and had given her years to the care of the friendless and the unfortunate. Her ashes will be sent to Dixie, to Memphis, where they will forever rest in her own lot in Elmwood Cemetery, not far from the bodies of many she nursed through the dark days of '78 and '79. A heroine in heroic dell.

NEW AMUSEMENT CENTER PLANNED TO COST $500,000

Lease for 99 Years on Lot Opposite the Southwest Entrance of Forest Park Acquired as the Site.

CONSTRUCTION TO BE STARTED SOON

Structure to House Picture Theater, Dance Hall and Garage for 200 Automobiles.

By Berry Moore.

Plans for a building on a mammoth scale with a restaurant, moving picture theater, dance hall and garage were disclosed yesterday when a syndicate represented by the Paul Jones Realty Co. acquired a 99-year lease of a wedge-shaped block fronting on Skinker, Clayton and Oakland avenues at the southwest entrance to Forest Park.

The block has a frontage on Oakland of 320 feet, on Clayton of 304 feet, with 200 feet on Central avenue and 26 feet on the east side of Skinker road. It is owned by the Gerhart Realty Co., of which Frank H. Gerhart is president.

The valuation given the site under the 99-year lease is $160,000, according to Paul Jones Sr., who conducted the negotiations on behalf of the syndicate.

Plans for the Garage.

The garage, which will have a capacity of 200 cars, will be embodied in the Oakland avenue side of the building. A gasoline filling station will occupy the apex of the triangle with 26 feet on Skinker and 120 feet on Oakland, and 100 feet on Clayton, as a part of the garage.

Incidentally, Oakland avenue is three feet lower than Skinker road at this point, thus making this side of the block especially available for construction of this type.

The dance hall, restaurant and moving picture theater as the allurring feature of this big combination enterprise, will comprise the entire second floor with 26,000 square feet of floor space.

To Be Center of Gayety.

A resort is contemplated that will eclipse anything of this nature in the city as a center of gayety, with a night life atmosphere, rivaling many of the pretentious resorts of this type in Chicago and in New York. Though a great popular resort is contemplated, prices are to be maintained on a scale that will insure an exclusive character.

The proposed building, including the site, will involve an expenditure of $500,000 or more, it is estimated. Construction is to be started as soon as the architects' plans have been perfected, with a view to the completion of the structure by next spring, if not sooner.

The site is in the thick of the Skinker and Clayton roads automobile traffic and is virtually at the southwest entrance to Forest Park, and is strategically situated for a building of this character.

Extensive Auto Traffic.

A filling station of the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana occupying a wedge-shaped plot on the west side of Skinker at its junction with Clayton and McCausland avenues, directly opposite, has a sale record of many thousand gallons of gasoline a day, showing the extent of the traffic at this point, according to Jones.

Hi-Pointe, a high-class apartment, flat and resident section, occupies a large area at the northwest corner of Clayton and Skinker roads.

Jones declined to disclose the identity of the lessees, but stated that the syndicate had ample resources to carry through the building plans on the scale proposed.

Some Shops Already Leased.

Jones stated that the oil companies are in close competition for the filling station, which will be the largest in the city, while several of the shops designed for the Clayton avenue side of the building have been leased from the blueprints. Doubtless this announcement will be received with enthusiasm in realty circles, on the theory that this section of the St. Louis realty market will display new buoyancy with the advent of this pretentious enterprise.

NORTHAMPTON SALES WELL SUSTAINED, SAYS R. A. BURNS

Sales in Northampton, the subdivision on South Kingshighway are well sustained and substantial.

R. A. Burns, president of the Bush-Burns Realty Co., the selling agent for the syndicate owning Northampton, says the record after today is expected to show 9000 feet sold, or more than one-half the subdivision frontage.

The grading work is being pushed rapidly, and this week the work of making streets and curbs and walks will be started on Winona, Lawn avenue and Chippewa street. The Fruin-Colnon Contracting Co. has this work in hand.

Kingshighway is open to traffic and the ground is reached by automobile, street car, or motor bus. The office of the company is at 3627 S. Kingshighway.

TWO RESIDENCES AND FLAT SOLD BY J. I. EPSTEIN AND SON

J. I. Epstein & Son report the following sales:

A residence at 3833 Castleman avenue with a garage in the rear to Fred J. Pickel for Stephen Keiser. A 10-room residence at 5089 Raymond avenue, for William R. Long to F. R. Watkins and wife. A flat at 226 South Newstead avenue to J. F. Mitchell for Julius B. Maller.

The firm also reports the sale of 2800 acres in Dunklin County, Mo., to 35 different purchasers in 80-acre tracts at $100 an acre, the total amount being $280,000. This is part of the property, reported on June 28 as having been purchased by the syndicate headed by Edmund P. Melson, J. I. Epstein and D. K. Rice. Of this property there remains unsold 1400 acres with a sufficient demand to insure the speedy disposition of the rest.

REALTY MEN RETURNING FROM SUMMER ABROAD

Fred G. Zeibig, J. M. Levy, David P. Leahy and J. H. Farish have returned to the city after European tours.

Levy was absent three months, visiting Spain, Italy and Germany.

Raymond G. Scott, who has been abroad with his daughter, Miss May R. Scott, will return this week.

10-STORY GARMENT CENTER BUILDING

Work is to begin at once at the northwest corner of Washington avenue and Thirteenth streets, on the new 10-story Garment Center Building to be erected by the Rose Realty Co., at a cost of more than $1,250,000.

The building will be of reinforced concrete and steel construction, faced with polished red granite, terra cotta and Alton matt brick. Features will be incorporated in this structure that will make it attractive for commercial as well as for manufacturing purposes.

The building was designed by George Sokol, architect, under whose supervision it will be erected. The 99-year lease under which the site is held was negotiated and closed through the combined efforts of Orville C. Grove of the Mississippi Valley Trust Co. and Theodore I. Singer of the Singer-Klein Realty Co.

612 NORTH ELEVENTH STREET LEASED FOR RESTAURANT

Charles E. Murphy and William Amenda have leased through the Mercantile Trust Co. the storeroom at 612 North Eleventh street. They are experienced restaurant men and after Oct. 1 will open a lunchroom. Murphy has had charge of the Rice-Stix cafeteria for years, while Amenda's previous location was at Eighteenth and Market streets.

The Mercantile Trust Co. reports the sale of 6134 Washington boulevard for Festus W. Shaughnessy and wife to Adolf Steinhart and wife; lot 6 in block 12, second addition to Shrewsbury Park, for Miss Kate Schneider to Vincent J. Schulte and wife; a single flat at 1310-12 Belt avenue, for James R. Barron and wife to Helen Hanson and Clarice Chapin.

CORNET & ZEIBIG SELL THREE OLIVE STREET SITES

The Cornet & Zeibig Trust report the sale of 2529-31-33-35 Olive street, consisting of four stores and four apartments of five rooms above with two-story garage in rear. The property has a frontage of 68 feet and is 134 feet deep. The annual rental is $7200. It was sold for the account of Nathan Billinsky to Max Weiss.

The firm also reports the sale of 2335-37 Olive street, two stores and four apartments on second and third floors, for the Bridget Davlin heirs to Tony J. Ghio, who has plans for the altering of the stores as soon as the present lease expires.

3540 Olive street, a two-story building with store on ground floor and five offices above, leased by the Mauer-Ghio-Beffa Realty Co., which moved from the Title Guaranty Building, was sold for Joseph Renad to Tony J. Ghio.

CHAUNCEY P. HEATH SELLS 24 ACRES ON CLAYTON ROAD

The Chauncey P. Heath Real Estate Co. reports the sale of 24 acres at the southeast corner of Clayton and Geyer Roads for the account of George Siebert and wife to Walter M. Smith, who bought for a future home-site and investment. The Chauncey P. Heath Real Estate Co. represented both parties in the transaction.

This property fronts 1100 feet on Geyer Road and 1000 feet on the Clayton Road and has over 800 fruit trees. In the near future the property is to be subdivided into one, two and three-acre tracts, which will be under the management of the Chauncey P. Heath Real Estate Co.

PHILLIPS MOTOR CO.'S NEW $125,000 BUILDING FINISHED

The Phillips Motor Co.'s new auto sales and service building at Lockwood and Summit avenues, Webster Groves, will be entirely completed and ready for occupancy on October 1, on which date the formal opening will take place.

The building is of fireproof construction, having reinforced concrete frame, floors and roof, with brick walls on the exterior. In order to provide sufficient daylight the side walls cnotain large areas of steel sash with glass. The building at present has two stories with basement. However, provision is made so that cars can be run to the roof for storage and so that a third story can readily be added later. It cost $125,000.

The exterior of the building is designed with a terra cotta motif around the main entrance with the balance of the two street facades in large size tapestry brick.

WAGNER-GRANT-BELL SALES $800,000 IN SEPTEMBER

Wagner-Grant-Bell announce, through their sales manager, C. E. Cravens, that sales for September will reach approximately $800,000. Properties vary from residential properties to flats and apartments and include the sale of a large west end structure.

Cravens states that activity shown in September is a forerunner of the largest fall business in the history of St. Louis real estate. He reports negotiations for several large factory buildings and predicts that the firm's business will reach between $8,000,000 and $10,000,000 for the nine months, ending December, 1925.

TWO NOTABLE UPTOWN REALTY SALES OF WEEK

Olivia Building, Grand and Windsor, and the Del Van, Delmar and Vandeventer, Change Hands.

Two notable uptown sales of the week embraced the Olivia Building at the northwest corner of Grand boulevard and Windsor place, and the Del Van Building at the southeast corner of Delmar boulevard and Vandeventer avenue.

The Weisels-Gerhart Real Estate Co., announced the sale of the Olivia Building for the Washington University to the Walter E. Mantz Realty Co., for $150,000.

The Olivia Building is a four-story fireproof steel structure with two stores and 52 offices, tenanted principally by physicians and insurance companies. Annual rentals aggregate $22,000, according to the agents.

Part of Site Vacant.

The lot has 46 feet 3 inches on Grand by 209 feet on Windsor. The west 206 feet of the site is vacant, but the purchaser intends to improve this frontage in the near future with a four-story building, comprising kitchenette apartments with garage in connection.

This is the third sale through the Weisels-Gerhart company of this building, the first being for Harry Brinson to Nathan Frank. Last May the Washington University acquired the property at a valuation of $150,000 in part payment for the Chase apartments. Isaac A. Hedges represented the university in both instances as custodian of its real estate holdings.

With the upbuilding of Grand boulevard on a high scale north of Olive street, including notably the Missouri Theater building, the new St. Louis Theater being erected by Sam Koplar and others, and the Saum building, values on this thoroughfare have been enhanced appreciably.

No Change in Management.

The Weisels-Gerhart Co., as in the past, will have the management of the building.

The John S. Blake & Bro. Realty Co. effected sale of the Del Van building, which was purchased by the Italian Society of St. Louis as an investment. The building comprises four stories with stores and clubrooms, including the quarters of the Italian Society, which was represented in the transaction by the DeMartini-Zerega Realty Co.

This is the third recent resale of this building by the Blake company at a higher consideration each time. The consideration was not disclosed in the sale to the Italian Society.

Seven Business Corners of 15 on Woodson Road Have Been Sold.

Sales at Pagewood Homesites at the northwest corn or of Page boulevard and Woodson road opened last Sunday, to date aggregate $175,000. These figures embrace a total of 108 lots ranging in frontage of from 60 to 98 feet.

Seven business corners out of 16 on Woodson road have been sold. A tier of nine lots on Cote Brilliante avenue was acquired by one speculator who already has declined a handsome profit on his purchase.

The tract comprises 198 acres subdivided into lots with an aggregate frontage of 50,000 feet, which are being disposed of on unprecedented terms, one dollar down and one dollar a week, with a discount of 8 per cent for all cash, thus making the property available for all classes.

The first week of the sale accordingly has been highly reassuring, the urgent demand for the lots on the part of both speculators and investors indicating the early absorption of the tract.

The tract is being handled by the Ben Altheimer & Bro. Realty Co., with W. J. Cristy as director of sales.

J. B. FOLEY JOINS STAFF OF BARNGROVE & SPECHT

J. B. Foley, who was associated with the late Philip A. McDermott for the past 11 years, announces he has joined the sales force of Barngrove & Specht.

Before joining the McDermott organization, Mr. Foley spent nine years with the firm of Rutledge & Kilpatrick, and previous to his Rutledge - Kilpatrick connection, Foley was for a period of two years, with the Mississippi Valley Trust Co.

Foley is known as one of the most active producers on Realty Row, and during the time he has been on Chestnut street, he has been instrumental in putting through something over 1906 real estate transactions, many of them of very considerable magnitude.

Foley has joined Barngrove & Specht in the capacity of a special salesman and will continue in the line of activity he has been following in the past.

Foley is known to all realty operators and is very extensively known among investment and speculative buyers throughout the city. It is predicted by those familiar with Foley that his conection with a firm of the standing of Barngrove & Specht will be a very advantageous one.

Foley will welcome all of his old clients and friends at the office of Barngrove & Specht, 112 N. Seventh street, from this date on.

RAISING THE RENT

When you own the house you live in you have no fear of a raise in rent. You are your own landlord. If you buy the home through a Building Association you pay the rent monthly to yourself.

$1 Per Share Per Month Starts You

Phone, write or call for booklet telling you how you can make the rent pay for the home while you live in it. We have been doing that for our members for 38 years.

SUBURB'N PROP'Y FOR SALE

ONE TO THREE ACRES—CLAYTON ROAD
RIGHT IN THE HEART OF THE GOOD SECTION
JUST RECENTLY
13 new buyers, after looking over the market thoroughly, bought home sites in HAMPTON PARK
They say it is the best buy to be had.
WHY?
It is priced by the acre, not by the foot. The cost figures from one-fourth to one-half of subdivisions as laid out today.
It is a natural beautiful park with wonderful trees; the homes already built have wide, spacious lawns; each home having an acre or more.
It is fully restricted for the home owners' future protection. It was bought in bulk, when land values were much cheaper.
The improvements were installed before the rise in labor and material, and it is right in the heart of St. Louis' future fine home section.
IT IS A BEAUTIFUL PLACE TO LIVE
39 SOLD—$4000 UP—ONLY 20 LEFT
With county prices rapidly rising.
Drive through and then make a comparison with anything else. Southeast corner Clayton and Hanley roads.
For full information and plats, see

SALE OR RENT
Pasadena Webster, Big Bend Road and Selma Av.

Four more new Duplex buildings are just being finished in Pasadena Webster. Two of them are of unusual Spanish design, with variegated tile roofs, one is Colonial and one is Early English.

These two-family homes vary in size from 5 to 8 rooms per family, and include the most modern appointments and conveniences.

Twenty-six buildings in 18 months have been built, rented or sold in Pasadena Webster, which is the most convincing proof of the livability and economy of Pasadena Duplex development.

Buildings open for inspection today. Drive three blocks west on Big Bend road from Old Orchard direct to Pasadena Webster.

FORMER JAIL OFFICIALS GIVE BOND IN CHICAGO BRIBE CASE

Ex-Warden Subpoenaed to Appear Before Federal Judge Monday.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 26. — Former jail officials named yesterday by Terry Druggan and Frankie Lake, beer runners, as among those to whom they gave several thousand dollars for favors and privileges while serving a year's sentence on a Federal charge in the Cook County jail, appeared today and gave bond before Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson who issued subpenas for their arrest after Druggan and Lake testified before him.

Captain Wesley H. Westbrook, former warden of the jail, to whom Druggan and Lake said they gave large sums of money for favors and also for an agreement to release Lake 52 days before expiration of his sentence, furnished $5000 bond for appearance Monday.

The Chicago Herald and Examiner says tonight that Druggan offered $100,000 to Captain Westbrook to buy total immunity from serving any part of his year's sentence and that details of the offer will be related by Henry Foerst, Westbrook's secretary, when Foerst takes the witness stand next week. Foerst carried the offer to Westbrook who rejected it as too dangerous, the newspaper says.

RAIN AND RACE TRAFFIC BULGES FREE BRIDGE BLOCKS

Traffic over the Free Bridge is being seriously hampered today as a result of bulging in the wood block paving at several points, due to the recent rains. In about 20 places jagged holes appear where blocks have been squeezed from the roadbed, and at one point there is a stretch of more than 40 feet where the displacement of surfacing suggests the work of a gigantic mole.

This 40-foot stretch is in the center span between the rails of the eastbound car tracks. The space in the center, between the eastbound and westbound tracks, is paved with asphalt and so escaped disarrangement. One of the worst holes is between the rails of the westbound tracks near the entrance of the east approach. Here a section of blocks several feet in diameter has been torn out by the upheaval.

The bridge was the scene of considerable congestion late yesterday due to the slowing up of traffic made unusually heavy by the return of a large number of motorists to St. Louis from the opening of the new Fairmont race track.

ASKS GOVERNMENT TO PRESERVE MINE PACT

Lewis in Address Assails Operators Who Have Repudiated Agreement.

By the Associated Press.

FAIRMONT, W. Va., Sept. 26.—John P. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, in an address today before a mass meeting of bitmuminous miners, declared that the violation of the Jacksonville wage agreement by a group of operators should command the attention of the Government.

When the three-year agreement was signed in 1924, he said, it was "negotiated and executed with the aid and co-operation of high Government officials." He added: "The agreement has been dishonored and impaired to a degree which reveals moral turpitude upon the part of a group of operators who are seeking to escape their contractual obligations upon the flimsy grounds of business expediency. The Government has an obligation in these premises."

"The industry has a right," he said, "to expect that the moral influence and power of those same Government officials will be utilized to preserve the integrity of the agreement and to maintain in the public weal the tranquility of the coal industry.

"The mine workers simply ask that those coal operators who executed the agreement be compelled to live up to their contracts and not act the part of industrial knaves and poltroons who seek to render to their employes less than is their just due."

Lewis specifically mentioned that the Pittsburg Coal Co., and the Consolidated Coal Co. had led the group of numerous operators in Western Pennsylvania, Northern West Virginia and Central Pennsylvania in repudiating the agreement. He charged that this group in its "efforts to escape honest obligations to free American labor" had not failed to utilize every instrument of oppression and repression. He said:

"They have torn up their wage contracts; they have closed their mines for long periods in order to starve their employes into submission; they have evicted their employes from their homes; they have manned their properties with armed mine guards, searchlights, barbed wire fences, stockades, and such paraphernalia of war; they have resorted to the use of unfriendly courts and have sought to bind the workers hand and foot by the issuance of court injunctions, stripping the worker of nearly every right guaranteed him under the Constitution; they have, in substance and effect, conducted a campaign of community terrorism in the isolated mining villages."

COMPLEX ACCOUNTS CLOUD WOMAN'S STORY

Wife Who Now Asserts She Was Assailed by Husband in First Place Denied It.

The police believe the assault on Mrs. Margaret Jenkins, 23-year-old waitress, who was found semiconscious and severely injured in Lafayette Park early Friday, has been solved by her identification of her estranged husband, Lyman Jenkins, 20 years old, a carpenter, as her assailant, at city hospital yesterday.

Mrs. Jenkins remained unable to talk till Friday night, when she made conflicting statements. Yesterday morning she told a Post-Dispatch reporter that she had been struck by an automobile, or maybe a street car, and had not seen her husband since they separated last April. Later, Jenkins was taken to her bedside and she asserted definitely, the police announced, that it was he who had beat and cut her.

Quarrels With Husband.

She told Capt. Kirk, who subsequently found a pair of blood-stained trousers at her husband's home, 729 North Spring avenue, that she and Jenkins quarreled when walking through the park and Jenkins upbraided her for associating with certain other women. He struggled to obtain one of her rings, she said. No rings were found on her fingers when policemen went to her aid in the park.

In denying her husband's guilt to a reporter previously, Mrs. Jenkins asserted that Jenkins had struck her in frequent quarrels, so that she returned to her home at Flat River, Mo., giving up her work as a waitress at the Dew Drop Inn, 1712 Market street.

Jenkins was arrested after a sister of his wife declared that, in looking for Mrs. Jenkins recently, he had said, "She better be careful or I'll get her." Jenkins, who vigorously denied assaulting his wife, said he left his home at 8 p. m. Thursday to visit her at 1420 Hickory street, where she was residing with a brother, Lester Swintord. He stayed there till 11:30 p. m., he averred, and then walked to Eighteenth street and Chouteau avenue with his wife, where they parted, five blocks from Lafayette Park, and said he then returned home on a street car.

Conflicting Accounts Given.

Swinford and a woman residing at the Hickory street house, gave different accounts of the time of Jenkins' arrival and the actions of Mrs. Jenkins in meeting him then. The other woman, Mrs. Evelyn Harris, related that Mrs. Jenkins told last Wednesday of having been out with her husband the night before, when, according to this recital, Jenkins remarked: "If I thought I had to go over the road for that case at Elvins, Mo., I'd kill you and myself."

Jenkins had reference to a charge of felonious assault pending against him in St. Francois County for striking Harry Miller, a merchant at Elvins, Jenkins' home, with a three-pound can of tomatoes, on July 10. Jenkins is under $500 bond to answer this charge in Circuit Court next November.

Stolen Clothing Found.

The police reported finding at Jenkins' residence part of the $200 worth of clothing which disappeared from the home of Mrs. Luke Reed, 2609 Natural Bridge avenue, Aug. 22. Mrs. Jenkins was ordered held prisoner at the hospital in connection with the investigation of this matter.

First identification of Mrs. Jankins was brought about through Post-Dispatch reporters 12 hours after she was found in the park, before she had recovered consciousness. She suffered an apparent skull fracture, concussion of the brain, a severe stab wound in the neck and bad face bruises.

Held on Confidence Game Charge.

AURORA, Ill., Sept. 26.—The police were notified today that Fred Parks of Joliet had been arrested at Tavares, Fla., on a Kane County confidence game indictment, charging him with having obtained $2500 from Aurora business men for stock he never delivered. Parks spent some time in Aurora demonstrating a four-wheeled tractor which he claimed would revolutionize farming but whether the money he is alleged to have received was for an interest in the machine or its manufacture is not revealed by the police.

WRITERS OF LETTER TO GIRL SENTENCED

Two Youths Given Three Years Each in Penitentiary at Leavenworth.

For sending an obscene letter to a 15-year-old girl, Louis Jones, 18 years old, of 2402 North Ninth street, and Earl Durkin, 19, of 2822A North Twelfth street, yesterday, were sentenced by Federal Judge Faris to three years in Leavenworth prison.

The name of a young man friend of the girl was forged to the letter, seemingly in an attempt to destroy her regard for him. The deception was uncovered and Jones and Durkin pleaded guilty.

Leniency was recommended by District Attorney Curry because of the defendants' youth. He suggested they be committed to jail, instead of penitentiary.

"I have come to the conclusion that you can't spoil a bad egg," said Judge Faris after reading the objectionable letter.

"These boys have bad records. They have been arrested frequently by police, I presume, largely because of their association with thieves and criminals. I feel that society will profit by their being put away."

Jones and Durkin had been arrested by police on charges of larceny, robbery, gambling and fighting, but neither had been convicted.

$40,000,000 Mine Merger Planned.

By the Associated Press.

MADISONVILLE, Ky., Sept. 26.—To reduce operating costs and meet competition in states served by the Western Kentucky coal fields, operators in Henderson, Davis, Ohio, Christian, Webster and Muhlenberg counties, Kentucky, today discussed a merger of all underground and strip mines, with a few exceptions, in this part of the State. Around $40,000,000 in properties is involved. Those called to conference included all mining companies except the Western Kentucky Coal Co., Sterling Coal Co. of Kentucky, Madison Coal Corporation and all coal mines which have produced less than 25 cars this year.

DR. BREASTED TO SUPERVISE EXCAVATION OF ARMAGEDDON

Archaeologist Leaves Chicago for Orient to Search for Relics on Ancient Battlefield.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—Dr. James Henry Breasted, head of the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago, is leaving for London and the Orient to start his staff excavating Armageddon and to supervise other important pieces of archaeological work. Armageddon is to be searched for records and other relics in this most ancient of historic battlefields.

Dr. Breasted has another surprise in store for scientific men and students of bible history. He has what the foremost authority in archaeology believes is an exact and authentic picture of the tower of Babel.

"I have the picture of the Tower of Babel in my new book to be published in the spring and nobody is going to see it," said Prof. Breasted.

One gathered, although Dr. Breasted would not make a definite statement, that he had found among the hundreds of ruined cities of the Euphrates Valley a clay tablet in some unearthed library bearing a picture of the tower.

RETIRED CONTRACTOR KILLS HIMSELF IN BATHTUB

Police Find Riley B. Kilgore Dead in Bathroom of Apartment.

Riley B. Kilgore, 75 years old, a retired bridge contractor, killed himself with two shots from a revolver, at 8 p. m. yesterday in the bathroom of his apartment at 1241 North Kingshighway.

Kilgore had gone into the bathroom and locked the door. A moment later, Mrs. Kilgore heard two shots. She telephone to the Page Boulevard Police Station.

Policemen forced the bathroom door open and found Kilgore lying dead in the tub. One bullet had entered below the heart and another had taken effect above the right ear. He was partly clothed.

Herrin Klan Parade Called Off.

By the Associated Press.

HERRIN, Ill., Sept. 26.—A Ku Klux Klan parade scheduled here tonight was called off late today. Mayor Marshall McCormack, who had urged cancellation of parade plans because of possible disorder, was informed by a representative of Gale Carter of Springfield, grand dragon of the Illinois klan, that the parade would not be held.

WOMAN CROSSING STREET INJURED BY STREET CAR

Motorman, Arrested, Says His Brakes Failed to Work When Applied.

Mrs. Bertha Ryan, 38 years old, of 6029 Water street, suffered a probable fracture of the skull and other serious injuries at 5 p. m. yesterday when she was struck by a southbound Broadway street car while crossing from the east to the west side of Broadway at Fillmore street.

According to witnesses, Mrs. Ryan stepped into the path of the street car in attempting to get out of the way of an automobile coming from the opposite direction. She was first taken home and later removed to City Hospital, where she was found to have sustained, besides the probable skull fracture, several broken ribs, probable internal injuries, lacerations of the face and bruises about the body.

Elmer Forrest, 12, of 6006 North Broadway, motorman of the car, and Joseph L. Musgraves, 28, of 2530 West Florissant avenue, conductor, were arrested and taken to the Carondelet District Station, where they were released on common law bonds. Forrest said he tried to stop, but the brakes failed to hold.

HIGH SCHOOL BOY AND GIRL WED; TO GO TO UNIVERSITY

Return From Honeymoon in North and Now Plan to Enter Washington U.

The marriage last March of Miss Elise Loretta Waters to William Albert Kessler, son of I. J. Kessler, chemical engineer, as the result of a romance begun more than two years ago in Soldan High School, has become known upon their return from a honeymoon in the Northern lake country.

Mr. and Mrs. Kessler were graduated from Soldan last January. They plan to enter Washington University this fall. Kessler, who is 20 years old, will go into the School of Commerce and Finance. Mrs. Kessler, who is 19, will take the college course.

Only their relatives and most intimate friends knew of their marriage at Alton on March 2, although they say no especial effort was made to keep it secret. Mrs. Kessler is the daughter of Mrs. Loretta Waters of 6429 Kingsbury avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Kessler are residing at 5520 Clemens avenue, the home of Kessler's parents.

PLANE FALLS IN SPEED RECORD TRIAL

Two French Flyers Hurt in Crash of Craft Built for Transatlantic Flight.

By the Associated Press.

DREUX, France, Sept. 26.—The air plane, specially constructed for a nonstop flight from Paris to New York, planned by Paul Tarascon and Francis Coli, was destroyed when it crashed, 12 miles south of here, today. Tarascon and a companion named Favreau, who were trying for a speed record in the machine, were injured.

Tarascon and Favreau were brought to the hospital here. They took off from Etampes shortly after noon yesterday to attempt to create a new speed mark for a 3000-kilometer flight, making the circuit from Etampes to Chartres to Orleans.

Tarascon's condition is causing anxiety, but Favreaux's injuries are not serious.

The plane was on fire when it fell and a high wind was blowing.

Officers Elected and By-Laws Amended by Business Men's Association.

A program of development and improvement for South St. Louis is announced by the Business Men's Association of South St. Louis, formerly the South St. Louis Business Men's League, which was incorporated in 1923.

By-laws of the organization have been amended to provide for the appointment of various standing committees to promote the location of new industries in South St. Louis; to assist the wholesale, retail, banking and commercial interests; to study and investigate terminal facilities, including freight and switching rates, and the use of the free bridge by railroads; to assist in the improvement of river docking facilities; to work toward beautification of the river front; to obtain better street lighting and transportation, and to investigate apid transit and traffic problems.

At a meeting at Mission Inn last week, the following officers were elected: Richard Moore, president; Charles E. Golterman, first vice president; P. J. Pauly, second vice president; Charles F. Betz, third vice president, and J. R. Giessenbier.

Directors are: Alex Miltenberger, John F. Queeny, A. C. Carpenter, P. J. Pauly, Charles Spiess, A. G. Ruthmann and E. J. Wallace. A permanent office will be opened in South St. Louis.

INCOME TAX MAN RESIGNS FOR NONPAID SUCCESSOR

Deputy Commissioner Bright Gives Over Position to C. R. Nash.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—The Treasury has announced the resignation of James G. Bright as deputy internal revenue commissioner in charge of the income tax, effective next Wednesday. Bright will enter the private practice of accountancy in Washington. He will be succeeded by Charles R. Nash, assistant to the commissioner, who will assume the deputyship without compensation while retaining his present duties. Bright, who is a native of Washington, D. C., and a veteran of the Spanish-American War, entered the Treasury in 1918 and reached his present post after a series of promotions in July, 1923. Nash is from St. Paul. He has been assistant to the Internal Revenue Commissioner since 1923.

REV. O'REGAN TO DELIVER SERMON AT PILGRIMAGE

Archbishop Glennon to Participate in Exercise at the Visitation Academy.

The Rev. James J. O'Regan, professor of philosophy at St. Louis University, will deliver the sermon at the pilgrimage exercises to be held at 3:30 p. m. today at the Visitation Academy, Cabanne and Belt avenues. His subject will be "The Catholic Layman and the Kingdom of Christ."

The occasion of the services is the pilgrimage made to the shrine of the Sacred Heart each year by thousands of Catholics of the city and adjacent territory. A procession will form at 3:15 p. m. at Delmar and Union boulevards, proceeding thence to the shrine, where Archbishop Glennon will celebrate a solemn benediction. Congregational singing of the O Salutaris and the Tantum Ergo will be held under the direction of Prof. George T. Devereux, organist at St. Francis Xavier's church. Delegations from the Young Men's Sodality, St. Vincent de Paul Society and fourth degree Knights of Columbus, under whose auspices the pilgrimage is made, will be in the procession.

DOUG DEEDS MARY ESTATE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Sept. 26.—Forty pieces of Los Angeles real estate valued at more than $1,000,000 were deeded today by Douglas Fairbanks to his wife, Mary Pickford, and her mother, Charlotte Pickford Smith.

John Mott, attorney for Fairbanks, refused to disclose the nature of the transaction.

Electrocuted in Basement.

BOONVILLE, Ind., Sept. 26.—Robert Richardson, 37 years old, was killed in the basement of his home last night when he was electrocuted by a wire which he probably was mending. A wife and three children survive.

USED-OR ABUSED?

People have gotten over the idea that "Used Cars" and "Abused Cars" are synonymous. They now realize that it is purely a matter of judgment on their part; that is, judgment in choosing a dependable dealer to buy from.

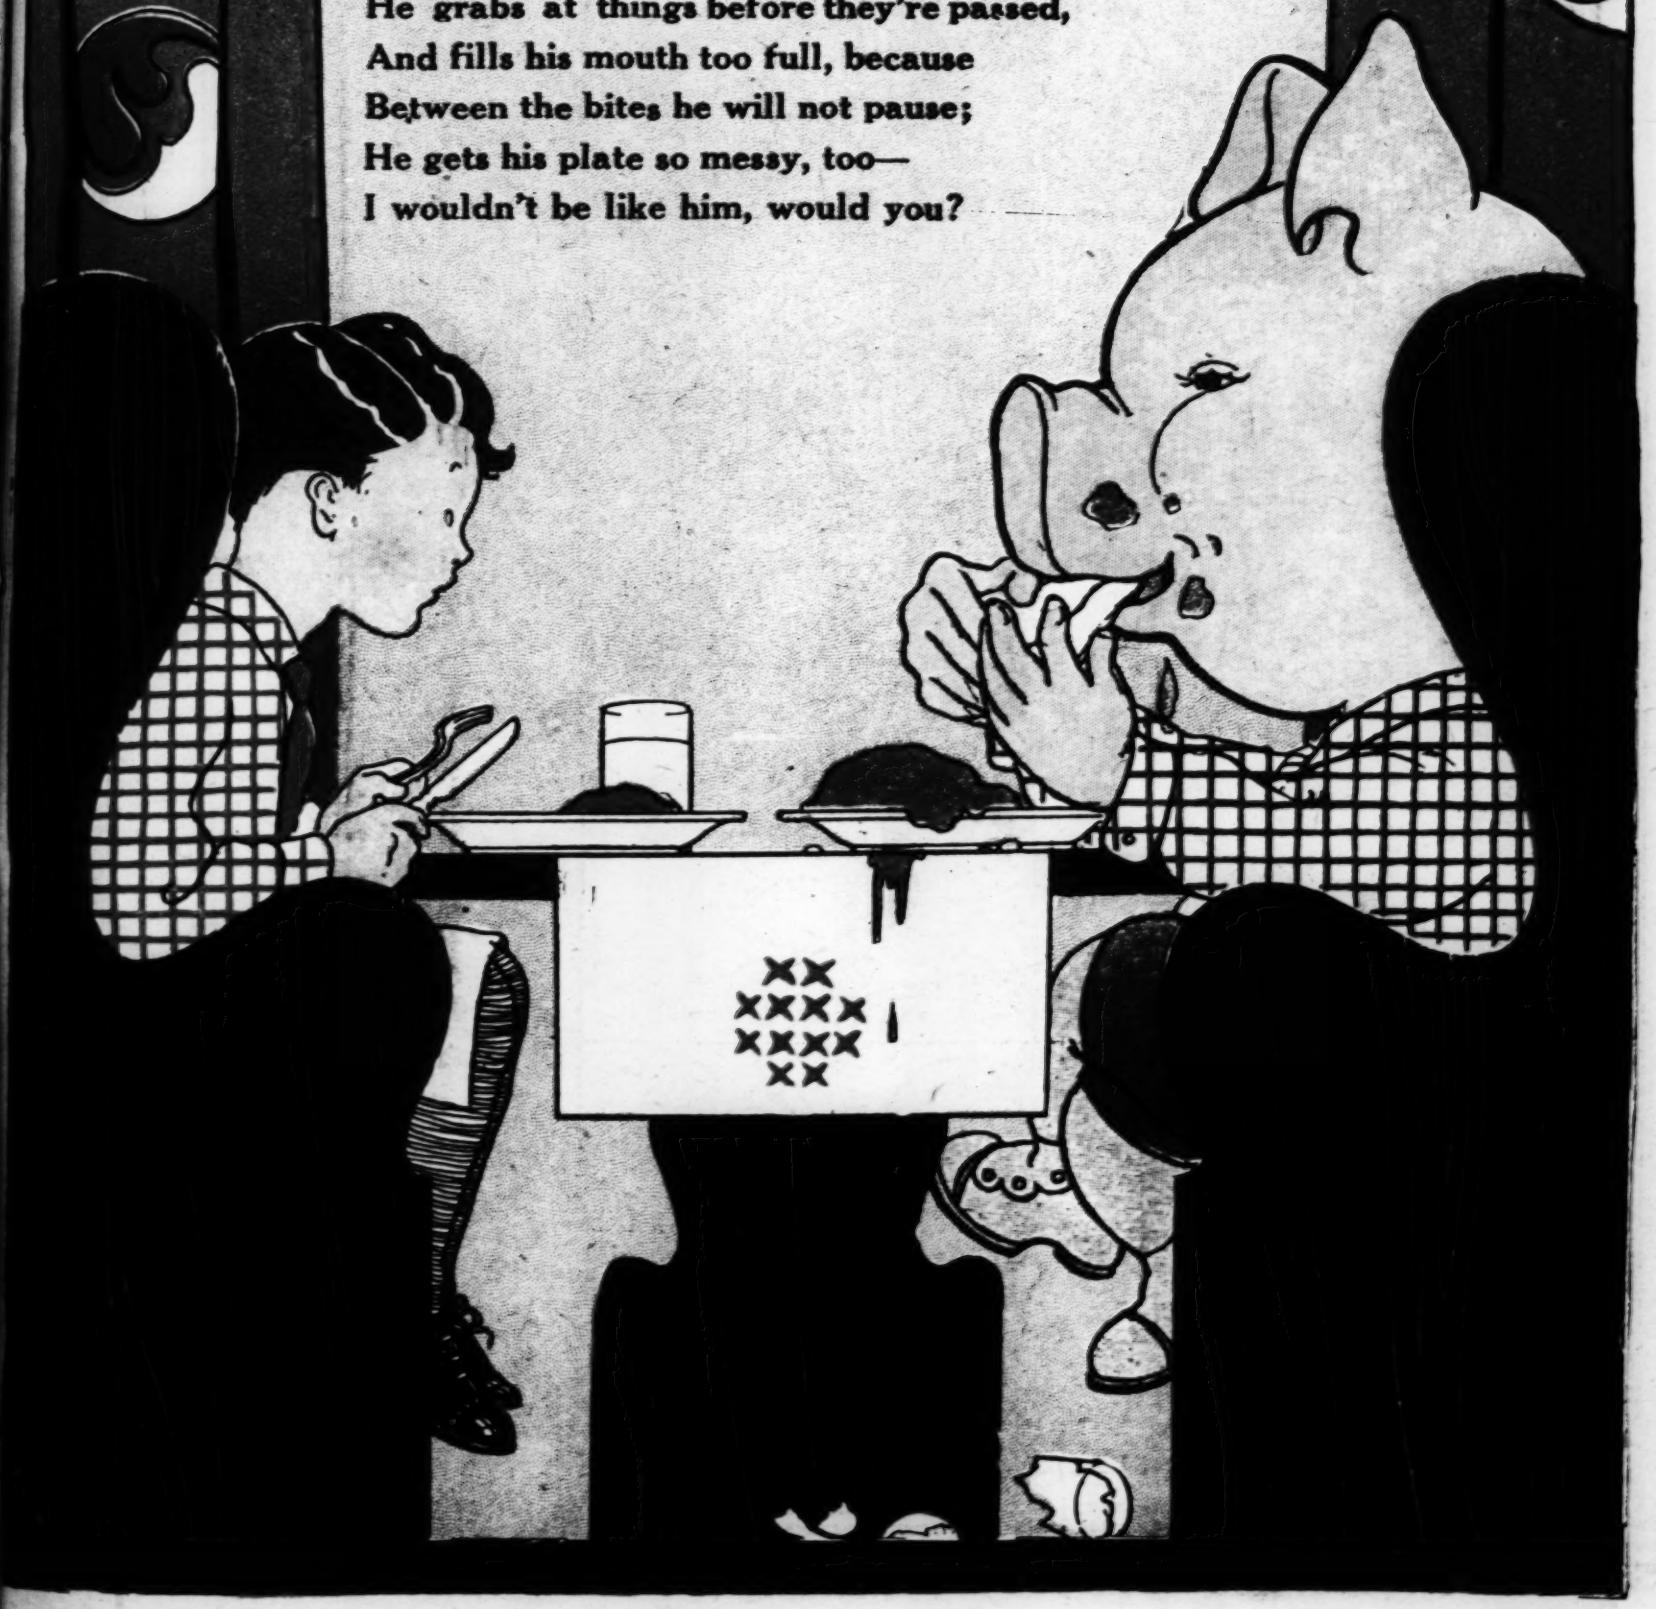
R-U-A—
PETER PIG?

By JANE CORBY

A Peter Pig eats much too fast;
He grabs at things before they're passed,
And fills his mouth too full, because
Between the bites he will not pause;
He gets his plate so messy, too—
I wouldn't be like him, would you?



The Wonderful Stories of "OZ"

by L. Frank Baum

Betsy Braves the Billows

AT dusk the party came to a brook on the banks of which Queen Ann commanded them to make camp for the night.

Each officer carried in his pocket a tiny white tent. This, when placed upon the ground, quickly grew in size until it was large enough to permit the owner to enter it and sleep within its canvas walls. Files was obliged to carry a knapsack, in which was not only his own tent but an elaborate pavilion for Queen Ann, besides a bed and chair and a magic table. This table, when set upon the ground in Ann's pavilion, became of large size, and in a drawer of the table was contained the Queen's supply of extra clothing, her manicure and toilet articles and other necessary things. The royal bed was the only one in the camp, the officers had private sleeping in hammocks attached to their tent poles.

There was also in the knapsack a flag bearing the royal emblem of Oogaboo, and this flag Files flew upon its staff every night, to show that the country they were in had been conquered by the Queen of Oogaboo. So far, no one but themselves had seen the flag, but Ann was pleased to see it flutter in the breeze and considered herself already a famous conqueror.

The waves dashed and the lightning flashed and the thunder rolled and the ship struck a rock. Betsy Bobbin was running across the deck and the shock sent her flying through the air until she fell with a splash into the dark blue water. The same shock caught Hank, a thin little, sad-faced mule, and tumbled him also into the seat, far from the ship's side.

When Betsy came up, gasping for breath because the wet plunge had surprised her, she reached out in the dark and grabbed a bunch of hair. At first she thought it was the end of a rope, but presently she heard a dismal "Hee-haw!" and knew she was holding fast to the end of Hank's tail.

Suddenly the sea was lighted up by a vivid glare. The ship, now in the far distance, caught fire, blew up and sank beneath the waves.

Betsy shuddered at the sight, but just then her eye caught a mass of wreckage floating near her and she let go the mule's tail and seized the edge of a raft, pulling herself up so that she rode upon it in safety. Hank also saw the raft and swam to it, but he was so clumsy he never would have been able to climb upon it had not Betsy helped him to get aboard.

They had to crowd close together, for their support was only a hatch-cover torn from the ship's deck; but it floated them fairly well and both the girl and the mule knew it would keep them from drowning.

The storm was not over, by any means, when the ship went down. Blinding bolts of lightning shot from cloud to cloud and the clamor of the thunderclaps echoed far over the sea. The waves tossed the little raft here and there as a child tosses a rubber ball and Betsy had a solemn feeling that for hundreds of watery miles in every direction there was no living thing besides herself and the small donkey.

Perhaps Hank had the same thought, for he gently rubbed his nose against the frightened girl and said "Hee-haw!" in his softest voice, as if to comfort her.

"You'll protect me, Hank dear, won't you?" she cried helplessly, and the mule said "Hee-haw!" again, in tones that meant a promise.

On board the ship, during the days that preceded the wreck, when the sea was calm, Betsy and Hank had become good friends; so, while the girls might have preferred a more powerful protector in this dreadful emergency, she felt that the mule would do all in a mule's power to guard her safety.

Hank did not sleep a wink. Perhaps he felt it his duty to guard Betsy. Anyhow, he crouched on the raft beside the tired sleeping girl and watched patiently until the first light of dawn swept over the sea.

The light wakened Betsy Bobbin. She sat up, rubbed her eyes and stared across the water.

"Oh, Hank; there's land ahead!" she exclaimed.

"Hee-haw!" answered Hank in his plaintive voice.

The raft was floating swiftly toward a very beautiful country and as they drew near Betsy could see banks of lovely flowers showing brightly between leaf trees. But no people were to be seen at all.

"I'd like some breakfast, Hank," remarked the girl, feeling more cheerful now than she was on dry land; "but we can't eat the flowers, although they do smell mighty good."

"Hee-haw!" replied Hank and trotted up a little pathway to the top of the bank.

Betsy followed and from the eminence looked around her. A little way off stood a splendid big greenhouse, its thousands of crystal panes glittering in the sunlight.

"There ought to be people somewhere 'round," observed Betsy thoughtfuly; "gardeners, or somebody. Let's go and see, Hank. I'm getting hungrier ev'ry minute."

So they walked toward the great greenhouse and came to its entrance without meeting with anyone at all. A door stood ajar, so Hank went in first, thinking if there was any danger he could kick out and warn his companion. But Betsy was close at his heels and the moment she entered was lost in amazement at the wonderful sight she saw.

The greenhouse was filled with magnificent rosebushes, all growing in big pots. On the central stem of each bush bloomed a splendid Rose, gorgeously colored an deliciously fragrant, and in the center of each Rose was the face of a lovely girl.

As Betsy and Hank entered, the heads of the Roses were drooping and their eyelids were closed in slumber; but the mule was so amazed that he uttered a loud "Hee-haw!" and at the sound of his harsh voice the rose leaves fluttered, the Roses raised their heads and a hundred startled eyes were instantly fixed upon the intruders.

"I—I beg your pardon!" stammered Betsy, blushing and confused.

"O-o-o-h!" cried the Roses, in a sort of sighing chorus; and one of them added: "What a horrid noise!"

"Why, that was only Hank," said Betsy, and to prove the truth of her words the mule uttered another loud "Hee-haw!"

At this all the Roses turned on their stems as far as they were able and trembled as if someone were shaking their bushes. A dainty Moss Rose gasped: "Dear me! How dreadfully dreadful!"

"It isn't dreadful at all," said Betsy, somewhat indignant. "When you get used to Hank's voice it will put you to sleep."

"Please go away!" begged one. "Can't you see you're frightening us out of a week's growth?"

DIRECTIONS

Cut along border and fold in half along dotted lines (.....). Starting with picture No. 1, by making one fold from the bottom up, where the dotted guides show, you can make a new picture. Make another fold from the bottom up and a third picture appears. Then return to No. 1 and fold from the top down, in the same manner, which will give you two more pictures. Last returning to picture No. 1 make one fold from the bottom and one fold from the top and you will get a surprise.

"Go away!" echoed Betsy. "Why, we've no place to go. We've just been wrecked."

"Wrecked?" asked the Roses in a surprised chorus.

"Yes; we were on a big ship and the storm came and wrecked it," explained the girl. "But Hank and I caught hold of a raft and floated ashore to this place, and—we're tired and hungry. What country is this, please?"

"This is the Rose Kingdom," replied the Moss Rose, haughtily, "and it is devoted to the culture of the rarest and fairest Roses grown."

"I believe it," said Betsy, admiring the pretty blossoms.

"But only Roses are allowed here," continued a delicate Tea Rose, bending her brows in a frown; "therefore you must go away before the Royal Gardener finds you and casts you back into the sea."

"Oh! Is there a Royal Gardener, then?" inquired Betsy.

"To be sure."

The Rainbow Catfish

By FRANK A. SECORD

At the old mill-pond, into which Dismal River cut during high-water time the season before, a number of strange happenings occurred. Old Man Dangle's mill was one of the last to change from water power to steam, and even then the ancient wheel remained in place, the expense being too great to remove it, according to the owner's idea. So the deep pond, the waters of which were no longer used to drive machinery, became a mecca to which young folks often journeyed the three miles from town, there to try their skill against that of fish of various kinds. If a lad arrived in town with a wonderful catch his invariable response to inquiries as to where the fish were caught was, "At Old Man Dangle's mill-pond."

All the fishermen saw was a dark object lashing in the pond and some streaks of rainbow-colored lights that showed up at the same spot.

One day it was whispered about town that Jim Bowers, while casting from a boat at the pond, got a mysterious strike and that, as he tried to reel in what he took to be a very large pickerel, of a sudden a monster popped its head out of the water at the spot where the end of the line might be, lashed the pond's surface into foam and disappeared. This wasn't so very queer in itself, but Jim Bowers positively declared that the monster was of the catfish variety and that it was most certainly marked like a rainbow trout.

"I saw its head as plainly as I see your noodle," said Jim, relating his experience to Bush Young, a man of the town. "The fish churned the water and as it flopped there like an alligator, I saw its colors gleaming in the semidarkness."

"Your tale don't jibe!" Bush laughed, thinking he had tripped Jim on a poor story. "If the pond was almost dark with the gathering shades of twilight, how could you see rainbow stripes on the fish?"

"Well," Jim continued, "that's the funny part of it. The catfish actually had rainbow colors and they were lit up."

"Carried batteries and a lot of bulbs on its back for the purpose, I suppose; and"—— laughed Bush.

"I am not saying as to that," the lad broke in to hotly exclaim, "but I tell you the colors were illuminated!"

"Well, all I have to say is," chuckled Bush Young, "that if you are really in earnest you have a greater imagination than anybody I've yet met up with in my 40 odd years of life, young fellow. If you are trying to patch up a good fairy tale, your lying is too far-fetched to go well!"

"Dismal River has yielded 'water dogs,' 'snake eels and some darned mean-looking turtles," ventured Jim; "and you know the Dismal overflowed into that pond last year."

"Be that as it may," Young laughed. "Dismal River never dumped any lit-up catfish into Dangle's pond—take it from me, youngster!"

Jim Bowers received right there the reputation of being the biggest liar, when it comes to fish stories, in that locality. He was a bashful sort of boy and fretted under the imputation until he ceased to mention his experience with the illuminated catfish.

One Saturday evening Dangle's mill-pond floated several boats from which boys were fishing with varying success. On shore a bonfire blazed and its reflection betrayed the slightest ripple on the water. Few words were spoken, for the reason that echoes prevailed in the vicinity on account of the peculiar location of the body of water. However, as strikes became fewer and catches very scarce, somebody giggled a moment and then cried from a boat: "This'd be a good time for Jim Bowers to get a look at his illuminated catfish."

The words had scarcely been spoken and repeated a couple of times in echo, before the speaker, Earl Dryer, uttered a yell, followed by the exclamation, "Gosh, all hemlock!" and others, attracted by the cry, upon turning their attention to his boat, beheld the lad floundering in its bottom. At the side of the boat and churning the water was plainly made out a dark object of no mean size.

The monster's vigorous acts almost paralyzed those on shore and in other boats, who beheld them. Earl's pole had fallen into the water, his line was tangled over his boat and his reel could be heard clattering as if spinning.

"She's a big one, Earl!" shouted the boy's companions, hurrying towards his boat in their own. "Grab your line, fellow! Don't let it get away!"

"It's Jim Bowers' illuminated catfish!" young Dryer gasped, as he half raised up in his skiff and tried to recover the pole.

Somebody in the distance laughed, but the laugh soon turned to an exclamation of surprise; for suddenly, in the midst of the churning of the monster in the water, a number of brilliant lights showed up—three strings of them—and they reflected red, green, purple and yellow!

There was too much excitement for the onlookers to think about using their heads in carefully surveying the queer manifestation. All the fishermen saw was a dark object lashing in the pond and some streaks of rainbow-colored lights that showed up at the same spot.

When the lights appeared the second time—for Earl Dryer had seen them for an instant just before he flopped down in his boat and dropped his pole—this boy grabbed his oars and desperately "beat it" for shore. The nose of his craft scarcely grounded in the shallows before Earl leaped out and, in less than half a dozen bounds he covered three times as many yards and ran back from the water's edge to the grass and trees.

Out in the pond quiet suddenly came. The lights disappeared soon after gleaming and the bonfire on shore betrayed not a ripple on the surface of the water.

Several boys rushed up to Earl and plied him with questions, to all of which this youth, his teeth chattering and his voice uncertain, replied, "I don't know! I don't know!"

"Did it strike your bait?" someone inquired.

"I don't know!" almost moaned the rattled youngster.

"Could you feel it on the line?"

Earl shook his head, finally decisively declaring he'd never, so long as he lived, fish again in Old Man Dangle's mill-pond. "Dismal River's a hoodoo, I tell you," said the lad.

"Now, see here!" a couple of boys rasped, coming up just then. "Do you stand there and tell us, Earl Dryer, that you were not in on a joke? Do you have enough nerve to try to put over a coarse job?"

"Trick!" gasped the boy of the unexperience, "what do mean, trick! Go there, yourselves, see if I care. Hope thing gets you if you go!"

"Rats!" and following the exclamation disgust, the two shoved off a skiff, began casting and occasionally muttering for the benefit of ashore, all of eagerly watched velopments.

"It probably strike again—that it got stuck hook," ventured

"Sure, it it got stuck with hook," called those in the just as he words he tumbled the water was foam and were three bright lights monster was The bonfire was burning bright now and plainly outlined head of the fish, was unmistakably of a giant cat.

MRS. ROBERT GOELET No. 1 and her husband. She was Miss Whelan of Philadelphia.
—Paul Thompson.

ROBERT GOELET is about to make his third marriage, while his most recent wife has just married her husband No. III.

First this sportsman who inherited $35,000,000 and won his spurs in the Argonne married a Philadelphia banker's daughter, then he wedded the former wife of a Russian "Prince"—Both ladies were "artistic" and both divorced him—Apparently he is through with Art except that the next Mrs. Goelet-to-be was voted the prettiest girl at Newport—He is an expert horseman and fond of adventure.

SHE WILL BE Mrs. Robert Goelet No. 3. Miss Roberta Willard of Newport, photographed recently with fiance.

HE dangers of war and the dangers of sport have left Captain Robert Goelet, millionaire American sportsman, unscathed. He has braved them both and added to his fame. But the dangers of art are something else again. Twice has the gallant Captain been divorced. Now he is to marry Miss Roberta Willard, who, in the season of her debut in 1916, was voted the prettiest girl at Newport. Almost simultaneously comes word that the "artistic" Mrs. Fernanda Goelet, who was Captain Robert's second wife, has herself made a third venture into matrimony. Her new husband is Don Vladimiro Notarbartoli di Duchi di Villarosa. No less.

Art didn't appear in the pleadings in Captain Robert's two divorce suits, but Art—with a capital A—was never far in the background in those marital adventures. The first Mrs. Goelet wanted to be an artist and it is significant that shortly after her divorce she married Henry Clews Jr. who had deserted Wall street for a studio at Newport, and with whom she had studied. While the second Mrs. Goelet, in order to marry the Captain, got herself released from a theatrical contract held by Morris Gest, who averred when she signed it that he had at last discovered a greater Duse. With such a history as that the muses won't be welcome in the neighborhood when Captain Goelet sets up housekeeping again.

A two-fisted fighting man is he. His fortune of $35,000,000, inherited from his father, the late Ogden Goelet, didn't make the Captain a mollycoddle. He jumped for adventure's sake into the Red Cross when the World War broke out and when it looked like Uncle Sam must take a hand he came back to America to enter the first training camp. After acquiring a captaincy he went into the Argonne and distinguished himself for dash and courage.

IT WAS just after the war—in 1919—when Captain Goelet had got back to Fifth avenue, that a big "husky" bumped into the millionaire in uniform one day on Broadway. He almost knocked the Captain down. Captain Goelet turned on the big fellow with a few words from the vocabulary of "this man's army." Evidently the stranger didn't like it. He smashed the Captain in the face. Two teeth were broken. Then Goelet unlimbered into action. Quick as a flash he landed blow after blow on his adversary. The roughneck got a beautiful trouncing. After the battle was over the Captain haled him into court. The man paid a fine of $15. That story is told here as a warning to Apollo, if that patron of the arts should have designs on the "castle" Captain Goelet will soon call home.

Twice horses have almost killed him. At the Brookline Country Club while riding a steeplechase in 1900 he almost met death. A few years ago, at the Goshen track, he mounted an unbroken horse, which, when he could not throw the Captain, rushed through a half-open gate and brushed him off. It was a narrow escape, but it didn't terrorize him. Captain Goelet still loves horses just as well. His adventures into private horse racing are classic in his social set.

Speed and action fascinate him. Every now and then he's bobbing across the sea on this mission or on that, in search of thrill and excitement. He has a turn for mechanics that amounts, friends say, to genius. One of his inventions is a motor sled designed to carry a dozen passengers and which is driven by an airplane propeller.

THAT is the character of the man the public knows. His first wife, when her story was told in the divorce court, however, drew no picture of a hero. She was Miss Elsie Whelan, daughter of a rich Philadelphia banker. They were married in June, 1904, and had two children, Ogden and Peter. In 1914 they were divorced.

Mrs. Goelet, so the story ran, had intended to sue her husband on grounds of non-support. Even the divorce lawyers of the Newport colony wouldn't stand for that. Everybody knew she had been surrounded with luxury. So charges of "extreme cruelty and other gross misbehavior and wickedness repugnant to and in violation of the marriage contract," were made.

Mrs. Goelet was an "artistic" young woman at the time. Her husband's thoughts were not concerned with art. Perhaps he resented it, also, when at Newport in 1913 she enrolled herself as a student of Henry Clews Jr., who had a studio in that summer colony. The wife told the Judge in 1914 that Captain Goelet had said that "my art and music were pure affectation."

It was a divorce de luxe. The testimony was all taken and presented in a bound volume to the Judge, though the record doesn't say whether the binding was hand tooled or crushed levant. Here was a washing of family linen that seemed to be almost sheerest cambric. Some of the things Mrs. Goelet charged were:

He constantly twitted her.

At dinner he would advise unmarried friends never to wed—the meantime looking fixedly at her.

He censored her lists of dinner guests. "He objected to the Grand Duke Alexander of Russia as an improper person, though his mother had entertained the Grand Duke.

"I was humiliated by having to have a public caterer come to the house and serve the dinner.

"I was so afraid something dreadful would happen that I had to hire detectives to protect my guests.

"He said I could only have eight people to dinner and only give a dinner twice a week.

"He said that I drank too much chocolate and that chocolate was expensive."

Goelet's valet was a witness for his master's wife. "He dined in a separate room, in full view of her guests, to humiliate her," the servant testified.

It was enough. The Court decided a divorce was imperative. Thus was the family linen washed, and the garment of art came out unsmirched.

TWO months later the first Mrs. Goelet was the happy bride of Henry Clews Jr. His first wife had been a famous Baltimore beauty, Louise Hollingsworth Morris, who had gotten a Dakota divorce from the famous Freddie Gebhart in 1901 to marry, just a month later, Clews, who was eight years her junior.

Capt. Goelet's next wife wasn't an amateur. She was a professional artist. Witness the contract by which Morris Gest agreed to pay her $40 a week for a year when he engaged her to play the role of Chrysys, priestess of the love goddess, in his spectacular production of "Aphrodité." Witness the ecstasy of the wily Morris when she signed:

"The moment I looked on her," he said, "I knew that here was such a find as one makes only once in a generation. She had beauty and grace, but besides those she had that indefinable thing we call magnetism. Furthermore, she was extremely intelligent and temperamental. I recognized that with proper training here was a woman who might become a second Bernhardt, another Duse, and she was most beautiful."

The second Mrs. Goelet, now Donna Villarosa, was then "Princess" Fernanda Raibouchinsky. She had come to America with her husband, Nicholas Raibouchinsky, whose job it was to buy munitions for the Government of the Czar. After the courts had separated her from her husband and his luxuriant beard she forbade her friends to call her "Princess." The daughter of Prof. Mariano Rocchi, professor of painting in the University of Perugia, she was "artistic" to her fingertips. She and her husband had installed themselves in a suite at the Knickerbocker Hotel, where gay parties of the bohemian set were frequent. It is believed Captain Goelet first met his future second wife at one of these. She was an accomplished musician and linguist.

For Nicholas Raibouchinsky there was another woman somewhere. Madame, the Princess, discovered this one day when her husband was sued for $45,000, which he refused to pay, saying it was a gambling debt. The other woman entered into the divorce court upon the complaint of the "Princess," who was awarded a decree. Shortly she sailed for Paris. Not long after Captain Goelet followed.

"You had better ask her," he said, when reporters wanted to know if he were going abroad to marry the Princess.

It was a quiet wedding—quite different from that stunning affair of 15 years before when Goelet and his first wife were married, with Alice Roosevelt for a bridesmaid, in Wayne, a Philadelphia suburb. This was a very quiet affair, news of which came to the world through a formal announcement from Captain Goelet's business offices.

SOCIALLY this second Mrs. Goelet was not a success. Perhaps the "artistic life" before her marriage had something to do with it. Captain Goelet brought her home just before Christmas, 1919, and they lived in their town apartment, 830 Fifth avenue, New York, and at Captain Goelet's magnificent country place at Goshen. In January, 1921, their son, Robert Jr., was born. Even before that there was talk of differences between the couple. Mrs. Goelet, it was said, longed for the artistic atmosphere to which she was used. Her husband was occupying himself at Goshen in the winter with trotting races on ice, trotting races under saddle and other sports. The gossip evaporated when the baby came. But it wasn't long before there were more rumors of a shipwreck of the Goelet marital bark.

At the end of the season Mrs. Goelet went to Paris. In February, 1924, she filed suit for divorce.

When Mrs. Ogden Goelet heard of her son's second marriage she deeply resented it—that much is known. She refused to meet either him or his bride. She threatened, furthermore, to disinherit him. Her private fortune is $75,000,000, which she said she would leave to the children of his first wife and those of his sister, the Duchess of Roxeburgh, with whom she makes her home in London. But the Duchess is very fond of her brother and invited him to bring this youngest son to see her over in London—where the grandmother might grow to like him. Through little Robert Jr. a truce between mother and son was made. The new wife was received.

But even the stamp of the maternal foot didn't open the doors of Newport to the new bride. Many homes were still closed to her and her hero-husband. Gossip has it that the second Mrs. Goelet got tired of being snubbed. She gave up the struggle for social recognition in October, before she went to Paris.

Was Captain Goelet downcast by this second suit for divorce? It is not so reported. Madame, it is said, found him a very courteous defendant to her suit. There was some question as to whether the French courts would grant Mrs. Goelet her freedom because Goelet did not live in France.

So across the sea went the chivalrous Captain. His presence assured her success. Friends say that it was a profitable venture. An antenuptial agreement between the pair, so one friend confides, provided that Captain Goelet was to settle $500,000 on her in case she sued for a divorce. If he sued he was to pay her $1,000,000. That was half a million dollars saved by courtesy.

And already society was predicting that as soon as he was free Captain Goelet would marry Roberta Willard and that prediction was partially confirmed when on August 1 of this year their engagement was announced by her parents, who had previously denied the rumor.

The bride-elect is a famous beauty. But nowhere in the public prints has it appeared that Miss Willard is a devotee of art

By HARRY R. BURKE.

TIME rolled back 5000 years in a little courtroom in Prince Rupert, British Columbia, the other day, and Man was primitive again, conceiving magic in the mysteries of life, and striking with hate made strong by fear to kill the thing he could not understand. The story was told of witchcraft in the lonely spaces of the great white North; of the Evil Manitou and his familiars, who bring death and famine by their medicine; of ghosts and ghostly animals who whisper secrets of the other world.

These were the stories Big Alec, a Nahanni brave, had told to arouse the Indians of the Tsillawdawhoot-Tinneh tribe to slay his rival, Atol "the Moccasin," who made bad medicine (so Alec said). The Moccasin was only a boy, but he was a rival in love to Big Alec, and the following story was told as evidence in the trial—how the tribal braves had condemned the youth, how Edie Loot, the aged squaw, had tied him to a sapling where he was left to hang head down till pity cut him loose; and of how—when that was done—he was bound again with babiche thongs and left to freeze to death on the ice-bound river.

Then time—as the movies say—cut back again into the Twentieth Century. A patrol from the Royal Canadian Mounted pushes its way through marsh and river and across snow wastes into the unknown. Where white men never go it seeks a phantom mystery and finds a skeleton. It opposes the White Man's magic to the medicine of the Indian. The murder is proved. The murderers are found. Primitive Indians, trembling with superstition, are brought to face the White Man's court. The White Man does his justice.

IT IS justice tempered with mercy. Big Alec, the lying brave, must toil beneath the grim walls of Oakalla Prison for the next five years. But Edie Loot, the squaw, is freed. Victim, more than accomplice, she, whose husband, Paul, had sickened and died.

Look upon the map at the sub-Arctic wastes. Here is Great Slave Lake, where rises the Mackenzie, and here Fort Simpson marks the place where the Liard River pours its yellow flood into that river's bed to travel 150 miles down toward the Arctic Sea, a muddy stream and a clear, before they mingle. "Riviere aux Liards" the Black-robed missionaries called it. River of poplars, that is. High in the mountains it rises and pushes a meandering way through muskeg lands, through marsh and swamp and bog, through a land where the White Man cannot live. Joining it from the north, shortly before it enters the Mackenzie, comes the Nahanni River, where Big Alec lived.

THIS district was the home of old Paul Loot and his family—Edie, the mother, Dan, Jimmy and Clem, his stalwart sons; and Lucy, his slim, clear-eyed daughter, who was like a fawn. There was another also in the home—Atol the Moccasin, who, orphaned when a canoe overturned in the white waters of a rapids, had been taken in by old Paul Loot. He was as one who is a poor relation and who does not count. His was the poorest portion of the family's food, although his kill was theirs. Fleetness of foot had given him his name. The Loot boys by his strength and speed knew him for a rival as a future brave, and banded together to keep him in his place. He was tolerated—and friendless.

Yet he had one friend. Lucy, budding into womanhood, admired his beauty and his strength as she looked upon him. Her soft eyes healed the hurts that others gave. Between the boy and girl grew up an understanding all unspoken.

Across those boggy wastes the Indian hears his news by "moccasin telegraph." The White Man doesn't know how the tale is carried. It may be that he can never know. What of it? The word went forth in the summer of 1922 that old Paul Loot, in the fastnesses of the River of the Poplars, had a daughter as beautiful as a fawn and to be desired of men. Old Paul himself had looked upon her with appraising eye. Many a blanket he could count as her purchase price from some rich brave.

Mysterious Nahanni. The home of Big Alec was the land where the two McLeods and their partner died mysteriously as they followed the lure of placer gold, to embalm themselves in the traditions of the North.

"The Evil Manitou," said the Indians, shuddering at the mention of the mighty name, "the mighty spirit medicine has killed them." And the mystery was never solved.

Nor was that of the death of Gray Wolf, the mighty hunter of the Nahannis, whose fate, the Indians say, was fixed upon him when he shot a grizzly bear which looked on him with its glazing eyes, and with them cast its spell. Animals can do this thing, the Tinneh Indians of the Tsillawadawhoot and the Nahanni say. And, so can Eskimoes. Here is the only trace of the belief in "the Evil Eye" among the American red men.

Even so bold a brave as Alec shuddered as he passed the Gray Wolf's moldering camp. For the ghost of the mighty hunter haunts the skeleton tepee still, a gaunt, gray shape that through the long nights of the Northern winter steals from tree to tree, calling in fearsome voice with a cry to chill men's blood.

Alec was rich. He had a "big debt"—that is, much credit—with the Hudson Bay factor at Fort Simpson. He had blankets and beads, good guns and ammunition and many pelts. Strong he was, a mighty hunter and fleet of foot, and even Atol the Moccasin could not match the big Nahanni on the long and lonely trail of winter traps. And Alec, too, was a teller of tales. In the tepee when the round of traps was made, that fall of 1922, he would tell his boastful tales, of his own forays, of great kills, of mighty wrestling and of fleeting race.

From where he sat, puffing at the Hudson Bay tobacco he had mixed with the willow's inner bark, old Paul Loot looked with smiling pride upon this bold Nahanni who had come to woo.

ATOL felt his youthful dreams shaken as the Northwind shakes leaves from the poplar trees along the Liard River when the frost has come. He could see his house of happiness fall before the big Nahanni's boasting, as the leaves of the aspen fall in autumnal hurricanes. By the hour he would sit, reading the doom of his love in the face of old Paul Loot, wondering if he dared to tell old Paul of his desire for Lucy. He was not a brave. He was a boy. And as youth will, he gnawed at his heart in silence, watching, hesitating. Big Alec scorned the boy, but there was hatred in his glance as he looked on Atol sitting there, or when his eye might intercept a look that Lucy meant for the Moccasin alone.

That mystery which drives the caribou out of the infinite snow wastes and into the infinite woods sent them, in that winter of 1922-23, into other hunting grounds than those of the Tsillawdawhoot-Tinneh. Even snowshoe rabbits and the ptarmigan were scarce. Famine stalked and the Indians stoically tightened their belts. They had been hungry before. Old Paul fell sick. Age, exposure, the hungry days were sapping the old brave's life. He lay now upon a skin-covered pallet of springy moss. Slowly he wasted while fever burned within. His family knew the end was near.

One still and frosty night as the stars wheeled low Lucy slipped from the tepee into the nearby willows where Atol waited to tell her of his fears.

"Big Alec makes bad medicine," he said. "The Evil Manitou has sent his spirit to hunt the caribou from out our country since the Nahanni came. It is the medicine the animals gave his father's fathers. It is that medicine that takes your father's life."

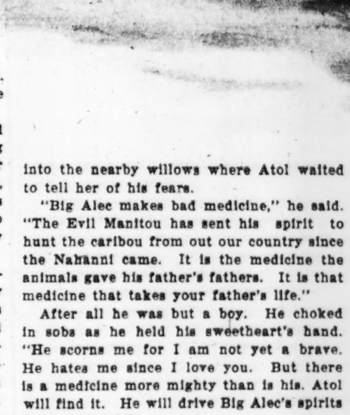
After all he was but a boy. He choked in sobs as he held his sweetheart's hand. "He scorns me for I am not yet a brave. He hates me since I love you. But there is a medicine more mighty than is his. Atol will find it. He will drive Big Alec's spirits from the land."

A twig snapped in the underbrush as they stole back to the tepee. Was it wolf, or could Big Alec have been spying there upon their tryst?

Atol was not alone in the belief that bad medicine had brought about the famine which they faced. Whispers like that had traveled before among the tepees of the Tsillawdawhoot-Tinneh. But Big Alec it was who gave them loud-voiced tongues.

"The Moccasin makes bad medicine," said the Nahanni brave. "He has driven the moose and caribou, the ptarmigan and rabbit from the hunting grounds. He has brought Paul Loot to die. He is like the bear and the wolf and the Eskimo. His look brings death. He has the Evil Eye. Each night I see him in the tepee shooting the poison of his eyes at old Paul Loot."

From tepee to tepee he went, telling his story. He was believed. The tribal medicine man beat his drums in his sweating tent, to drive away the evil spirits Atol had brought. Only the Loots were scoffers. "Atol is only a boy," jeered Dan, and Jimmy, and Clem. Yet old Edie, as she saw her husband fail, turned her back upon the lad. And when Paul Loot gave up the ghost there was no doubt in her hatred. She had seen the youth staring through long hours at her dying husband. She knew not that in his heart was love.



OF THE ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE: Inspector Sandys-Wunsch, Constable Neville and Constable Martin, who brought back Big Alec, the Nahanni brave from the great white wastes to face the white man's justice.

The braves were summoned to the council-lodge as she stayed to mourn beside the body of old Paul. Big Alec stood before the council fire and told his story.

"I COME," he said, "from the Nahannis. Great hunters are my people. To the North we go, following hard upon the great march of the caribou, whose feet on the barren places are like the roll of many drums. My people go far north to follow our kill. We hunt the musk-ox, and I myself have seen the Eskimoes, who dress themselves in the fur of seals and eat the blubber for their meat. They live in houses of snow. They kill with a look from their evil eyes because the great white bear, when man first came, gave them the power he had. Atol the Moccasin is as one of these. Like the fox, he is wise. Like the bear, he is strong in a mighty medicine of evil.

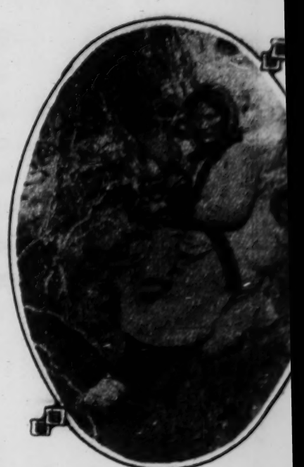
"From the East I came, from the white waters of the Nahanni, where my people are mighty warriors and are hunters of wondrous power. I passed the camp where Gray Wolf died. There was a shudder in my body but my heart was bold. It was there that a fox crossed my trail. He looked upon me with eyes of evil. I shot the fox and with my hatchet cleft him to the heart. Then I ate of that heart that his evil might not hurt me and that his wisdom I might understand. There came to me then a voice crying from the cabin of the Gray Wolf. Before that voice brave men might tremble, but I in my power feared nothing.

"'Thou art brave, Big Alec,' it said. 'Thou art bravest of all the Nahannis. Thou hast slain the Fox with the Evil Eye. Thou hast my thanks, for I can eat him now. As becomes a chief, I am grateful. I will tell you of my wisdom who makes the medicine that brings the Tsillawdawhoot-Tinneh to famine. I will tell of the Evil One whose mighty medicine has cast the Evil Eye upon Paul Loot, who is of that tribe.'"

The speaker paused to scan the faces, wrapt in attention and staring in fright, as they were lighted by the council fire. Spoke an ancient one of the council: "Did the Gray Wolf name the name, Oh, my brother of the mighty Nahannis, of him who makes that wicked medicine?"

"It was the name of Atol whom you have called the Moccasin. That name I heard."

Those braves went forth from the council lodge, determined men and grim avengers.



EDIE LOOT, squaw of the dece Liard River country, who helped avenge what she thought was the m der of her husband.

They sought out Atol, who was not in tepee of the Loots. They found him in a low thicket where he had raised a medi tent of skin. They found him bending a smoky fire of little sticks. And heard him whisper, above the image he carved, his words of magic. Then brought Edie Loot to where they held by the river side and the squaw of w he had thought as mother lashed the yo with the scorpions of her tongue.

Strong braves held the struggling while the woman with strong babiche tho tied his feet to a straight, tall sapling others had bent down, and then they fr the tree, which sprang straight up to bo and buffet the body of the Moccasin as hung there upside down. It was the t of an evil wizard among the Tsillawdawh Tinneh. It was the Indian's law.

UNTIL night he hung. And at mi from the tepee Lucy slipped, speed across the snows like a ghost shape the blue dusk, and cut her lover down. his side in the snow she sat, chafing swollen limbs, seeking to bring back rec nition to the dying man.

At dawn they found her, having miss the girl from the family tepee. T braves of the council seized upon the lit life that was left in Atol. With babic thongs they tied the body in a sitting po ure. They cast it out upon the frozen riv and they left it there.

Atol the wizard was dead. But famil kept company with the Indians through th winter. Even though, after two weeks, th buried the body of the Moccasin in a sh low grave. His medicine still worked magic. The Loot family saw Lucy fall. H strength was gone and she lay, where h father had lain, upon the pallet, wastin into a shadow of her self. Big Alec turn his back upon her and with the spring we north. She had strength when the gra grew green again to creep one day from h tepee to the shallow grave, where she th two sticks together with a babiche thon and raised above the boy she loved th White Man's Cross . . . perhaps th Great Manitou would know and hear h prayer. And who shall say it was not hear for before the Loots broke camp for t summer fishing she had joined her lov where the Hunt is Good.

By "moccasin telegraph" the story spe through the great white wastes and t White Man's telegraph carried it sout Somewhere in the North a boy had be murdered by the Tsillawdawhoot-Tinn tribe.

Superintendent Knight of the Royal C nadian Mounted in his office at Vancouv pressed a button for Inspector Sandy Wunsch. "Take a patrol. Catch the fir boat north. Investigate this rumor." Tha was all. It was enough to send Sandy Wunsch and two men for a whole year int the Great Unknown.

AT Thirty-Mile Bar on the Liard Rive an Indian girl was found who had see young Atol lying frozen on the ic There was a murder, then. They pushed o and, following her directions, came to a wi low thicket and saw standing there a cros They dug—a skeleton was uncovered. Now at last, there was something to work on.

They followed east and north seeking Edie Loot and her sons. The Moccasin tele graph was at work. Long miles dropped astern of the swirling paddles as the m of the Mounted drove their way along th river with the grinning thing that had onc been Atol in their canoe. At last charred embers, which were still warm, showed tha the fugitive Loots were near. Soon the were sighted, overtaken, and the long tr back to Prince Rupert, and the little cour room from which this story comes, begu

Big Alec was still to be caught. A fe days later Constable Neville arrested hi He averred his innocence until he saw th skull of Atol. "Ugh," he said, "his medi cine is mighty. The Moccasin has told th White Man all."

And so he really had—because Lucy Lo left that little white cross above his sha low grave.

WILL TY COBB AND GEORGE SISLER LOOK LIKE THIS AT THE MOMENT OF A CLOSE PLAY IN 1950?

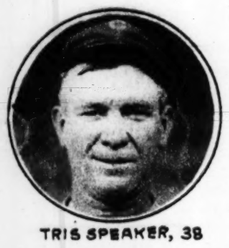
Is Baseball Becoming an Old Man's Game?

This year, above all others, has turned the limelight on those whom baseball calls its "old, old men." And are they weakening? Glance at the averages. That's the answer.

By ARTHUR H. SCHNEFF.

Golf has always been known as the oldster's pastime. Now baseball is deriving much of its brilliance from men who have passed "the quitting age." They didn't know when to quit.

YOUTH will be served—but not this year in the world of baseball. Because this is a year for old men—at least for what baseball calls old men. In the national pastime players in their late thirties are veterans, old war horses, athletes who have seen their prime and who are considered "about through." The competition is insistent, younger stars are pressing forward for their share of glory, ready and eager to replace a luminary whose light is considered on the wane. And so when a baseball player reaches 35 his manager begins to look about for a profitable exchange for younger talent, or else releases the veteran outright.

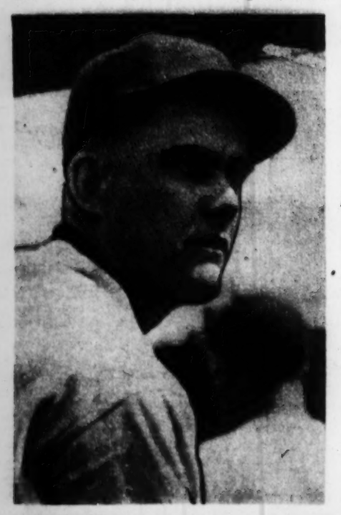


TRIS SPEAKER, 38

But this year the "old men" of the diamond are almost the whole show. It is unquestionably their year. They are cutting capers in the outfield, raising snappy little dust clouds along the baselines, pounding hits against the outfield fences and shooting fast ones past batters at the plate. It's a great year for the Methuselahs of the game, and they are getting their share of the limelight and laurels.

It is almost certain, at the time of this writing, that the 1925 world's series will be played by the Washington and Pittsburg teams. And there is no doubt that Washington owes her success in capturing the American League pennant to one fact. Stanley Harris, manager of the Senators, put his faith in a few old men, "has-beens," one of them actually a "cast-off," and his faith was rewarded liberally. The old-timers have come through for him with a vengeance and a splurge of success which smacks of the miraculous. They will not give up. When Washington won the American League flag last year and subsequently defeated the New York Giants for the world title, baseball experts regarded the performance as a "fluke." Internal dissension in a rival team, coupled with Washington's remarkable fighting spirit, made the victories possible, said the authorities. They predicted that unless Manager Harris strengthened his team with fresh young material the close of the 1925 season would see them in second division. But what did "Bucky" Harris do? He simply put his hopes on three aged pitchers and a veteran shortstop. The result? Age scored a knockout over youth.

HEINIE GROH, 36



BABE ADAMS, the oldest player in baseball. He won three games for Pittsburg in the 1909 World Series, and now, 16 years later, he will be called on again by the same club in this year's series.

CALLING a 35-year-old ball player an old man is not exaggeration. That age is equivalent, say, to 55 in the professional and business world. When a ball player enters the big leagues he is practically at the top of his profession. He has usually played amateur ball for a number of years. Then he has served a lengthy apprenticeship in the minor leagues before being graduated into the big tent. And from then on there is no rest for him. He plays almost every day in the season, including Sundays. He endures the discomforts of railway travel and enjoys few of the amenities of home life. He is "sold" from one team to another like a chattel and must be prepared to abandon New York for St. Louis if the club owner sees fit. And with all this he must play at top speed every minute. Fighting every second. Keeping in training, to a degree, even when off the field. Accepting cheers, curses, praise and condemnation with equanimity. He must constantly fight against the ambitious younger men coming up from below. He must not only maintain physical fitness and skill in play, but he must acquire a knowledge of the weakness, strength and habits of other batters, pitchers and catchers in order to remain efficient and to fortify himself against that day when his speed has slackened and he must rely upon his wits rather than on mere strength. And there is always the realization that the host of younger stars are greedily watching every move, ready to detect the slightest sign of weakening, eager to take his place. After 15 years of such stress and strain, then, a veteran of the diamond is not only an old ball player. He is, indeed, in many respects an old man.

THAT is why followers of the national pastime gave up the Washington team as hopelessly lost when they learned how Manager Harris had gone about "strengthening" his club. His chief reliance was on three pitchers—Walter Johnson, Stanley Coveleskie and Walter ("Dutch") Ruether. After the world's series last year everyone—except Harris—was satisfied that Johnson was through. "A great pitcher in his day," they said. "But no more. He's through." But when Johnson was about to buy a minor league club of his own, Harris induced him to return to the Senators to pitch another season. This year he has won 18 and lost 6 games for an average of .750, which is almost 100 percentage points higher than the ranking of his team. Coveleskie's "comeback" is even more remarkable. The great spitball artist was with the Cleveland team last year. He was 35 years old and had pitched in the major league ten years. But the manager of the Cleveland club said that Coveleskie was "all in" and began to look about for a trade in which to get rid of him. Manager Harris of Washington accommodated the Cleveland management. And this year Coveleskie, with a record of 17 victories against 5 defeats, earned an average of .773. In 1924 he was declared "all in"; 1925 finds him the second ranking pitcher in the American League. Ruether helped Harris to carry on, too, in spite of the fact that Brooklyn cast him off and no team in the National League wanted the "has been." But for Washington he has won 16 games, for an average of .667.

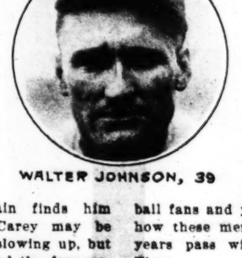
TY COBB, 40

And Roger Peckinpaugh at shortstop! What a power on defense and attack Peck has been to Washington in their struggle for the pennant. Still a star in spite of 16 years of play. A great defensive player — and that's the most important asset of a shortstop—and a highly dangerous batter in the pinch. Two years ago New York released him to Washington. And in last year's world series, when hits meant runs and runs meant thousands of dollars to each player, Peck rose to the occasion and batted for an average of .417.

ROGER PECKINPAUGH, 35

EDDIE COLLINS, 39

Washington, however, will not have a monopoly on veteran ball players in this year's world series. The Pittsburg team has two great stars, still able to hold their own against younger rivals and even to surpass them in many instances. There's Max Carey, 35 years old, who has been in the big league for 14 years. He is one of the greatest base stealers the game has ever known, leading his league in that respect for the past five years. This year again finds him leading, with 30 thefts. Carey may be an old man and he may be slowing up, but when Pittsburg is playing and the fans notice the opposing catcher and infielders acting nervous and fidgety they know why. Carey is on base.



WALTER JOHNSON, 39

AND then there's Pittsburg's pitcher, Charles ("Babe") Adams, who has been in the National League for 17 years. He is 43 years old, the oldest player in the major leagues. Each year they say will be his last, and yet each season finds him again in demand. Pittsburg will undoubtedly rely on his great experience in the important struggle with Washington.

And these Washington and Pittsburg players are but a few of the players whose stellar performances are making 1925 a banner year for the old men of the game. In Detroit in August they celebrated Ty Cobb's twentieth year in the major leagues. The City of Detroit voted him a gift of a thousand dollars in appreciation of his influence as a player and representative of the city. He was tendered a public banquet. The club owners presented him with a purse of $10,000. And while all this was going on, no doubt the younger players were wondering how a man could play baseball in his twentieth year, with no sign of diminished skill or fervor.

Tris Speaker, aged 38, is celebrating his eighteenth year in the major leagues by leading the American League in batting, with the enviable average of .380. The great Eddie Collins is finishing his nineteenth year in the vicinity of second base. Every city in either league has an old man up there near the top, playing the game as well as in the earlier days of his career and performing feats that many of the younger stars can only envy. No, youth is not being served this year.

It would be easy to select a team from among these veterans which would be able to give as fine a performance as the game affords. For instance, take the team illustrated in the diamond on this page. A close follower of the sport will readily admit that the following team, composed of old players, could hold its own successfully with any team in existence.

As age is reckoned in baseball the following team is made up of extremely old men. The average age is 37 years, an age at which ball players are generally regarded as fitting applicants for admission into an old folks' home. And yet that team has a batting average, collected during the entire major league career of all its members, of .309! Some batting average for a team of veterans with an average of 16 years of service in the major leagues!

Each of the following players is still a star. Each has had the experience of participating in a world's series. Each is the object of admiration of baseball fans and younger players, who wonder how these men have serenely watched the years pass without yielding to Old Man Time.

PLAYER	Age	Batting Average	Years in Big League
Eddie Collins, second	39	.332	19
Ty Cobb, fielder	40	.368	20
Zack Wheat, fielder	38	.315	15
Tris Speaker, fielder	38	.350	18
Heinie Groh, third base	36	.293	15
Roger Peckinpaugh, ss	35	.256	16
John McInnis, first base	36	.307	17
Ray Schalk, catcher	34	.251	11
Walter Johnson, pitcher	39	...	18

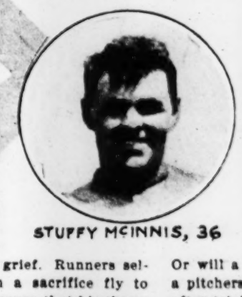
EDDIE COLLINS not only plays second base for Chicago, but bears the additional burden of managing the team. From Columbia University he went to the Philadelphia Athletics, where he became a member of their famous "$100,000 infield." Collins has played in six world's series and is generally regarded as the best "money" player in the game. Eddie Collins never fails in the pinch.

Ty Cobb, second player in the above lineup, is unquestionably the greatest player the game has ever known. He owns the magnificent batting average of .368 for 20 years of playing with Detroit, and to prove that he is still as good as ever, he is surpassing his average by batting fourth in the major leagues, with a mark of .379. He also is manager of his club, but the trials and tribulations attendant on that office have as yet failed to dim his brilliance on the field.

ZACH WHEAT, 38

ZACK WHEAT, who has played the outfield for 15 years, has an average of .315. He is still a great player, a heavy hitter and a dependable man when a tense situation develops. Heinie Groh, who has also seen the same period of service in the big show, is among the best third sackers the game has known. He is a splendid fielder and a quick thinker with men on the bases. A third baseman or shortstop is not expected to hit hard if his defensive work is good, but Groh, in addition to fine work on the diamond, has collected an average close to the .300 mark.

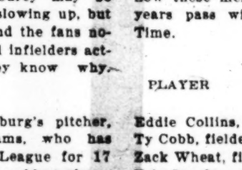
Tris Speaker, now manager of the Cleveland team, is recognized as the greatest defensive center fielder the big leagues have ever seen. Speaker, with a batting average of .350 for 18 years of playing, is second only to Cobb for his remarkable hitting. This year he is batting .380. But if his batting is great his fielding is phenomenal. He is fleet of foot, covers acres of ground and has a throwing arm that has brought many a speedy baserunner to grief. Runners seldom try to advance on a sacrifice fly to Speaker for the simple reason that his throw is usually so fast and accurate that their effort ends in disaster. Owen Bush, Detroit's old star, had that in mind when he used to say about Speaker: "How are you going to score when a guy in center pitches strikes!"



STUFFY McINNIS, 36

"STUFFY" McINNIS, like Collins, played in the famous Philadelphia "$100,000 infield" of years ago. His seventeen years of active campaigning find his batting average over the .300 mark and he is still hitting at that rate. His playing at the initial sack is still completely adequate. Peckinpaugh, shortstop, and Walter Johnson, as has been told, are to a great extent responsible for Washington's high standing this year. Peck, last year, his fifteenth in the major leagues, was chosen as a member of "Babe" Ruth's All-America team. Johnson's great record this year shows that the veteran speed-ball pitcher is as effective as ever. Johnson pitched superlatively for 16 years with Washington before he finally broke into a world series. He won the deciding game against New York last year and shows every sign of becoming an important figure in the coming battles.

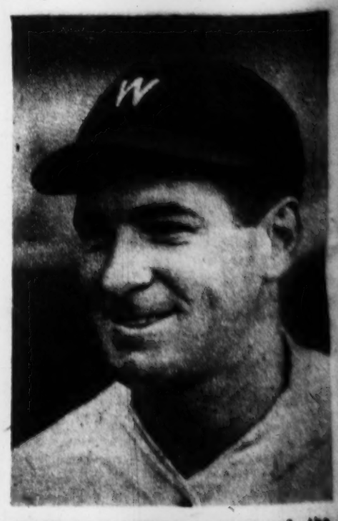
As Johnson stands out as a pitcher, so does Ray Schalk shine as a catcher. He has set a major league record for number of games caught by one man, and the fact that he has done it in eleven years makes that achievement all the more noteworthy. Schalk first sprang into prominence when he made his debut catching Ed Walsh, the greatest of all spitball pitchers. A spitball is the hardest delivery of all to catch, and yet Schalk, weighing less than 155 pounds, handled the famous Walsh's delivery with grace and skill. With that performance Schalk put an end to the tradition that a catcher had to be a large man physically. And Schalk is still as good as he was ten years ago. His throwing to the bases, particularly to second, is deadly, as was evidenced in a recent series between Chicago and the St. Louis Browns here a few weeks ago. And then, to "rub it in" a bit, Schalk, after throwing out many ambitious Brownie base runners in that game, himself stole second base three times in one game.



RAY SCHALK, 34

THUS it is seen that this team of old men would be a difficult one to vanquish, for the simple reason that its broken-down and senile members are giving daily performances that would drive younger players to despair. Indeed, if Cobb and Speaker continue their terrific batting, and if old man Carey insists on stealing bases, and Walter Johnson continues to burn the ball over the plate with confusing speed, a very serious problem will develop. Fans will no doubt begin to consider it unfair to the younger players to subject them to such overwhelming competition. After all, an old player should be "through" when his time is up, and if he insists on batting around .350 or pitches 18 victories in 24 games, something ought to be done about it.

If the old men continue to go on the rampage as they have this year the younger players, in self-defense, will very likely have to resort to desperate measures. Heaven only knows what the sport pages of 1945 will have in store for us. Will we read about Johnson pitching a no-hit game in spite of a bad attack of gout? Or will a report tell us that Cobb broke up a pitchers' battle in the ninth inning when, after tripling to center, he daringly discarded his crutches and stole home? Such thoughts intrude as we study the performance of baseball's "old men" in 1925.



STANLEY HARRIS, manager of the Washington team, who believed in "old men." By gathering to his staff cast-offs and has-beens he has guided his team (so it looks now) to its second successive pennant.

HOW would you like to see this All-American team of "old men" play? Their average age is 38, which means whiskers in baseball, yet they probably could trounce any team ever in uniform.

Or will a report tell us that Cobb broke up a pitchers' battle in the ninth inning when, after tripling to center, he daringly discarded his crutches and stole home? Such thoughts intrude as we study the performance of baseball's "old men" in 1925.

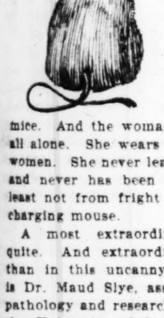
DR. MAUD SLYE
The Woman Who Raises MICE

By GUY FORSHEY.



WORKING year in and year out with mice—thousands of them in a big laboratory—might just as well be set down at the outset as the world's most unusual occupation for a woman. Think of it! Mice! Thousands of them; squeaky, scurrying mice. And the woman of this story works all alone. She wears skirts just like other women. She never leaps on chairs or tables and never has been heard to scream—at least not from fright at the spectacle of a charging mouse.

A most extraordinary woman? Yes, quite. And extraordinary in more ways than in this uncanny display of fortitude is Dr. Maud Slye, assistant professor of pathology and research worker in cancer at the University of Chicago. She has been working with mice, handling them, experimenting with them for 16 years, but that is incidental. While doing this she has rendered an incalculable service to humanity and made for herself a place in the sun by definitely establishing the fact that the tendency to develop cancer is hereditary.

An interesting sight awaits the visitor who journeys out to Dr. Slye's laboratory, the largest laboratory in the world entirely devoted to cancer research. It is an old stone-front dwelling, converted into a special habitation and hospital for its great population of tiny rodents. Several rooms are filled with cages; rows and rows of them, one above another in racks. In these the thousands of mice have their dwelling place. There they live, reproduce, become ill, receive medical care, recover, suffer relapses, weaken and finally die, just as human beings do. These are not specially selected diseased mice, nor are they extraordinarily healthy specimens. They are for the most part normal; just an average run of mice as the population of a city constitutes an average run of humanity. Consequently their tendencies are in no wise different from those obtaining in every day mouse life.

SUCH are the specimens to which Dr. Slye devotes her hours of study daily. The hand of the scientist is apparent in every detail of the house and its equipment. Mice being used in experiments are kept in separate cages and under hygienic conditions almost as strict as those of a hospital. The food is fresh and, as far as possible, sterile. The water is boiled and filtered. All implements, cages, surgical apparatus and even the workers' hands are sterilized. All mice must be card-indexed and carefully analyzed as to ancestry before they can be used in heredity experiments, and especial precautions must be taken against the occurrence of other diseases, so that the mice may reach the cancer stage.

And here is where an unusually striking phase of the experimentation enters. No form of cancer is induced by any artificial means. Those that occur among the mice in this Chicago laboratory are spontaneous. Observation has shown that in a given number of specimens a certain percentage will develop cancer naturally. About one death in every 13 among human beings is from cancer in some form and the percentage is even higher among mice. Thus, with the disease allowed to occur naturally, all types of cancer, internal and external, are available for study from the hereditary angle. During the last 16 years Dr. Slye has worked with cancers of the breast, spine, lung, kidney, tongue, mouth, stomach and all other types known. All, she has found, are hereditary.

WHAT connection is there between raising mice and studying cancer in human beings? the reader may ask. Simply this: Mice contract diseases and display symptoms similar to those characteristic of humans, and especially are these timid little animals susceptible to ravages of the terrifying scourge of cancer, the malady which caused a total of 86,754 deaths in the United States in 1923. During her unusual career, Dr. Slye has examined, clinically before death and microscopically after death, some 50,000 cancerous mice and she has demonstrated through repeated experiment that by careful selective breeding cancer may be entirely eliminated. A report of her observations has been accepted by the American Medical Society, the American Society for Cancer Research, the National Academy of Science and other scientific bodies in this country and abroad. And her conclusion that cancer is hereditary, along the lines propounded by Mendel, has been generally recognized as incontestable fact.

Nearly everybody, perhaps, is more or less familiar with the name of Mendel and knows something of his work. This great botanist of the nineteenth century, it will be recalled, formulated the laws of heredity, which bear his name, through experimentation with common garden varieties of peas. He observed that certain traits in peas, such as coloring, appeared to be hereditary and found that by crossing varieties, recessive characteristics appeared in the second generation of descendants from the parent stock. Zoologists later found that pigmentation and albinism in animals followed those same laws, and now Dr. Slye has proved that the tendency to have cancer is based upon identical principles.

The layman is likely to judge the qualities of the offspring by those of the parents only, this noted woman scientist points out. But the Mendelian law proves that only the second successive generation shows all the possibilities of heredity. In other words, you must know the present and the past two generations in order to be able to saddle anything definitely upon heredity.

"IF a noncancerous mouse is mated with a cancerous one," Dr. Slye explains, "no cancer is found in the first generation. Then mate two of these hybrid noncancerous mice; what do you get? In the second generation you get one-fourth cancerous mice, one-fourth noncancerous and one-half animals which are noncancerous themselves, but which can transmit cancer.

TENDENCY TO CANCER IS INHERITED, says Dr. Slye, one of the foremost workers in cancer research — This fact she does not regard as alarming but as "extremely gratifying," since it means that "the disease can be entirely eliminated if we care to take the trouble"—In her laboratory at University of Chicago, woman scientist works with thousands of mice, some well and some diseased — An interview on problem of widespread interest and concern.

DR. MAUD SLYE, expert in cancer research.

JAMES E. BARNARD, London merchant whose interest in high-power microscopes has aided cancer investigation.

DR. WILLIAM E. GYE, London. Working with Barnard, he was reported to have discovered the cancer germ.

"Although a mouse, or a person, for that matter, may inherit the tendency to have cancer, the disease probably will not appear except under favorable conditions. The fact that the tendency is inherited doesn't necessarily mean that the individual in question will inevitably suffer from the disease. These so-called 'favorable' conditions consist of chronic irritations, such as nonhealing wounds or sores; presence of bacteria causing wounds that do not heal; or continued chronic pressure, such as a broken or misplaced tooth in a jaw. But here is another fact that is of the utmost significance: Just as the tendency to have cancer is inheritable, so also is the tendency not to have cancer inheritable. By proper selection of parent animals it is possible to eliminate cancer entirely from a cancerous family. Experimental work with mice has proved it to be a fact and the same principles of heredity that apply to mice apply to human beings."

HAVING found that cancer is hereditary, she has then proceeded to discover that it is possible to eliminate cancer from families originally 100-per-cent cancerous. By mating cancerous mice with those free from the taint she has developed noncancerous lines from parents hopelessly infected with the disease. To the Post-Dispatch Magazine correspondent who visited her in her unique laboratory recently she explained the significance of her findings.

"Many persons, at first thought, are doubtless alarmed at the statement that cancer is hereditable," said Dr. Slye, as she paused from her labors over the records of her "patients." "But instead of being alarming, the fact that cancer is hereditable is extremely gratifying. It means that the disease can be entirely eliminated if we care to take the pains to accomplish that end. Eugenics so far has been virtually neglected. We have the spectacle daily of blind marrying blind; insane marrying insane, and weak-lunged persons joining their lives with other weak-lunged sufferers. All of these, of course, risk probable transmission of their weaknesses to their descendants, for nearly all types of physical weaknesses and powers of resistance have an inheritable basis.

"IN VIEW of the present status of knowledge, eugenic advice to the layman should be to avoid the double hazard that is incurred by the marriage of persons carrying the same weakness or tendency to disease. Persons coming from cancerous families, for instance, should never marry husbands or wives with a similar strain of weakness. As far as possible, probable offspring should be strengthened through the selection of parents carrying the same strength, such as the tendency to resist cancer, heart disease or tuberculosis. Eugenics presents a very profound biologic problem. We have only just begun to pay it a little attention in connection with the human species."

The correspondent wanted to know what might be the opinion of Dr. Slye as to the reported discovery of the cancer germ by Dr. William E. Gye and James E. Barnard in London recently. Columns and columns of newspaper space have been given to discussion of this announcement and the names of Gye and Barnard, as a result, are familiar to the world. Dr. Slye was reluctant to discuss the matter. Real scientists as a rule hesitate to discredit the work of other scientists until investigation has shown a good reason for it, and Dr. Slye spoke guardedly.

"Very often in the history of the study of cancer," she said, "announcements have been made of the isolation of the cancer germ. Heretofore every cancer germ has been found to be a false lead and has been abandoned. So far, no full scientific report of the London discovery has been made and so, of course, we are not in a position either to credit Dr. Gye's findings or to assert that they are in error. I can speak only from my own observations, but my opinion is that there is no specific cancer germ. In spite of the announcements of the London investigators, I have several good reasons for that opinion and one good reason which might interest the layman is this:

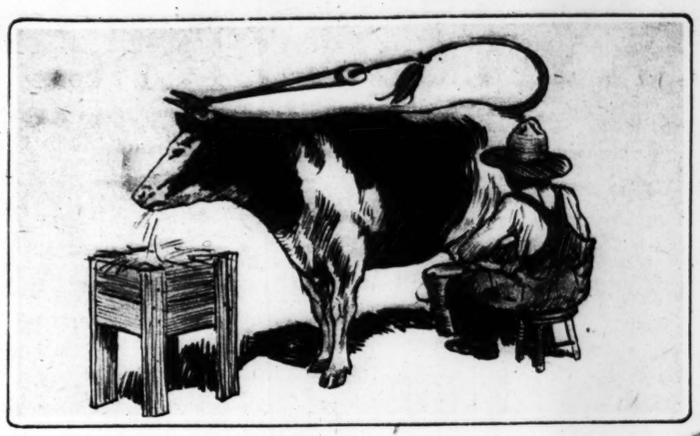
"JUST as in the human species, the growth of cancer in mice makes early systemic changes. Often mice in the laboratory have cancers larger and heavier than the rest of the bodies without producing changes in the system. Only when the cancer breaks down from lack of blood supply and becomes infected from some outside source, or when it grows in a blood vessel and causes fatal hemorrhage, or fills some organ and stops its function, such as breathing or digestion—only then do the symptoms of systemic illness appear. No germ disease we know behaves in this way. They cause early and widespread systemic reactions. In both the human and the lower animal body cancer, as is well known, does not usually make itself apparent until it is in a rather advanced condition. I cannot believe this would be the case if cancer were traceable to a specific germ."

Dr. Slye is still busy in her laboratory with her great family of mice. In the past she has concentrated her attention upon the heredity and eugenics angle of investigation, but now she is broadening the scope of her experimentation. She is studying not only the origin of cancer, but also all conditions preceding and accompanying the disease, its progress, nature and the reaction upon the individual patient at all distinct stages. "The ramifications of knowledge to be gained from this material are almost unlimited," she declares. "The conquering of cancer, I believe, is just a matter of time.

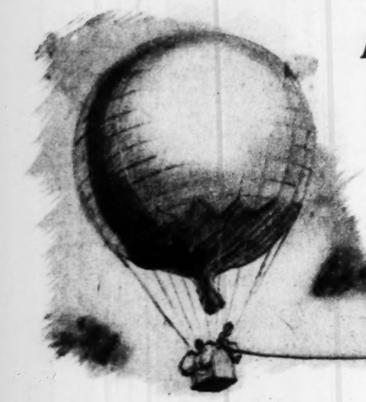
PATENTED!

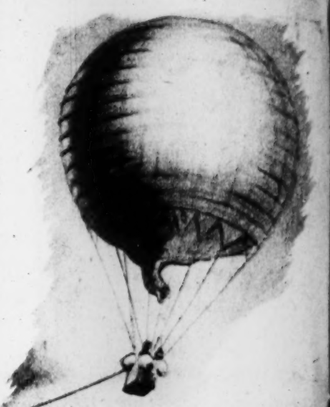
But Why? Why? Why?

HERE THEY ARE—a few shining examples from the 155,000 patent models that the Government is going to sell to curio dealers, freak collectors, or anyone else who may hanker after the original gold brick or the first wooden nutmeg.



THE PATENTED TAILHOLDER for cows was counted out when a bumblebee lit on the cow's back and the maddened animal dragged the milker to his death.





AN EARLY IDEA in cross-country travel through the air. By raising the balloon at either end of this cable, the car was supposed to carry its passengers to the other end.

TO make small ministers look taller, the adjustable pulpit was invented. But an accident, the first time it was used, spoiled its chances.

THOMAS E. ROBERTSON, U. S. Commissioner of Patents, and some of the 155,000 doomed patent models.

THE SELF-TIPPING HAT was invented by a jilted lover, who did not know how soon this courtesy would be a thing of the past.

By FREDERICK H. BRENNAN

SOME will see only 155,000 laughs in the models of old patents which are to be sold by order of Congress at the forthcoming auction. There are 155,000 models. But others—men of sentiment and vision—will shed tears over the first wooden nutmeg and the original gold brick. Must they pass? They were good ideas in their time. They sold well. They carried the aegis of American inventive genius around the world. True, the wooden nutmeg has been displaced by the terra alba chocolate drop and the gold brick by the handsomely engraved deed to a submerged building lot in Florida. Yet thoughtful onlookers will be sad to see these relics thrown under the hammer. There is no longer any room in the Patent Office for them, but why not a shrine at the capital for their eternal resting place? It would stand as a monument to P. T. Barnum.

Nor should any of the other 154,998 patent models be relegated to the junk heap with ghoulish merriment. It should be remembered that 154,998 men and women once believed in them. Most of these ideas were good; only they wouldn't work. Fie on the hard-hearted pragmatists who jeer! So-called experts have examined many of the more nearly meritorious patents and as one man they have reported that in every instance a slight miscalculation on the part of the inventor doomed his invention. It is the purpose of this article to show how very slight these miscalculations were; how tragic the results; how sad the failures.

CONSIDER, for instance, the hookworm trap, invented by Alpheus Meyers, M. D., of Indiana, in 1853. The device consists of two gold spring jaws with serrated teeth and operated by a trigger. It was Dr. Meyers' idea that the trap might be inserted in the throat of a patient troubled by hookworms. The patient would then be starved for a few days until the hookworms grew hungry. Then, argued the doctor, they would ascend the victim's throat and be caught in the trap.

Alas, the idea was perfect in theory but erroneous in execution. Dr. Meyers could never find the right bait for his trap. After he had obtained his patent and filed the model at the Patent Office he tried experiment after experiment. But every time the hookworms approached the trap, sniffed at it and went right back to the patient's stomach. Desperate, Dr. Meyers tried baiting the trap with a minnow, arguing that if fish eat worms, worms would like a chance to eat fish. But the minnow tickled the patient's throat, the patient coughed and that scared the hookworms so they would never again approach the trap. The doctor died a disappointed man. Yet there is a fortune in the trap for any man who can find a good bait for hookworms.

ANOTHER invention among the 155,000 to be sold is a device for cooking a very stale egg until it "resembles the fresh product." It is indeed an excellent idea. The machine beats the white of the egg within the shell, thus generating gases which are released through small holes, the gases being replaced by fresh air which purifies the egg, reducing all odor to a minimum. But the inventor was too far ahead of his time. Back in 1874 there were very few cold storage plants and every respectable town family kept chickens. Thus, there was no demand for his invention, eggs being fresh and cheap. If the device were put on the market today it would be too late. Americans are so used to eating stale eggs they would miss the flavor in a fresh egg. The invention failed because of a slight miscalculation in timing the market.

A very tragic failure in the list is that of the patented tailholder for cows. This invention would have taken the rural market by storm, but for an unfortunate mistake on the part of the inventor. He did not understand the temperament of a cow. The instrument was composed of a clamp for the tail attached with a small block and tackle to the cow's horns, thus preventing the cow from switching her tail in a milkman's face. The first farmer who tried out the device paid with his life. A bumblebee lit on his cow's back while he was milking her and with her tail tied she had to use her rear hoofs. Unluckily she kicked the farmer's shin instead of the bumble-bee; his beard became entangled in the block and tackle and the maddened animal dragged him to his death. The inventor was obliged to leave the country, and never had the heart afterwards to push the sale of his invention.

John Corey of Holden, Missouri, in 1870 contributed his share toward enlivening life on the farm. He invented a sort of runway attached to beehives and a chicken roost. His idea was that the chickens in walking to their roost would automatically close the doors of the beehives, opening them the next morning when they left the roosts. Corey had some difficulty in persuading the public to purchase his device, but in due time the invention was installed on several farms. How sad the story! A total eclipse of the sun occurred one day, the chickens went to roost at noon, shutting all the bees from their hives, and the bees, disgusted at the treatment, flew away.

Out in Lincoln, Kansas, in 1861, a genius conceived the idea of anchoring Kansas homes against cyclones as ships are anchored against waves. He patented his "land anchors," which were much like the irons carried aboard ship. The anchors were to be buried deep in the ground and the houses lashed to guy wires leading upward. But he miscalculated the number of anchors necessary to hold down a house when a tornado hits Kansas. He recommended two to his patrons when four turned out to be the right answer. He died in poverty and despair.

A similar fate awaited the man who designed a means of automatically warming the feet on a cold day. The instrument was simple, consisting of a tube and two smaller tubes leading from it to each foot. The user was supposed to walk along blowing into the tube. It is understood at the Patent Office that this device failed at its premiere because the man demonstrating it froze both his hands while using all his breath to keep his feet warm. Still, it was a good idea, even though it didn't work.

TO keep the feet warm, this device provided tubes into which the wearer could blow his breath as he walked along. But the demonstrator's hands froze.

ONE of the most curious inventions with a heart-rending history is the contraption titled "Bedbug Buster." It is being viewed by hundreds of the idly curious in advance of the sale, though none will admit he is a prospective purchaser. This instrument is built in the shape of a hopper wit? a narrow throat leading into a gas chamber below. As an important adjunct to the outfit the inventor recommended a small bed spring. He explained that the creaking of the bed spring would draw the bugs from their lair straight into the mouth of the hopper. Then they could either be stabbed in the back by means of a small pitchfork as they passed the narrow opening into the gas chamber or the operator could asphyxiate them with gas. It was a bang-up idea, but the inventor, like all the rest of the 155,000, slightly miscalculated. He forgot to disguise his machine as a corn sheller or bread dough mixer. Housewives for some reason declined to purchase it. Perhaps the thing was a trifle too conspicuous.

After all, there is no tragedy like good inventions which go wrong, not through any inherent defects in construction but because of unkind fate. At the Patent Office, awaiting the auctioneer, is a Kansan's patent adjustable pulpit. This man way back in 1873 saw the need of making small ministers look like bigger men in the pulpit. So he went to work and thought out an adjustable pulpit floor which was raised by a spring and lowered by clamps. The quick action was necessary because many churches in his State could never be sure whether they'd have a minister or not or whether he'd be short or tall until he marched into the church. So the pulpit must be instantly adjustable, and it was. One touch on the spring trigger would raise it.

At its initial try-out in a very staid Presbyterian house of worship the minister was a tall man. So there was no need to step on the trigger and raise the pulpit. But the deacons forgot to warn him. In the middle of his sermon—and he was a powerful preacher—he lifted hands and voice in this passage:

"And they shall go up above!"

For emphasis he stamped a foot. He stamped on the trigger. With a metallic twang the pulpit floor rose and the minister rose likewise. He landed in the choir-leader's lap.

CROSS-COUNTRY travel through the air was foreseen as early as 1885 by Jabez Morrison of Buffalo, New York. His plan was to send up two balloons at either end of a long cable. Suspended from the cable was a passenger car. The idea had the force of simplicity. To make the car move Inventor Morrison suggested that one balloon rise higher than the other, thus permitting the car to coast toward the lower balloon. After he had the idea patented and his model made, it occurred to him that it would be nicer to send the passengers up in one of the balloons and be done with it. He was so discouraged by his oversight that he never again invented anything.

Inventors are so absent-minded. For example, a man in Duluth, Minnesota, conceived the notion of laying a railroad across Lake Superior on the ice. "The tracks can be taken up in the spring before the ice melts," he explained. But someone suggested that the ice might melt faster than the workmen could take up the tracks. "I never thought of that," he confessed. After working on an improvement 15 years he appeared to have solved the problem. He would build the tracks on pontoons buried in the ice so they would float after the ice melted. But this is a hard world for geniuses. Neither James J. Hill nor the Harrimans would risk their tracks for such a road. The inventor, it is said, died in a home for the insane.

THE HAND that rocked the cradle was to churn the milk at the same time—a try for butter babies. But the scheme failed.

Another invention which promised much but which developed flaws was a device for busy mothers. One end of it churned the butter and the other rocked the baby. But mothers of the land were frightened away from the boon offered them by the sad experience of a young woman in Salem, Massachusetts. She forgot which end of the machine was which and when she returned home the machine had churned her baby and rocked the butter. Patent Office experts say the model of this invention will go for a song—or perhaps a lullaby.

There is in the array of blighted hopes at the Patent Office one which should have blossomed. The genius who developed this invention was both a sage, an optometrist and a humanitarian. Early in life he asked himself "Why does a hen cross the road?" He pondered long on the question and decided after 10 years of study that a hen crosses the road to get on the other side. Well, then—he would fix that. So he invented a set of spectacles for hens which would make them pearsighted. His idea was that a hen wearing such spectacles would be unable to see the other side of the road and would not dare to venture across.

ALSIGH for this misguided genius. He was given every chance to prove the worth of his invention to the world. A large poultry farm equipped all its hens with the spectacles. The invention was an absolute success. The hens would stagger up to a road, look at it, and turn back disheartened. Only when after two days the hens began to look emaciated did the truth dawn on the inventor and his first customer. The hens were starving to death. With their nearsighted eyes, bugs and grasshoppers easily eluded them and they strained their beaks stabbing at corn kernels and missing. These spectacles may be viewed at the Patent Office today—sad monuments to a good idea as far as it went.

As an illustration of the difficulties which beset inventors whose ideas are entirely practicable, take the gloomy patent coffin constructed by some Edgar Allan Poe of the hammer and saw. This man sought to capitalize the fear in all of us that perhaps we may be buried alive. He built a sound, worthy coffin with air holes leading to the top of the ground, a compartment for food, an alarm device to warn the sexton of the cemetery, a patent lid that would open from inside, and even a shovel and pick so that the prisoner might dig himself out.

The story goes that the inventor of the safety-casket sold a good many of them at first. But he was unable to gather any testimonials. All his customers by unhappy chance stayed dead. Not one could be found to write "How I Escaped From Yorick's Patent Safety Coffin." The trade in the coffins languished and the inventor, embittered by his experience, refused to be buried in one of them, choosing to be cremated.

And who will sing an elegy for Mathilde White, who first conceived a master crimping pin which could be used also as a paper cutter, skirt supporter, paper file, fancy pin, bouquet holder, shawl fastener or book mark? A most ingenious, yet most unsatisfactory article. It was always in use as a skirt supporter when its owner wished to use it as a paper file. Mathilde White died penniless, a thwarted woman.

SOMEONE should pen a lay, also, for the man who invented the self-tipping hat. The legend has it he was jilted by his girl because, walking homeward with his arms laden down by bundles for his mother, he neglected to tip his hat to the lady of his heart. She scorned him, and he invented a self-tipping hat to save other lovers. Had he but foreseen how soon the market would end for this patent of his! Men no longer tip their hats to sweethearts, but say instead, "Hullo, kid, how's tricks?"

They will pass into the junk heap—all these forgotten inventions. The water velocipedes, the hot-air and hot-water warmed overcoats, the trick umbrellas, the spiked hands for poisoned bottles, the refrigerated hat, the snoring devices, the washing attachments, the wallet that explodes in the robber's hands, the odd and absurd dreams of inventive minds. All will be sold to the highest bidder in Washington soon, for the Patent Office no longer requires models of inventions, nor has it room for storage of all these 155,000 curiosities.

Yet, somehow, we sigh for the misused opportunities in that pile of junk. If only they had bloomed in the day of go-getters and high-powered salesmen!

They will pass into the junk heap—all these forgotten inventions. The water velocipedes, the hot-air and hot-water warmed overcoats, the trick umbrellas, the spiked hands for poisoned bottles, the refrigerated hat, the snoring devices, the waking attachments, the wallet that explodes in the robber's hands, the odd and absurd dreams of inventive minds. All will be sold to the highest bidder in Washington soon, for the Patent Office no longer requires models of inventions, nor has it room for storage of all these 155,000 curiosities.

Yet, somehow, we sigh for the misused opportunities in that pile of junk. If only they had bloomed in the day of go-getters and high-powered salesmen!

Twenty-Five Years Hence

ST. LOUIS

Will Be—

—an agglomeration of communities like towns grouped about the center of government and business. Fringing "The City" will be the slums—"areas of lost souls and sinners." Next will come the tenement districts, occupied by European immigrants. Tenements will give way to rooming houses, then will come the flats and next the apartments. Still further out will be the dwellers in apartment hotels and residential hotels. Away out on the edges of St. Louis will live the old-style American families, who have gone to the suburbs to have real homes. The further from "The City," the higher in the social scale.

St. Louis in 1950 as the artist sees it. Grand boulevard (1) is the western boundary of "The City," and its towering business structures. Lindell boulevard (2) remains an important thoroughfare, as does Kingshighway boulevard (3). Other main streets which appear in the drawing include Washington boulevard (4), Delmar boulevard (5) and Union boulevard (6).

PROFESSOR D. R. McKENZIE, who has interesting ideas about the future city.

BEHOLD the city of the future—not one city, but many cities included in one loosely federated group. Within "The City" proper—the heart of this civic entity—is the greater center of its government, of its banking and finance, of its information and newspapers, of its wholesale markets—both in trade and in labor—of its hotels and restaurants, of amusement and retail shopping centers catering to the transient visitor, of highly specialized shops dealing in unique and costly wares. Then, merging each into the other as they scatter about it, will be great amusement centers, industrial production centers and small home-buying centers, each specializing in its appeals to certain castes.

Of "The City" itself, the population is unmarried. Single men—predominant—and unmarried women. On its fringes are grouped, in the veriest slums, the derelicts of both sexes—the flotsam and jetsam of humanity's tides. Very great are these slums—the worst of them always nearest to "The City's" fringes, jostling, almost, the great hotels and the palaces of trade. And just beyond where the derelicts gather, a genuinely patriarchal family life, where the father rules supreme among the immigrant families from Europe and the Near East, shoulders those segments of the city where live the men and women who have no ties of family.

On, and out, a little further—still in a "blighted district," but scarcely in the worst sense of the word a slum, grow up cities, villages or streets clinging to the fringes of respectability. Small families, toilers these, struggling bitterly with poverty, yet seeking to maintain a caste among conventions more unbending than the laws of Medes and Persians. Smaller grow the families. Better and more modern the flats and the apartments. One goes on into the fringes of the section where, pile on pile, are grouped the great apartment barracks. Studding this district are the apartment hotels and exclusive residential hotels—themselves villages of a certain caste—a caste of emancipated married folk.

All this area and not a sign in an American city of "the American family." Economic pressure is crowding it further and further out—"the American family." Yet you will find it still—in villages on the outskirts of the city of the future.

THUS the city of a quarter century from now is envisioned by Prof. D. R. McKenzie, specialist in Human Ecology, and exchange professor from the University of Washington to Chicago University. For years he has been studying life and the trends of life in the cities of America. He is no prophet—just a scientist. These are no rash predictions, no hazardous guesses that he offers us. What he says will be in the future he sees about us—now.

What he says about the cities of the future is true today of St. Louis with its downtown business area, its downtown slums, its "blighted districts," its Grand avenue amusement centers, its residential groupings of the lower middle class, its great areas of apartments, its scattered residential hotels, and the back-wash of real family life in the St. Louis suburbs. It is as true of Chicago, where he is teaching; of Columbus, Ohio, and Seattle, where he has taught. It is true of every other city in the land.

"Human ecology." You may not have met the terms. It is the study "of spatial relations between human beings and their institutions." Ecology in itself is that division of biology which studies the mutual relations of organisms and their environments. For instance, here is the sow-thistle pushing itself each year 20 miles further into the wheat fields of America. Why? asks science, and seeks to answer its own question. That is a matter of plant ecology. In the cities the "downtown" bright lights disappear except within that region which specializes in tourists and scatter themselves far and wide, invading the residential centers. Why? asks science. Human ecology seeks to answer.

Again that answer is: "Standardization." One will go "downtown" to see a Hampden as Cyrano, a Sothern as Malvolio, a Fritz Leiber as Petruchio. He cannot see them elsewhere. But Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford, Bill Hart, Charley Chaplin, Gloria Swanson, Theodore Roberts—these are to be seen on every screen. Who will bother about a trip "downtown" to see them?

Four great factors make for this decentralization of cities, according to Dr. McKenzie: the fluidity of life and the paradox of its iron-bound skeleton of conventions; the democracy of America and the paradox of its rigid caste. But shot through and through the changing fabric of the city is the great determining force of economic pressure. That, when all is said, is the ultimate rule.

"Never was a nation more fluid in its life than ours," says Dr. McKenzie. "We may think of it as a great sea. Always the tides are washing. They wash up from the villages of America certain elements that become the source of strength for these great cities—the working groups, men brought to the city by announcements of good pay in certain mechanical trades, by the opportunities for advancement in business or professions, and besides these young folks of the adventurous and reproductive ages. They leave the country towns, alas, like fished-out ponds. You and I may know, if we have returned after some years to the home-towns of our boyhood. We have looked upon the old friends who were left. The most adventurous, the most productive, ones are gone. We may have wondered how we ever managed to find interest in those towns.

"Four processes are at work:

"Concentration—caused by the special pulls of the city—its opportunities for special work, for higher salaries, for more rapid advancement in chosen careers.

"Centralization—the localization of the city itself, in which 'Main street' becomes the business district—what we know in Chicago as 'the Loop,' what elsewhere is called 'downtown' or 'the city.' This is the metropolitan area serving originally both the city dweller, the country dweller and the visitor, but tending to become more highly specialized in its appeal to visitors. Coincidentally there are growing up other centers for the amusement of the city dweller, for manufacturing, for group action in production or amusement or neighborhood trade. In the last ten years the Loop district of Chicago has not kept pace with the development of these localized centers.

"INVASION—the surprising development of certain specialized tendencies in various localities in which a special group, brought together by economic interest—such as a peculiar trade or employment—will displace other associations and more mixed groups.

"Succession—that is, the cycle of revolving development in certain districts. Let me illustrate. Here is a desirable residence neighborhood. Business or manufacturing encroaches upon it. It becomes less desirable. The tendency in these cycles is altogether downward. Property slips back. There is a continuing and growing disproportion between the value of the land and the value of the improvements on it. Ultimately what was a residence district becomes a slum. It stays a slum until the advance of business or manufacturing forces a rebuilding. A new cycle is begun.

"Economic pressure, you see, is the basis of all this development. The property owner lets his property deteriorate because he does not feel that he can get a return that justifies building up or rebuilding. And careful observers among real estate men have told me—I think it may be accepted as a rule—that it does not pay to improve your property beyond the standard of improvement around it.

"The street-car system used to provide a steel skeleton as the framework of our city life. The automobile has displaced it. We can go or come as we choose. Meantime, the force of standardized product is at work. New bright-light areas are growing everywhere. Great movie palaces spring up like mushrooms over the city areas to cater to city dwellers. People won't go downtown except to find something unique. They don't have to. Instead of dance halls on frequent corners the dance hall becomes larger, but more infrequent, and establishes an amusement center of its own. The dance hall is one of the paradoxes of our city life. One was established near the University of Chicago. Free tickets were distributed in a manner to obtain a check on where the dancers came from. They did not come from the university section. Young people there went far afield for their dancing—to other parts of the city. That, at least, was the tendency. It was a tendency to get among new and different people, to see other faces—in short, youth's tendency to adventure.

"This tendency toward adventure, and to freedom in adventure—freedom from the accustomed incident, from the routine of daily life—is manifest throughout the movement of our cities. Where people pile up the tendency is toward an 'emancipated' life—a life free from conventions and family responsibilities. Thus the metropolitan district of a city—'the city,' as we call it—has for its residents people who are for the most part unmarried. Single people—men without family ties, women who are thrown together in certain rookeries or living places, their association being determined largely by the character of work they do.

"THERE is a definite trend in the 'downtown' areas towards a segregation of the sexes. On any afternoon in the metropolitan shopping district you will find certain streets where 70 per cent of the people you see are women. Five blocks away you will find streets where 90 per cent of the passersby are men. These men, of course, are laborers. I am referring to the great labor market of the city—and in any city you will find them much the same. For labor, in modern industrial life, is like other commodities. It seeks the market center. It is always on the edge of the business district. These men, unattached, homeless, derelicts, naturally fall into the cheapest of lodgings. They're nearer the Morgue than anywhere else. That is not a figure of speech. It is no figure to speak of them as derelicts. The vital statistics will show that the rate of unclaimed bodies in the Morgue is 20 times as high in such a district as it is anywhere else in the city's area. These 'down-and-outers' have to live there because they must. It is the area of lost souls, and of sinners. For vice always seeks such a district. Gone are the days of segregated vice—that much is true—but sporadic vice exists in these lower depths of the slums. And vice there pays high rents.

"Merging into this area of lost souls and sinners, as it in turn has formed itself on the outskirts of the metropolitan district, is that tenement area occupied by European immigrants, in which the family rules. It is a patriarchal life. Here we see the family's utmost tyranny in the city. Going outward we will see the individual seeking to free himself from the family's chains, just as, closer in, we see the derelicts. In these areas each family is sufficient to itself, and it is large in the majority of cases.

"A LITTLE higher in the social scale is the area which borders this. Families are smaller. Earning capacity is probably somewhat greater. The fight against poverty continues, for there are 'appearances to keep up.' Tenements give place to rooming houses, and they to flats, and they to apartments. The family is growing smaller. The individual is freeing himself gradually from family responsibilities. His life is becoming more and more standardized in its essentials. The apartment has its certain standards of advantage and equipment. More and more this standard seems to force upon those who live there a standardized, a made-to-order life—a life in packages. The dwellers thus become more and more freed from home duties as well as family responsibilities. Social or intellectual contacts are taking the place of family companionship. Then apartment hotels and residential hotels. The emancipation is complete. Wife and husband, freed from duties to children and duties to home, can go each an individual way. And they do, with a minimum of interference from each other.

"Strangely enough, while struggling to free himself from family bonds in his upward trend the city dweller is forging other chains for himself that are not less binding—the chains of caste. There are districts in every big city where it is a mark of caste to be able to pay a visit in a taxicab. But, as one of our surveys shows, to go to a party in a taxicab would be an offense for which any resident of Chicago's Gold Coast would be quickly ostracised.

"Caste seems to be an outgrowth of our American democracy. It permeates the social fabric. We find thus groups held together largely through the fact of an income of a certain size, of a certain trade, business or profession, which means a certain level of incomes. Money, almost always, seems to be the standard by which these groups are formed. A worker on a small salary doesn't wish to mix with people who have big sums to spend. He sticks to his kind for fear he will be snubbed. But let him accumulate sufficient to force his way into a spending stage where more money is the rule and he usually will do so. You have seen people abandoning 'exclusive' residence districts as the nouveau riche crowded in. They took to residential hotels. Now those in turn are being overrun by nouveau riche. I should not be surprised some day to see the hotel resident who can afford to do so going out to a country estate.

"Furthest out of all comes the old-style American family. From the cities it is fast disappearing. It goes to the suburbs to live.

"The European family exerts its greatest force through fatherhood. It is patriarchal. It is sufficient unto itself. The old-fashioned American family is not. Its great force lies in its community spirit. It wants neighbors. It lives its life in relation to its neighbors. It assumes all the responsibilities of family, and the responsibilities of community, too. Thousands upon thousands of our American families leave the cities for the suburbs just because they feel the need of the community life. It may be purely a matter of companionship. It may be a desire for the support of public opinion in the matter of individual morals and morals.

"You and I like the freedom of the cities. We feel able to seek out our own contacts. We resent propinquity forcing contacts upon us. Professional and intellectual contacts provide us with the companionship we need. But we belong to one type—to speak in that loose way. There are hundreds of thousands who are not so fortunate.

"I CANNOT help thinking of the city as essentially a place of 'lost souls.' I don't mean sinners. I mean people who have drifted astray from their moorings of friendship. There are innumerable people who have come from the smaller towns, uprooting life's companionship by their change, and who, having failed to form new contacts, drift aimlessly, almost hopelessly, as a ship without compass or rudder.

"Some of these folks—as I have indicated—are to be found in the slums, in the region nearest the Morgue. But there are others even in the more select residential districts. In Columbus I had an interesting experience. A woman's club got interested in what my classes were doing. It offered itself to assist in some survey.

"So I said to them: 'If you really want to help just go out among your neighbors and learn how many are really lonesome.'

"They made a survey, then, of the lonesome people in the university suburb. They visited 3000 homes. They found 500 women who confessed they were utterly lonely, 'lonesome almost to death,' in that community which prided itself on its culture and its friendliness. Then for once I was tempted to become a preacher. My church had asked me to supply its pulpit one evening in the absence of the pastor. I accepted, and I chose for my text, 'Lost Souls.'

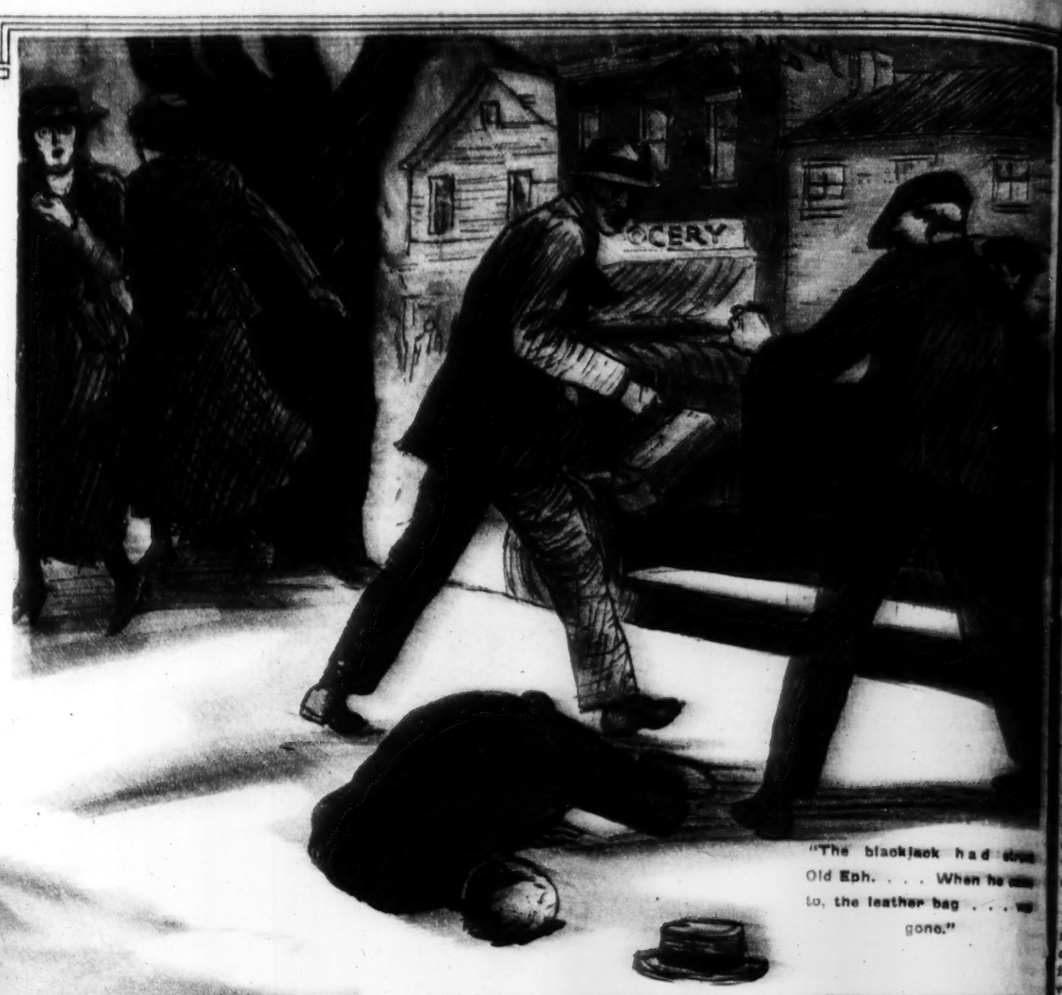
"I don't know what they expected to hear—these fellow worshipers of mine. It may be they expected to be thrilled by the story of the pitfalls, the dangers of the city. Instead, I told them of their own community, and their neighbors—its lost souls.

"What the city of tomorrow will be we cannot know. We cannot foresee the inventions that—like automobile and movie—may transform our urban life in 25 years. But the trend is distinctive. The city itself is breaking up from one unit into a federation of local units and—like it or not—in all its area there isn't room for the good, old-fashioned American home. We make a world to fit our own psychology. We are changing our type of cities to satisfy a department store style of living."

THE GIRL With The PAYROLL

By

ROYAL BROWN



"The blackjack had struck Old Eph. . . . When he came to, the leather bag . . . was gone."

"Ann heard him coming and checked her pace, but he stopped her just the same."

THEY met of a June evening. Met, that is, in the sense that fate forced her to hold converse with him. Other times when they might have met they had passed without speaking: she—Ann Sylvester—at a decorous and restrained 20 miles an hour, looking as if butter would melt neither in her pretty mouth nor on the radiator of the little tin coupe she drove; he—Richard Duer—at his customary cocky 35.

No one could rebuke Dicky Duer for driving 35. Or even 65. But he, if he chose, could rebuke Ann.

This was because Dicky was a member of the Massachusetts State Patrol.

Ann detested him. Long before she even saw him—officially. The corners of feminine eyes are ever so serviceable.

As for Dicky, he had, as both a state patrolman and a private citizen, a roving eye. The latter had noted Ann, as both a patrolman and an individual.

"Easy to look at," the individual had decided. "And quite aware of it."

Ann usually heard him long before she saw him.

This particular June evening, however, Dicky and his motor cycle were neither to be seen nor heard. Both it and Dicky were in ambush off the State road. He was smoking a surreptitious cigarette. This was a violation of rule number something or other and Dicky jolly well knew it. He remained unperturbed.

The quality of the night, he would have maintained, was excuse enough for his dereliction. It was a June night, but not the sort of a June night that poets customarily celebrate. It was raining. Dicky could not ignore it. "And I left my happy home for this!" he murmured.

Nevertheless, he wasn't sorry. He had known what he was up against when he became a State patrolman. His father had put the case before him and his father was trained in the presentation of facts, being an able and well compensated corporation lawyer.

"And," Dicky's father had perorated, in the course of the discipline. "You've never been particularly amenable to discipline, you for a [illegible] dred and fifty young D'Artagnans, picked in every sense of the word. His motive in investigating being misconstrued, he had been warned that the waiting list was prodigious and that neither political pull nor social prestige could secure preferment for Dicky.

"But I want to keep him out!" he had protested.

The man he had questioned had given him a swift, curious glance.

"I don't think you need worry about that," he had commented dryly.

"Oh, is that so!" retorted Dicky's father—to himself.

To Dicky he said, "I'm not sure you can get in, but if you can"——

"Oh, I'm in," Dicky replied blithely. "Start preliminary training next week. In three months I'll be dead—or I'll have my shield."

AT THE end of the three months' training he was, on his own authority, near dead, but he had his shield. Officially he was State Patrolman Richard Curtis Duer. Otherwise, he was still Dicky—Dicky lurking in ambush this drenched June dusk, smoking a forbidden cigarette.

Few cars were abroad. It was a night to stay at home. Indeed, Ann's mother had so suggested.

"I'll be more careful tonight," Ann promised. "Don't worry, mother."

Ann's mother had retorted that she would worry. But Ann had gone, leaving her mother to find what solace she might in the perusal of the paper. This had proved short-lived. "Friday the 13th!" she gasped as she noted the date line. "Oh, dear—and such a night! She's so reckless."

No one privileged to view Ann's activities at that instant would have doubted that. Dicky was so privileged. Of course, Ann did not know that. She believed she had found what she sought, a stretch of yeasty road with not a car in sight. And so she firmly—if fearfully—placed her foot on the service brake.

The surreptitious cigarette he was consuming all but dropped from Dicky's lips.

He stopped short. The little tin coupe having spun about like a dervish, was now headed back in the direction from which it had come.

Ann caught her breath and stepped on the gas. Dicky spun his engine. This was a matter for investigation.

Ann, for once, failed to hear him. "I did it," she was assuring herself, dizzy with triumph. "I went around and I'll bet I could do [illegible] brakes again the car did just what she expected—not the last thing Dicky was expecting. Its rear wheels just shaved his front wheel. A hundredth of a second later Ann saw him hurtle by. He was not trying to skid.

The little coupe, as if to deny all complicity in the matter, promptly stalled and looked the picture of perfect innocence. This Ann could not achieve. Her headlights revealed Dicky with his motor cycle under control, but minus his cap and, she suspected, his temper, bearing down on her.

"Well," he demanded frately.

"I was trying to skid," confessed Ann.

"I'll tell the world you succeeded," he replied grimly. "Are you often taken that way?"

"Only when the road is wet," she retorted. "It can't be done when the road is dry, can it?"

"It can," he replied.

"How?"

Dicky gave her a suspicious glance.

"You skid enough as it is," he replied sternly. "You're not safe on the roads!"

"Not safe?" she echoed indignantly. "I'd like to see you make a better skid."

In spite of himself, Dicky grinned. "I—nearly did!" he reminded her.

"So—I saw."

"I ought to put you into court," he assured her, relapsing into his official manner. "But I'll let you off this time. Only don't let me catch you again."

"I'll certainly try not to," she replied with a meekness that but masked mockery.

EPHRAIM K. SMITH was president of the Smith Shoe Co., Linford, Massachusetts.

Ann called herself his private secretary. He called her his stenographer. As such he paid her $25 a week. He himself had married on less, as he had reminded her—until it occurred to her to ask what round steak and anything else he might mention, including shoes, had cost then. Old Eph had merely grunted. But in private he had chuckled.

"Pretty—but smart as a whip," was his opinion of Ann.

Ann had told everybody she was buying the coupe on installments. She had not told anybody that old Eph was paying these installments.

This was deceitful. Also discreet. For when a man who is past 60, who has a wife, a married daughter and three grandchildren, suggests to his stenographer, who is neither married nor 60, that he will present her with a car under certain conditions, a suspicious world may be expected to prick up its ears. Especially if the man is reputed to be a "tightwad."

Even Ann's first glimpse of the coupe had not damped her enthusiasm. It was second-hand and it needed paint. But Ann had attended to that.

"Come and see it now, mother," she had called when she had attacked it with paint and brush. "Doesn't it look dandy? Couldn't you just hug it?"

"You look as if you had," her mother had assured her.

Paint on her nose, Ann had stood there, gazing raptly at the rejuvenated coupe. "I guess I'll call it Violet," she had decided.

In Boston on that same Friday the thirteenth when Ann and Violet skidded into Dicky's life, if not his heart, three men were holding what business men call a conference. They were variously, and more or less descriptively, known as Lefty Red, Louie the Dope and the Chelsea Cyclone. The business they were discussing concerned Old Eph's payroll.

FROM the time he had started out for himself, back in the 'eighties, Old Eph had carried his weekly payroll from the bank every Saturday morning.

He had seen no reason why he shouldn't. He had read of payroll robberies but he had an idea that he was immune. Many so-called hard-headed business men have ideas like that.

Even the hardest head, however, cannot resist the impact of a new idea with a blackjack behind it. The blackjak had struck Old Eph back in April. When he came to, the leather bag and its contents were gone.

The prevailing opinion was that Old Eph would recover from the blow on his head but he never would get over the blow his bank roll had sustained. And, in fact, it was the loss of his payroll that Old Eph had minded most. New skin would grow on his head, but sixteen thousand dollars didn't grow on any bush he had ever met up with. The protection of his payroll became a mania with him.

Even so he wasn't, as he assured his wife, crazy enough to pay the rate the insurance companies quoted him.

So Linford had gasped when, the Saturday after he had been robbed, Old Eph with bandaged head walked from the First—and only—National Bank of Linford carrying the new leather bag which replaced the old one. The only apparent departure from his former practise was that now the Linford police force accompanied him in full uniform as he walked along the street.

The police force's name was Chief. He had other names, but these had been submerged beneath his title. He was an institution, like the fat men's race at the County Fair.

"Now what I plan to do," Old Eph had explained to Ann, "is to have Eb Sears get the payroll every Saturday morning when he gets change for the day. It will be all ready for him, wrapped up like an ordinary bundle. You get it with the other stuff you need for the office at his store—you can order your supplies so there will be several bundles Saturday—and bring it along with you in the car, with nobody the wiser. See?"

Ann had said she did. But what she had seen was the car she was to get.

"I'll go to the bank and get what everybody thinks is the payroll, but it will be only silver for change," continued Old Eph. "That's the plan, what do you think of it?"

"I think it's too wonderful for words," she had replied.

But she was thinking not of the plan but of the car. To get Violet she would have agreed to transport the crown jewels of England. And besides, as Old Eph had pointed out, there was no danger anyway, because nobody would ever suspect that she was carrying the payroll. This to Ann had seemed indisputable. How could anyone suspect?

No one in Linford had. The report that had come to the Chelsea Cyclone's cauliflower ear and put his bashed nose on scent was that Eph still carried the payroll himself. This Lefty Red and Louie the Dope had doubted.

"That guy's been stung once and it don't stand to reason he'd do a thing like that," Lefty had said positively. "It ain't even worth investigating."

But Chelsea had decided otherwise. On the Saturday before—June the seventh, that is—he had visited Linford. He had seen Eb Sears emerge from the bank and cross the street. He had not been interested. Later he had seen Ann and Violet appear and go into Eb Sears' shop. He was conscious of a certain terseness in her manner of which she herself was unaware. But it was not until Violet had come to a stop at the factory entrance, at the other end of Main street, that an idea had struck him.

"The skirt's got the coin," he had gasped.

ANN had seen Chelsea. She had had to pass within a few feet of him. And he was an awful looking creature to pass while carrying almost $16,000. But she had promptly forgotten him until—

"I don't know what the world is coming to," her mother had remarked when Ann had arrived home that night.

"They've held up an automobile over in Eastboro and got away with another payroll."

"Another payroll robbery?" Ann had gasped.

"It's in the paper—read it while I set the table."

Ann had read it. The thieves had driven into Eastboro in a touring car which had been parked in a side street. As the payroll car appeared, the touring car had swung across the road in front of it as if about to turn around. The driver of the payroll car had, necessarily, slackened his pace. An armed guard sat beside him, his eyes intent on the car ahead.

At that instant two men previously stationed at either side of the street had jumped on the running board of the payroll car. One of these had promptly shot the armed guard dead. The other had blackjacked the chauffeur. The street had been crowded. But before anybody could move, the bandits who had jumped the payroll car had seized the payroll, joined their companions in the touring car and made their escape.

Of the bandits no adequate description had been obtained, but the police were looking for a man who had been observed around Eastboro the Saturday before, presumably reconnoitering.

To Ann there had come, at that [illegible] the memory of a man with a [illegible] and a cauliflower ear. And he had [illegible] watching the bank—

Next door to Ann lived Tommy [illegible] Tommy was 17. He had a flivver [illegible] sport body on it.

Now it was his proud boast he could [illegible] his flivver forty ways and bring it [illegible] on a ten cent piece.

Nevertheless, Tommy believed that [illegible] is a matter of daily practice. When [illegible] conditions were not favorable for [illegible] he made them so. After he had the [illegible] ment well soaked he produced his [illegible] and made it do its daily dozen.

"If Tommy was a son of mine I'd [illegible] him to skid!" Ann's mother had remarked grimly.

ANN might have retorted that Tommy needed no teaching. But she [illegible] nothing. To her mother, that is. To Tommy, as soon as her mother had withdrawn, she did address herself.

"Can you skid the car around—so it will be going in the opposite direction?" she had demanded.

"Huh—that's A B C stuff. Just watch me!" Tommy had commanded.

Ann had. Then, "Show me how to do it," she had begged.

"Want to break your neck?" Tommy suggested scornfully. But being [illegible] he could not withhold the information. "Of course," he had added, "it takes nerve—and a lot of practice."

Ann had refused to admit that she had the nerve. As for the practice, it had [illegible] the following Monday and she had [illegible] beginning. And so on Friday the [illegible] she had ventured forth again and [illegible] progress that should have won her [illegible] mendiums from Dicky. But all he had [illegible] her was a scolding and, unwittingly, a [illegible] gestion, which was that one could [illegible] dry pavements.

But there was, of course, no [illegible] try that before another Saturday [illegible] around—the Saturday which brought [illegible] to Linford to investigate Chelsea's [illegible]

No one noticed Lefty. Least of [illegible] Ann. She was looking for [illegible] else. This was not Dicky Duer [illegible] passed her as she and Violet [illegible] Main street.

Ann ignored Dicky. Lefty did [illegible]

"Is he on the job?" he [illegible] prehensively.

Lefty had no desire to cross a [illegible] trolman's path. He breathed [illegible] when Dicky passed out of sight. [illegible] eyes came back to Ann just as [illegible] to a stop in front of Sear's [illegible]

The watering cart, as usual, had [illegible] Main street. Ann could have [illegible] ily. Her effort was not to. [illegible] from Sears' news stand and [illegible] her way her spirits began to [illegible] with the bashed nose and [illegible] was nowhere to be seen.

This convinced her that she had [illegible] imagining things. But Chelsea [illegible] passed out of her life—yet.

"That's what I told you," he was [illegible] mind Lefty. "The skirt's got it—[illegible] said. We could have nailed it today [illegible] had taken my word for it."

Where the Pigeons Go to Die

By MICHAEL ARLEN.

around Eastboro the Saturday before, probably reconnoitering.

To Ann there had come, at that point, the memory of a man with a bashed nose and a cauliflower ear. And he had been watching the bank—

Next door to Ann lived Tommy Davis. Tommy was 17. He had a flivver with a sport body on it.

Now it was his proud boast he could skid his flivver forty ways and bring it to a stop on a ten cent piece.

Nevertheless, Tommy believed that genius is a matter of daily practice. When the conditions were not favorable for practice he made them so. After he had the pavement well soaked he produced his flivver and made it do its daily lozen.

"If Tommy was a son of mine I'd teach him to skid!" Ann's mother had remarked grimly.

ANN might have retorted that Tommy needed no teaching. But she said nothing. To her mother, that is. To Tommy, as soon as her mother had withdrawn, she did address herself.

"Can you skid the car around—so that it will be going in the opposite direction?" she had demanded.

"Huh—that's A B C stuff. Just watch me!" Tommy had commanded.

Ann had. Then, "Show me how to do it," she had begged.

"Want to break your neck?" Tommy had suggested scornfully. But being masculine he could not withhold the information. "Of course," he had added, "it takes some nerve—and a lot of practice."

Ann had refused to admit that she lacked the nerve. As for the practice, it had rained the following Monday and she had made a beginning. And so on Friday the thirteenth she had ventured forth again and displayed progress that should have won her commendiums from Dicky. But all he had given her was a scolding and, unwittingly, a suggestion, which was that one could skid on dry pavements.

But there was, of course, no chance to try that before another Saturday rolled around—the Saturday which brought Lefty to Linford to investigate Chelsea's hunch.

No one noticed Lefty. Least of all Ann. She was looking for somebody else. This was not Dicky Duer, who passed her as she and Violet came down Main street.

Ann ignored Dicky. Lefty did not.

"Is he on the job?" he wondered apprehensively.

Lefty had no desire to cross a state patrolman's path. He breathed more easily when Dicky passed out of sight. Then his eyes came back to Ann just as Violet came to a stop in front of Sear's news stand.

The watering cart, as usual, had sprinkled Main street. Ann could have skidded easily. Her effort was not to. As she emerged from Sears' news stand and continued on her way her spirits began to soar. The man with the bashed nose and cauliflower ear was nowhere to be seen.

This convinced her that she had been imagining things. But Chelsea hadn't passed out of her life—yet.

"That's what I told you," he was to remind Lefty. "The skirt's got it—just as I said. We could have nailed it today if you had taken my word for it."

"We'll have it next Saturday, anyway," promised Lefty grimly.

NOW it is as much as their jobs are worth for the authorities responsible for the amenities of the town not to employ a man on the clear understanding that every once in a while he climbs to the very top of Lord Nelson's column in Trafalgar Square to cleanse away such refuse as pigeons have collected about the immortal admiral's feet. And it is to the good man who undertakes this perilous task that we owe a piece of information which cannot fail to interest gentles and simples. He tells how he invariably finds numerous pigeons lying dead about the feet of our sailor hero. Sometimes there will be not more than a score or so, sometimes there may be close to a hundred, and he relates with ruth how he once removed, in a bag which he takes up with him for that purpose, the bodies of pigeons to the number of one hundred and thirty-four; among which, he tells with awe, there was the corpse of a pretty white dove.

That was on the evening of the first of May of the year of grace 1924, and the reason why the good man tells with awe of the dove among the pigeons is because it was on that very evening that he was moved by a strange phenomenon. The facts may interest the curious.

The prodigious number of the dead pigeons had kept him at his task much later than usual; and as he picked up the above he chanced to look up at Lord Nelson, who stood at that moment in the light and shadow of the sun as it set beyond Admiralty Arch, and the good man fancied that the stern face of my Lord Nelson frowned.

Unseemly though it is to doubt any man's word, the skeptical sort may be permitted to question whether the fellow was at that moment seeing straight, and whether it was not the fanciful light of twilight that had set him thinking that Lord Nelson had indulged in a passing frown.

BUT to more kindly folk the good man's fancy will not present such marvelous features when they know that it was on the evening of that first of May that Miss Pamela Wych came upon an event beneath Lord Nelson's eyes that completely changed the course of her whole life.

The clear cool eyes of Miss Wych were jaded that spring evening. Miss Wych was thinking. All about her the London of Oxford Street marched and screamed and hooted, but Miss Wych walked unheeding, alone as a tulip in a wild garden. The London of Oxford Street was like a soiled silk handkerchief waving frantically to the evening sun but the genius of thought draped the young lithe figure with a rare calm dignity. Now Miss Wych was nearly always calm, for such was her nature. But she was not always dignified, for dignity comes very rarely to youth, dignity is a gentle blossom that grows with the years, and when dignity comes to youth it comes always unconsciously, it is fleeting, frail, sad. We are not speaking of the dignity of anger, but of the dignity of sorrow. Miss Wych was sad that evening.

All that day, whilst she was at her allotted tasks in the millinery department of Messrs. Come & Go, Miss Wych had been saying to herself: "I must think. I will think this evening. One doesn't think nearly enough. I will think a lot this evening. I will walk home, thinking. I do hope it keeps fine."

That is what Miss Wych had thought, for she was very conscientious in the fulfillment of her duties in the millinery department, and she always did her best not to intrude her private concerns into her service of Messrs. Come & Go. Not that either Mr. Come or Mr. Go could possibly have noticed it if she had, since her service was but an atom among the service of one thousand and five hundred employes.

MISS WYCH had never so much as set eyes on her employers, but she would wonder a great deal about them, and she would wonder particularly about their youth. Now Miss Wych admired success above all things. Those clear, cool eyes looked at life, this teeming chaotic life in which she was an atom of service, and as she looked at life a prince in shining armour of gold and sapphire stepped forth from the flowing ranks, brave with triumph, flaming with youth, indeed a very prince of princes. And the name of this prince was Success. That is how Miss Wych thought of success, like a glorious lover. And once upon a time she had tried to win him for herself. Miss Wych had once tried her fortune on the stage, but unfortunately the glorious lover had looked very coldly on her, for, as the producer had said: "Miss Wych is a nice girl but a bum actress."

The gentle circumstances of evening transmuted the trumpeting and soiled machines on the road into shining caravans, but never a glance at these wonders did Miss Wych give. Of the passers-by, one and all hurrying to the assault of tubes and omnibuses, maybe one here and there forfeited his place through looking twice at Miss Wych. Miss Wych was a very pretty girl. Her eyes were gray. Her nose would have looked absurd on anyone else's face, because it was so small. Her face was as white as the moon.

Since she had made up her mind to walk to her boarding-house in South Kensington she did not join the people waiting for omnibuses at the corner of Marble Arch and Park Lane. They who had been in such haste a moment before now waited so quietly, so uneagerly, as though they didn't care whether they were going home or not. The stillness of Park Lane seemed to Miss Wych very refreshing after the din of the panting hosts of Oxford Street. She walked in the broken shadows of the Park railings.

And a voice at her shoulder said:

"Excuse me! Please excuse me. I say, you must excuse me!"

MISS WYCH walked on, in the broken shadows of the Park railings. And her eyes were turned to the sun, which did not know it was sinking into Kensington Gardens, for what else was there to look at? Then a bird flew across Park Lane and sat on a window sill, and Miss Wych looked at that.

"Please," said the voice at her shoulder. "You see, Miss Wych, I must. For I can't bear it any more, honestly. Don't be beastly to me, please!"

Miss Wych thought: "This is a fine thing, being spoken to by strange men! I suppose I look common and flashy or something, else he wouldn't dare. What shall I do, oh, what shall I do? What do women do?"

"Look here," said the voice at her shoulder, "I can't keep this up any longer. I'm no good at speaking to people I don't know. Good-by."

"Good-by," said Miss Wych.

"Oh, you've spoken!" cried the voice at her shoulder.

Miss Wych said: "This is very extraordinary behavior. Please go away."

Miss Wych had intended to say that icily. There was a girl who worked with her in the millinery department of Messrs. Come & Go, who said: "When I don't like a boy I just give him the Once-Over and he's Off." Miss Wych envied that girl. But she called up her courage and tried to give the stranger the Once-Over. The stranger, however, did not go Off. The stranger was a lean young man with deep dark eyes that seemed to whirl with the trouble that was in him.

"You see," he said, "it's like this, Miss Wych. I had to meet you somehow. But how? I did not know what to do. And so I did this. Miss Wych dear, will you forgive me?"

Miss Wych thought: "There are times when one must placate the devil. This must be one of those times."

THEN Miss Wych discovered a most extraordinary thing—that she was looking deep into the stranger's dark eyes. She flushed as red as a tennis court.

"This is terrible," she said bitterly. "Terrible! How dare you speak to me? Please go away at once."

"I can't," said the young stranger. "I would if I could. But I just can't. I'm sorry."

Miss Wych thought: "He says he's sorry, the beast."

"You are mad," said Miss Wych indifferently. The sun walked in fire and glory, but the world was dark, the world was dark, and bold bad men walked the streets for to be offensive to maids. The young stranger, for instance, did not go away. He said desperately:

"If you will give me just one look you will see that I don't mean to offend you."

"That may be so," said Miss Wych, "but you do."

"You only think I do," protested the lean young man. "That's all it is really."

Then Miss Wych discovered a most extraordinary thing. She discovered that she was walking slowly, slowly. Instantly she walked on quickly.

The lean young man sighed, "Oh, dear!"

Miss Wych said breathlessly: "I don't even know your name! And how you have got to know mine I really can't imagine. But you don't look wicked. Please don't go on being nasty! Please! Won't you go away now?"

"Pamela Wych," the young stranger whispered, "Pamela Wych, Pamela Wych, Pamela Wych, how was I to meet you except by daring this? Further, you are my fate, and what sort of a man would I be if I were to leave my fate in the very second of finding it?"

Miss Wych thought: "This is getting serious."

"That is all very well," she said reasonably, "talking about fate and big things like that. But when you take it as just behavior you can see as well as I do that it is all wrong. Sir, there are things one can't do, and this is one of them, and so you must please go away at once."

"That is the one thing I can't do," said the young stranger desperately. "You see, although you won't show me your face I can see the tip of your ear peeping out from your hair, and it is as red as a rose."

Miss Wych thought: "This can't go on. How would it be if I called a policeman?"

"It is red," said the profile of Miss Wych, "for shame that a man can so insult his manhood."

"I'm not insulting my manhood. I am living up to it for the first time in my life."

Miss Wych said fiercely: "Go away, go away, go away!"

"Dear," said the young stranger, "listen to me. You must listen to me. I am not playing."

THEY were in the Park. How they had come to be in the Park Miss Wych could not imagine. Over Kensington Gardens the sun was marching to eternity with a cohort of clouds and colors.

"No," said the lean young man, "I am certainly not playing, Miss Wych, dear, this is not a 'pick-up'——"

"It's piracy!" said Miss Wych contemptuously.

"That's right," said the lean young man with the eyes of trouble.

"You say you aren't playing," Miss Wych bitterly complained, "but you are upsetting me very much. A little chivalry, sir, would help you to see how terrified I am."

"I am terrified, too," said the young stranger, "of this happiness. It can't possibly last, can it? It's too enormous."

Miss Wych thought: "He's gone mad!"

"I really don't know why you ask me," she panted spitefully, "whether it can last or not. How should I know? And it's perfectly absurd, what we are doing. It is perfectly absurd. I don't know you, you don't know me, and that's that. Anyone would think we were babies!"

"But that's just what I am, for," said the young stranger, "I am exactly one week old."

Miss Wych thought: "And he talks like it!"

Miss Wych said: "Really! How interesting."

"I am one week old," the stranger said, "because it was exactly one week ago that I first saw you. And you needn't laugh!"

"I'm not laughing," said Miss Wych.

They were sitting on two chairs in the Park. How they had come to be sitting on two chairs in the Park Miss Wych could not imagine. The sun was red in the face with trying to get to Australia through Kensington Gardens.

The young stranger said: "Now!"

His eyes were deep and dark and shy, and Miss Wych thought: "He is one of those unhappy young men. There are a lot of them about. He is probably used to burning people with those eyes of his. But he won't burn me."

The lean young man was saying: "Miss Wych, may I tell you something most important? I love you."

"That is what you say," said Miss Wych, and was surprised at herself, for she had intended to say something quite different.

"Love," said Miss Wych severely, "is a shy word. It should not be thrown about just anyhow. That's quite apart from it's being cheek."

The lean young man's eyes burnt angrily, and he said: "I have been in torment for a week, and you talk to me of cheek!"

"Well, it is cheek," said Miss Wych sulkily.

Now because the young stranger's deep dark eyes were whirling with the trouble that was in him Miss Wych suddenly thought to close hers tight, for she did not want to let herself be sorry for him. She thought: "If this is what they call Romance—well, oh, dear, give me a nice bus ride in a hurricane! It would be much less uncomfortable."

"ONE day," the voice was saying, "I happened to go with a friend into that shop where you work, and I saw you, and my life fell down like a tin soldier with a broken leg. That was a week ago, and since then I haven't picked it up, I haven't known what to do. I have often heard that a man can go mad with love, but I did not know before that a man could go sane with love. All the people in the world who are not madly in love, Miss Wych, dear, are in some degree insane, for it is insane not to have a proper perspective of life, and a proper perspective of life is to be quite certain that the world is well lost for the love of one person. It is insane to work from grubby birth to grubby death with never an attempt to chain a star, with never a raid on enchantment, with never a try to kiss a fairy or to live in a dream. Dear, only dreams make life real, all of life that is not touched and troubled by our dreams is not real, does not exist. I could not have lived until now, if I had not dreamed that one day I would meet you. I have worked, I have been what is called successful, but always I was under the spell of a miracle that was to happen, and when I saw you I knew that miracle had happened. I just wanted to tell you that. I believe in miracles and magic and my love for you. That is my testament. And if it is cheek to say I love you, then cheek must be as beautiful a thing as chastity. And now I am going away, for your eyes are closed, and that must be because my talk of love bores you. I have tried the impossible, just to be certain that nothing is impossible until one has tried it. And I have learnt another thing: I know now that when I am not looking at you I shall be blind, when I am not listening to you I shall be deaf, and always I shall find no delight in the world but in thoughts of you. Now I shall go away."

Miss Wych opened her eyes and said: "Don't go away." That is all she said, but it was quite enough for the lean young man, who caught his breath and threw down his hat and pinched himself.

Now all the colors in the world and in the heavens had met over Kensington Gardens in a conference to discuss ways and means for putting the sun to sleep, and a few of them came quickly and lit Miss Wych's face as she said:

"There is something very silly about me. It has landed me into a lot of trouble in my time. I always believe what people say. I believe in fairies. I believe in God. I believe that moonlight has a lovely smell. I believe in men."

"Please believe in me!" said the lean young man.

"But why shouldn't I!" cried Miss Wych with wide eyes. "What a funny world this is, isn't it? We always believe people straight away when they say beastly things to us, but we don't if they say lovely things——"

"We will change all that!" the young stranger whispered.

ALL this while the world was standing quite still as a special treat for the sylphs and spirits, so they could dart about the sky and never lose their way back to the friends who had stayed at home. It was curious, Miss Wych thought, how she could feel the silence of the world. It was as though the wings of a darting bird brushed her cheek, scented her thoughts, sang in her heart. It was as though the world was still with reverence. Before her very eyes a fairy tripped over a blade of grass, and Miss Wych thought: "I must be dreaming."

"Talking of cheek," said the lean young man.

"Yes?" said Miss Wych.

"Look here," said the lean young man, and you could have blown his voice away with a breath. "If I have the cheek to ask you to marry me, will you have the cheek to say yes?"

He had a stick with an ivory top that was as yellow and cracked with age as an old char-woman's face. She looked at it for a long time, and then she looked at him.

"Why," she cried, "your eyes are wet!"

"I know," said the lean young man fiercely. "And I don't care. Am I such a fool that I wouldn't be crying for the happiness of knowing you are in the world?"

"Well," said Miss Wych, "I shall probably be crying myself at any moment. But first of all I must tell you a story."

"Won't you marry me instead?" pleaded the young stranger.

"I will tell you a story," said Miss Wych gravely, and she began at once.

"I was born," said Miss Wych, "in a small town in the north of England which would have been the ugliest town in the world if there hadn't been uglier ones all around it. My mother died when I was quite young, and when I was nineteen my father died; but I did not mind being alone half so much as you might think, because I was very ambitious. So, with the few pounds my father had left, I came to London to try my fortune on the stage. I had an aunt who was once an actress in Birmingham, and that was why I thought first of all of the stage. And people said I was pretty.

"IN that ugly town there was a boy who loved me. His name was George and he was a clerk in an auctioneer's office, but he wanted to be a farmer. When my father died George asked me to marry him, but I said I couldn't do that and explained about my ambitions and how I would first of all like to have a try at being something in the world. You see, it isn't only grown-ups who have dreams. Besides, George was poor, and however would we live if we did get married?

"He came to see me soon after I had settled in London. I told him I was studying acting at the Academy of Dramatic Arts, and also told him that I loved him. Of course, I wouldn't have told him that if he hadn't asked me. But I thought I did. I was only nineteen and a bit, and he was so strong and serious, and as fair as you are dark, and when he was almost too serious to speak the tip of his nose would quiver in a lovely funny way.

"That was the last time I saw George, but this evening I am to see him again. You see, that was on the first of May five years ago, and George and I swore a great oath. George said he was off to America to make his fortune, but that in five years to the day he would be waiting for me at the Savoy Hotel at eight o'clock to give me dinner and hear me say that I would marry him. We chose a place like the Savoy Hotel because, of course, George would have made his fortune by then. George added that he had no ambitions for himself, he wouldn't mind being just a farmer, but that he would work for me. I said that was a very good idea, for men should be ambitious and imperious, marching into history with clear heads and brave thoughts and clean eyes.

"I said I would keep myself free for him. I promised him that just as he was going away, and you should have seen how happy his eyes were and how the tip of his nose quivered! And now I have to see him in a few minutes' time, and what shall I say to him?

"I WAS a failure on the stage. I am a failure even as a girl in a shop. I am a failure in everything but my dreams. My childish ambitions have withered, and you would think I had learnt such a lesson I wouldn't have any more, but now I have the largest ambition in the world. I would like very much to be happy. That is why I have been wondering all today and for how many days what I would say to George this evening. You see, I wasn't really in love with him even when I made my promise. I knew that in my heart even then. My promise was just one of those important-looking flowers that are wrung out of the soil of pity. And my business in life from now onwards, dear stranger, will be to keep that hidden from my husband. But, of course, I will get used to disenchantment, just like everyone else, and the time will come when I will wonder at myself for talking to you like this, and the time will come when I like everyone else, will die with the sick heart of one who has never fulfilled herself. And now I must go, for it is close on eight o'clock."

"Of course," said the lean young man thoughtfully, "he might, for some reason we can't tell, not keep his appointment. And then"——

"And then, and then, and then!" sang Miss Wych, but she added gravely: "But, oh, he will! George is a good man and a determined man. Failure or success, he will be there."

The fires burnt low in the west. They walked towards the gates of the Park. Miss Wych counted four stars in the sky.

"Love," said the lean young man, "knows every emotion but that of patience. May'n't I come with you, Pamela Wych? May'n't we go together to this George man? Could he do anything but release you?"

"That wouldn't be fair," said Miss Wych. "That wouldn't be fair at all. Oh, yes, George would release me. But life is not so easy as that. It's all very nice and easy to talk and dream, but aren't there duties, too? I will go to George and tell him I am ready to marry him. I must do that. But maybe he won't want to marry me. And then"——

The clock at the Park gates stood at ten minutes to eight o'clock, and on this strange enchanted evening, said Miss Wych, she would indulge in the extravagance of a taxicab. The lean young man stood by the door and said good-by, and he said also: "If that George man isn't there, I shall

HE also said: "If that George man isn't worthy of your loyalty, I shall know. And I will come to you again."

"This is terrible," she said bitterly. "Terrible! How dare you speak to me? Please go away at once."

DESCRIBES THE LITTLE GRAY HOME IN THE WEST END

Lardner Exposes Sleep - Talking Husbands.

"THE MODERN HOME NEEDS MORE ONE-WAY STREETS."

By RING LARDNER.

SOME weeks ago I see in the paper where a woman was sewing her husband for a bill of divorce on the grounds that he was so rapped up in his work that he could not forget same but brought it home with him and though his hours was only from 8 in the A. M. till 6 in the evening he was so in the habit of working that he kept it up after he was off duty and in fact every minute of the day and night even while he was asleep.

It is of course a common occurence for women to give their husband the air because the last named won't work at all or at lease not enough, but the troubles of the wife referred to above seemed kind of out of the ordinary at first. What made it extra unbearable for the plaintiff was the fact that her man was employed as a announcer in the Union Station and instead of indulging in the usual quiet and affectionate dialogue as would befit man and wife at the supper table or in the library, their home life consisted in him shouting all the time at the top of his voice and she could not make head or tails of a single word he shouted. It became a specially grewsome and disgusting in the middle of the night when she would just be commencing to enjoy a pleasant dream about kissing games she had competed in as a child when she would be roused suddenly by him bellowing some such ghastly verbage as "Grnnmhultgam Brahgl! Gelgrmte Boonset!" She had no idear that this is a announcer's droll way of saying "Express to Kansas City, Denver, San Francisco and points west."

BELL-HOPPING IN THE HOME.

As this case seemed so out of the ordinary I talked it over with several of my boy friends and one of them, Casper Heffel, stated that they wasn't nothing so unusual about it and personally he was afflicted the same way himself and had been all his life though engaged in a different occupation than the hero of the newspaper article. As a youth he had been a bell hop in the Fireproof Hotel at Green River, Wyoming, and his parents used to lock him up every night when he come home and walked into one room after another paging strange people with names that sounded like Blikiy and J. F. Ikiwop. He finely quit hopping bells and become a bookkeeper and got married and his wife did not object much to his eccentricities at home on acct. of them not being very troublesome, in fact they merely consisted in him always wearing a alpaca coat and setting on a high stool. Some of his friends who come to dine at his house joke him on how funny he looks on a high stool with the rest of them in dining room chairs and how odd for him to always wear alpaca whether the rest of the folks is in dinner clothes or a sport suit, but he does not mind their kidding and claims to lead a satisfactory domestic life.

—"Grnnmhultgam Brahgl! Gelgrmte Boonset!"

NO LEFT TURN IN THE PARLOR.

In my conversation with Casper he went on to say that he had long been interested in this very topic and had engaged in considerable correspondence in regards to same with some friends of his named Legion both in St. Louis and various parts of the country and found that the failing if such it could be called is very common. He pointed out the case of Daniel McCafferty of Chicago a traffic policeman. During the hours when McCafferty is away from home on his job the rest of the McCafferty family live like other people, but the minute Dan comes home everything changes and the domestic activities is made to conform with the traffic laws of the Windy City.

Like for example neither Dan's wife or none of his kiddies or their Aunt Leona who lives with them can walk east and west across the living room or any other room till Dan has blowed his whistle to indicate that east and west traffic has the right of way. When any of the folks disobeys this rule Dan gives them a terrific bawling out and tries new swear words on them which if same makes the victims cringe or cry he will use same on his regular customers the following day. He is particularly bitter if he catches any of his kiddies setting in a chair reading a book for more than a 1-2 hour at a time which he claims is a violation of the parking laws.

STEALING HOME.

Another sample is found in the person of Freddie Bishop the well known big league ball player. He is so enthralled with the national pastime that he "plays" it 24 hours per day. When he gets home after the game he walks into the front hall like any other home comer, but just before he gets to the hat rack to hang up his things he begins to slide. In fact, whenever he gets near whatever piece of furniture he is headed for, he leaves his feet and approaches it with a slide, sometimes a hook slide and sometimes face downwards.

During meals he is constantly throwing plates and comestibles at other diners and encourages them to throw them back so as he can either try to catch them or hit them with a table spoon or knife which he calls his bat. Bishop's entire conversation at home consists in such phrases as "Heads up," "That a boy," "I've got it," "Get your eyes open you big stiff," and etc.

FALSE ALARMS.

Still another criterion is Ethan Kilfoyl a member of the Denver fire dept. This man never patronizes the stairs at his home but always slides down on a rod. He always dresses by a stop watch even when he is dressing to go to a dance and if he doesn't dress quicker every time than he dressed the last time he strips himself and tries it over. "In this way I often miss the first dance," he says, "but heigh ho."

"During meals he is constantly throwing plates."

Other instants I might mention is that of a caddy in Los Angeles who annoys his parents excessively by always looking under rugs, carpets, plates, table cloths, bed,s piano and etc. for golf balls and a contractor in Winnetka, Illinois, that has had a riveting machine installed in his bedroom so he can sleep nights, and last but not lease a physician in St. Louis who is so tender hearted that his patients don't never pay him and he has to use street cars to make his calls and it has become necessary for his wife to suspend straps from the ceiling all over the house as he don't feel comfortable setting down even at home.

ST. LOUIS ARTISTS—No. III.—O. E. Berninghaus

By HARRY R. BURKE.

NO FLAPPING chaps, no jingling spurs, no Stetson sombrero proclaim that Oscar Berninghaus is a Westerner. It is significant of this foremost of American painters of the West. Superficial aspects do not exist for him. You could never pick him out in a crowd by some Western trade-mark.

There is, indeed, just one rule for finding Oscar E. Berninghaus in a crowd. Look for the most self-effacing man. Even where artists gather you will find him in some hidden corner—talking not of Art with a capital A, but of the very human things that interest you and me. If you seek him out he will be genuinely surprised. He flees the lion-hunter. That is the only human—if the lion-hunter is human—of whom, I suspect, he is ever afraid.

Berninghaus caricatures himself.

IT IS hard to write of such a man. There is nothing picturesque in that rather slight shy figure in a business suit of gray, on whose grayish-brown eyes the rimless spectacles confer an owlish look. And if you know the man as I know him, for a Master; if you honor him, as I honor him, for his sensitiveness and his sincerity, you must feel, as one feels while writing this, the futility of one's words. For he is that paradox—at once elusive and forthright. You will see it in his work, which, for all that he regards it humbly, is writing in terms of paint the Epic of the West. The artist and the man are in the painting, "Indians," which is reproduced upon the cover of this magazine. The only answer to the paradox riddle is that the superficial man—like the chaps, spurs and sombrero—does not exist.

Other men have represented glimpses of the West. Berninghaus in paint presents the West. You see it as he sees it, with a sense of awe and wonder in the presence of its mystery and beauty. Other men have illustrated incidents of the West—Charlie Russell, Frederic Remington. The hall-mark of illustration is representation. Awe and mystery do not inform it. It accents the superficial. That is no shame. Russell and Remington were forthright painters.

No man is better fitted than Berninghaus for the task of translating the West's epic into paint. Something in his approach to the task is akin to the spirit of the Indian in the presence of the mystery of his homeland. The figures in the painting, reproduced this week, are not less living and vital because in the presence of the great eternal hills they are but accidents. Man, be he Indian or white, in such a presence is so dwarfed. Part of the secret of the art of Berninghaus is that he knows it.

NO PAINTER of the West has so caught and fixed its moods. That brilliant sky with the drift of lazy cloud; the misty mass of distant granite peaks, the rounded nearer hills, the shadows of purple, lavender and amethyst, the misty blues of the timbered hillsides, these are not superficial things. They are the heart of the West. Also, they reveal the heart of Berninghaus. A man could live with a painting like "Indians," as he could live with the mountains.

From the standpoint of pure craftsmanship one may, if he will, analyze the picture, though craftsmanship dwarfs in the presence of such spirit as the man whose craft it is is dwarfed in the mystery of the mountains. A deft, sure, understanding draughtmanship, a sensitive response to color and to rhythmic line, organize the picture. How delicately the gray-brown eyes behind those spectacles have answered to the subtle play of light upon spaces of immensity. This glimpse of the West includes the whole of it. If Berninghaus knows his scene he knows his job as well.

It is eternally fitting that the painter of the Epic of the West should have been born here in St. Louis where the first chapters of that epic were written. From here went forth the "Blackrobe" to carry Christianity across the waste lands and into mountain fastnesses. Here was the stimulus which sent him trekking into the unknown, his paths to become—as the pioneer spirit flamed in Young America—the Santa Fe and the Oregon trails—highways of civilization. And it was here Berninghaus was born in 1874. He studied in the Washington University School of Fine Arts. He got employment as a "commercial artist." Those "arty" folks who sneer at such a job should study Berninghaus.

While employed by Woodward & Tiernan he did a series for the Anheuser-Busch people, "Our Romantic Presidents," and another, "Transportation." Perhaps these fixed into a purpose a dream-desire to paint the West. They were good work, but they were illustration. Later he went down into Oklahoma to paint the Indians, thence, about 15 years ago, he drifted down to Taos, New Mexico, where Bert Phillips and E. L. Blumenschein were painting. That was the beginning of the Taos school.

Perhaps Berninghaus' first paintings "on his own" were illustration. One has seen several variants of a group of waiting Western saddle horses. They are nice. Popularity set a pitfall for the artist. Berninghaus' determination rose above it. Try to get him to paint his horses now. He has grown. He is growing. He will not repeat. The artist will not be a factory.

SUCH a refusal is sufficient to mark Berninghaus as one apart from most of our American painters. Whether they know it or not, they are inclined to the factory-made produce. A Smith at one show is a Smith like all the Smiths one has seen before. That is an overstatement for pure emphasis, but there is more truth than fiction in it. Berninghaus, on the other hand, strikes onward. Each year sees a growth in the artist's work. His subject is inexhaustible. The different phases of the great West, with their invitations, ever lure him on. His humility is not above experiment. His power transforms experiment into success.

Yet, so squarely honest is he that he will not scorn a commission of commercial illustration. One has seen two or three such series in recent years. They serve to help free him for the greater task. No pose about it. What he gives is the best of craftsmanship, as in his sketches for a barytes mining scheme, or for the Union Electric. They are frankly commercial, but honestly good. He would scorn the pose of scorning the commission.

HE IS a member of the Artists' Guild—and the member to whom the others turn for sane advice, and a rarely sympathetic understanding in their perplexities; of the Taos Society of Artists, with which he exhibits, and of the Salmagundi Club. He is represented by two lunettes in the Missouri State Capitol, by "Winter in the West" in the St. Louis Museum of Fine Arts, and by "Indians Threshing Wheat" in the St. Louis schools.

Some time ago a diplomatic friend and admirer started pulling wires. He wanted to win for Berninghaus the recognition of the American Academy. Berninghaus heard of it indirectly. He sought out his friend.

"Before you go to New York, I want one promise," he said. "You must promise me not to mention my name to the academy men. If my pictures win me recognition I shall be delighted. If they do not the honor would mean nothing."

In that anecdote, as in his painting, is the man revealed.

Save the Drunkard

Sunshine vs. Moonshine

(Written by a woman who saved her husband from the drinking evil)

My man is very good to me,
So loyal, kind and true,
He never comes home really drunk,
As other husbands do.
But sometimes, when he's "got too much"
I wish that I were dead;
For there's no sunshine in my heart,
When moonshine's in his head.

Some folks can laugh at such a plight
Of some poor drunken fool,
To me there's naught but aching heart
And pity for Satan's tool.
And, when he's had just "one too much"
I fear that we must part;
For when there's moonshine in his head
There's no sunshine in my heart.

Within the garden of my life,
Love bloomed in every thought,
But now I fear its wilting fast
And love must come to naught.
I pray before it is too late,
He'll think how dear I've said,
"There's no sunshine in my heart, dear
When there's moonshine in your head."

I read the book "The National Curse" Sent me by Dr. Haines;
And I used the "Golden Treatment" To break the galling chains.
The splendid manhood underneath Is freed from Satan's snare;
Since there's no moonshine in his head Our hearts have sunshine there.

I gave the powder secretly,
He never even knew;
Oh, woman, do the same today,
The act you cannot rue.
Our lives are very different,
Since that first ad I read;
In our hearts are floods of sunshine
And no moonshine in his head.

The Girl With the Payroll

No one had asked the State Patrol to protect Old Eph's payroll. But the State Patrol, like all police units, is an arm of that special providence that is supposed to watch over fools. Either Dicky or one of his fellows was always in the offing when Old Eph started his Saturday morning pilgrimage. They had no reason to believe that the payroll was not in Old Eph's possession. This morning Old Eph had been Dicky's assignment. But Old Eph never went to the bank until 10, and at 9, when Ann passed through, Dicky had felt privileged to turn his roving eye on her.

"That bus of hers," he had soliloquized, "certainly goes everywhere she does. I wonder if she takes it to bed with her."

This implied fresh criticism. Actually Dicky was, in spite of his private impressions of her mental capacity, inclined to regard Ann favorably. A State patrolman in Massachusetts is on call 24 hours a day, save for two days a month, which he has to himself. This does not leave much time for feminine contacts. Perhaps Dicky was getting hungry for these. Anyway, he was certainly thinking of Ann.

Even he could not have told when or why personal and professional interest suddenly merged. But as he pictured Ann, something in him quickened suddenly to the memory of the suppressed excitement Ann had seemed to radiate that morning. The same quality that the Chelsea Cyclone and Lefty had marked and interpreted.

Now Dicky came to the conclusion with a bang. "I'll bet my shield she's carrying the payroll," he assured himself. "If that's it she's sure one game kid!"

None of the increased respect for Ann this implied was to be marked in his manner the next time he passed her, however. This was the following Monday. As their eyes met she saw in his that which left her puzzled. It was as if they said, "Oh, what I know about you!"

Of course, Ann couldn't understand that. "He's the freshest thing!" she thought, indignantly, and involuntarily expressed her righteous anger by stepping on the gas until Violet was traveling at a prohibited thirty-three.

This Dicky took official cognition of, starting in pursuit. Ann heard him coming and checked her pace, but he stopped her just the same.

"'No person'," he quoted, "'may operate a motor vehicle in Massachusetts at a speed greater than is reasonable and proper, and faster than twenty miles an hour for a distance of a quarter of a mile in sparsely settled districts and fifteen in thickly settled districts is considered prima facie evidence of what is unreasonable'." This was from the official rules. He might have added, from the same source: "'But the disposition of authorities is to permit a fair rate of speed on boulevards that are free of intersecting roads and curves'."

To that Ann, simply seething, made no reply. She registered utter disdain. But Dicky, so far from being impressed, apparently forgot he was an officer and certainly proved that he was no gentleman.

"If," he remarked, "you are in the habit of using your nose to express contempt—as you are now using it—I would suggest that you powder it occasionally."

After which he rode off, at nearer forty miles an hour than the twenty he prescribed for her, depriving her even of the privilege of the last word. This would have been beyond her, anyway. She was speechless with rage.

Nevertheless, the next time they met, which was the Friday night preceding the Saturday on which Lefty Red had promised action, Violet was progressing at a decorous twenty miles an hour. But Dicky stopped her just the same.

"I suppose you're going to tell me that I should have been driving fifteen miles an hour this time," she suggested with biting sarcasm.

He was not bitten.

"No—you're improving along that line. But your headlights are illegal."

"You're just trying to be hateful," she flashed.

"I perform my duty as I see it," he replied. "And—I think somebody ought to keep an eye on you."

Ann gave him a swift, involuntary glance. Could he mean——

"Please see that your headlights are properly focused," he added quickly.

One might have believed he was going to let it go at that. One, that is, who did not know him as well as Ann.

"I had," he remarked with a grin, "no intention of making further comments on your personal appearance. But inasmuch as you seem to expect something along that line I'll say that your nose is certainly powdered tonight. Has it ever occurred to you that there is such a thing as a proper medium?"

"It has occurred to me," she replied with great dignity, "that some one should report you to your superiors."

"I dare you to," said he with a grin.

He had her there, too. Ann realized one couldn't ask to have a state patrolman disciplined for speaking of a lack or superfluity of powder on one's nose without being ridiculous.

One thing is certain, however, Ann had been more occupied that week with the thought of Dicky and his impudence than with the thought of payroll robbers.

Even when she drove into Main street the next morning Dicky was more actively in her thoughts than the payroll. Main street presented its usual Saturday morning aspect—sunshine and mild traffic and a swirl of dust that was being attended to by the watering cart's phlegmatic advance. The business section had been watered and Ann, stopping at Eb Sears' news stand, applied her brakes warily to avoid a skid.

Eb gave his customary wink as he handed over several packages, with the larger one containing the payroll among them.

Ann placed the packages in Violet and started Violet's engine. As she passed the bank Chief gave her a nod.

Ann returned his nod. And then—

From a side street, just ahead, a touring car emerged. There was but one man in it—the driver. To the casual eye it suggested no menace. Chief certainly regarded it unmoved, even when it apparently stalled, blocking Violet's advance.

But Ann! Her heart seemed to have stopped. She glanced first right and then left. On the curb stood a man with a bashed nose and funny-looking ear. On the other side of the street stood another man.

They were both of them, she saw, poised to spring. They—they were actually springing.

Ann gritted her pretty teeth and slammed on her brakes. Violet responded gallantly. This was a little game Violet remembered well. If Ann chose to play it in Main street with Chief looking on, that was her business. Violet's business was to skid. If anybody got in Violet's way that was their business—and misfortune.

That it was the Chelsea Cyclone's misfortune no one could doubt. Chelsea proved quicker on his feet in that spring than Lefty Red and as a result Violet's left rear wheel fouled him. Anyway, it hit him below the belt and landed him back in the gutter. There he lay, somewhat dazed. Lefty was more fortunate. He had time to jump back onto the curbstone before Violet got around to him. He was not sure what Violet's next move was to be—or his.

At that point Chief came to life.

"Hi!" he shouted.

This was addressed to Ann, who, so far as Chief was concerned, was the culprit. He had seen her knock down one pedestrian and narrowly miss another. That these were criminals, contemplating crime, never occurred to him. Was he not present in uniform? Could they not see him? And thereby be deterred?

The answer to the first two questions was certainly yes. The answer to the last was absolutely no.

"Hi!" shouted Chief again, with growing indignation.

Ann didn't even hear him. Violet was skidding not wisely but too well. Ann's hat had chosen this instant to slip down and totally obscure the vision of one eye. But she still wrestled with Violet's wheel. Then she remembered to take her foot off the brake. Violet gave a last skid and headed approximately toward home. Ann gave Violet the gas.

Violet's direction, however, was only approximate. Chief, retreating so hastily that he all but sat down, saw Violet carom against the curb, skid once more and then, straightening out, start up Main street as fast as she could go.

At that point Dicky appeared on his motor cycle.

"Go and get her!" shouted Chief. "I want her. She knocked a man down"——

Instead, Dicky hurtled on past. And Chief began to blink his eyes, wondering if, perhaps, all this wasn't a crazy dream.

For Dicky proceeded to commit obvious and apparently unwarranted assault on the man whom Violet had so narrowly missed. Dicky poked this individual plump in the stomach with the butt of the short but extremely serviceable billy that he was carrying in his right hand. Lefty promptly sat down, the better to digest this.

In the meantime Dicky lunged straight at the touring car, climbed up over its side and landed on the driver's head.

The driver of the car was Louie the Dope. To the latter, as a mark of respect, Dicky presented a crack on the head and a pair of steel bracelets all in shorter time than it took Chief to tell it afterwards.

This left the Chelsea Cyclone to be attended to. Dicky landed on him just as he was reaching for his revolver.

Lefty wasn't dead—he only wished he was.

In the meantime, Ann and Violet had gone back home, carrying the payroll with them. Ann never knew how she got there. The first thing she knew she was in the garage—very thoroughly in it.

One of Violet's fenders was crumpled as a result of Violet's impact with the curbing, and Violet's headlights, she suspected, were probably smashed, too. Ann didn't care. She simply let her head drop to her arms as they rested on Violet's steering wheel, and shivered.

This, she realized, wouldn't do. She must pull herself together. But she continued to sit just as she was, thankful that her mother had gone away for the day, until suddenly something that sounded like a troop of light artillery going into action aroused her.

Ann stiffened, but did not stir. Dicky left his mount outside and marched into the garage. Ann raised her head and met his eyes.

Her nose certainly needed powdering now. But he didn't mention it.

"You darn little idiot," he said. "So that's why you practiced skidding?"

Ann was blinking rapidly. "I—I'm sorry," she babbled. "But—I think I'm going to cry."

And cry she certainly did. And, briefly, State Patrolman Curtis Duer stood there as helpless as a man can be at such a time. Then he remembered first aid.

Now first aid is part of a State patrolman's training. If Ann had just been saved from drowning, for instance, instead of being engaged in drowning herself in tears, the rules and the regulations of the service would have told Dicky just what to do. As it was, he had to fall back on the final rule, which is, "When in doubt, use your best judgment."

Dicky used his best judgment. First, he impulsively swept the packages from the seat beside Ann. In spite of her extremity Ann gasped when the biggest hit the floor.

"The payroll!" she gasped.

"Hang the payroll!" replied Dicky, occupying the spot the payroll had vacated.

Then he proceeded to render first aid in a way which might have surprised his superiors. And Ann as well. But then so many surprising things had happened to Ann that morning that—well:

"Oh!" was all Ann said.

And that was all she could say. For Dicky continued to render first aid according to his best judgment with his arms very tight around her.

And that is how Dicky lost his shield. Lost it because the Massachusetts State Patrol is not only a young man's game but an unmarried man's game as well; lost it because he had suddenly discovered he wanted something else more.

They were married, Dicky and the something he wanted more, in September. They went on a motor trip for their honeymoon. But not in Violet. Dicky said that Ann had taught Violet bad habits.

"Want me to show you how to skid on dry pavements?" he asked as they passed the spot where she had skidded into his life of a drenched June evening.

Ann shook her head.

"Losing your nerve?" he teased. "You certainly had plenty of it then."

Ann glanced up at him, her heart in her eyes.

"But that," she murmured, "was—was before you and I were—us!"

POEMS OF ST. LOUIS

By

Byrne Marconnier.

I.—VANDEVENTER PLACE.

In sovereign dignity it holds aloof
The tide of commerce that assails its gates;
Like some old Queen in ancient, yellowed lace,
Who rules with memory's homage in her heart
And shadows of lost glory on her face.

Silent it sees a strange new life go by,
Content, in dreaming of a past allure,
To be a nest for birds—a lovers' walk,
Wherein the air is sweet with mignonette,
And fountains whisper old forgotten tunes.

And though the city crouches all about—
Snarling, impatient, at its garden walls,
Yet murmuring music drifts across green lawns
And candles flare at evening in dim halls.
While softly still a golden moon hangs low
To dream in shadow of the long ago.

Where the Pigeons Go to Die

know. Or if that George man isn't worthy of your loyalty, I shall know. And I will come to you again."

"If!" sighed Miss Wych. "If! If the world was a garden, and we were butterflies! If the world was a garden, and God was kind to lovers! Good-by, good-by, good-by!"

There is an eminent school of thought which insists that there is no such thing in this world as chance. Therefore we may take it that ever since the beginning of creation there was appointed one small wind to lurk nearby the National Gallery of Trafalgar Square for the purpose of blowing an empty paper-bag under a horse's nose.

The horse belonged to a van, and it was probably bored with the van. It gave a kick at the paper-bag. It missed the paper-bag. "Woa!" cried the driver of the van. That got on the horse's nerves, and it bolted.

Two men cried: "Ho! Woa! Oi!" An old man selling newspapers by the steps of St. Martin's-in-the-Fields said, "No 'orse can't bolt far with an 'eavy van." The driver of the van cried: "——!" An orange-and-banana merchant leaped for his life from the horse's hoofs, and his oranges and bananas fell as manna upon Trafalgar Square, and many little children ran together and gave praise. A large handsome limousine was coming at a good pace up the slope from the Strand. It had to swerve to avoid running over the orange-and-banana merchant. As it swerved it crashed into the side of an ancient taxicab that was bustling round the corner. The ancient taxicab overturned. There was a scream of smashing glass, and the two wheels of the taxicab revolved plaintively in the air.

"Bewty!" said the old man selling newspapers, for he was a connoisseur of accidents. The limousine had stopped. The horse was walking on quite calmly now. A little boy picked up the paper bag, blew into it, and made a noise. A lot of people came to look at the taxicab.

"Stand back, there! Stand back!" cried a young policeman.

The driver of the taxicab crawled from underneath the wreck. There was blood on his face, and he was so ugly that he looked like several sorts of animals at once. He stared at the chauffeur of the limousine.

"Wotcherdothatfor?" he asked bitterly.

"Come on now, lend a hand!" said the young policeman sternly.

A tall, fair, serious-looking young man had alighted quickly from the limousine, and with him a young lady in a chinchilla coat.

"My! There's a girl underneath!" she sobbed in a faint American accent.

"There was!" said the taxi-driver bitterly.

"She's pinned there!" cried the tall, fair young man.

"George, and on our honeymoon!" sobbed the young lady in the chinchilla coat.

"Come on now, give us room!" said the policeman sharply. "Now then, sir, just help me lift this wheel off the young lady."

It was the lean young man who was helping the policeman. He had followed Miss Wych. As the tall, fair young man and his young wife in the chinchilla coat pressed forward through the crowd, the lean young man looked up at him, and his face was very stern. The tall, fair young man looked back with bewildered, wretched eyes.

"Don't say she's dead!" he whispered.

"Now, sir," said the young policeman, "I'll keep this up while you bring her through sharp as you like. Now!"

The lithe young body was broken and still. The crowd pressed round.

"She's dead or! right!" said the orange-and-banana merchant.

The last flames of sunset over Admiralty Arch lit the peering faces, and they looked as impersonal as gargoyles. Some took off their hats.

"Oh, she's dead!" sobbed the young lady in the chinchilla coat.

"Such a pretty young lady!" said the taxi driver bitterly, wiping the blood from his face.

The lean young man and the young policeman knelt beside the still, broken body and tried to find life where no life was. The orange-and-banana merchant took off his hat. The policeman's helmet fell to the ground and rolled a little way down towards the Strand. The tall, fair young man held his silk hat in his hand. The lean young man looked up at him through a blinding mist of tears and stammered: "Aren't you sorry, aren't you sorry?"

"George," sobbed the young lady in the chinchilla coat, "why is he looking at you like that?"

"Blessed if I know!" stammered the tall, fair young man.

"By gum, look at the cop!" said the orange-and-banana merchant.

The lean young man darted a look at the policeman kneeling beside him, and he saw that the policeman wept, and he saw that the tip of the policeman's nose was quivering.

"She died," stammered the lean young man, "while keeping her promise to you. But you had failed her."

"I've failed at everything in every country," said the young policeman. "And now I'll probably get the sack from this job too for crying on my beat."

"'Ere, give 'im back 'is 'elmet," said the taxi driver bitterly. "A cop without a 'elmet don't look natchral."

"And who's goin' to give me back my oranges and bananas?" said the orange-and-banana merchant. "Isn't there no justice in this world, that's wot I want to know?"

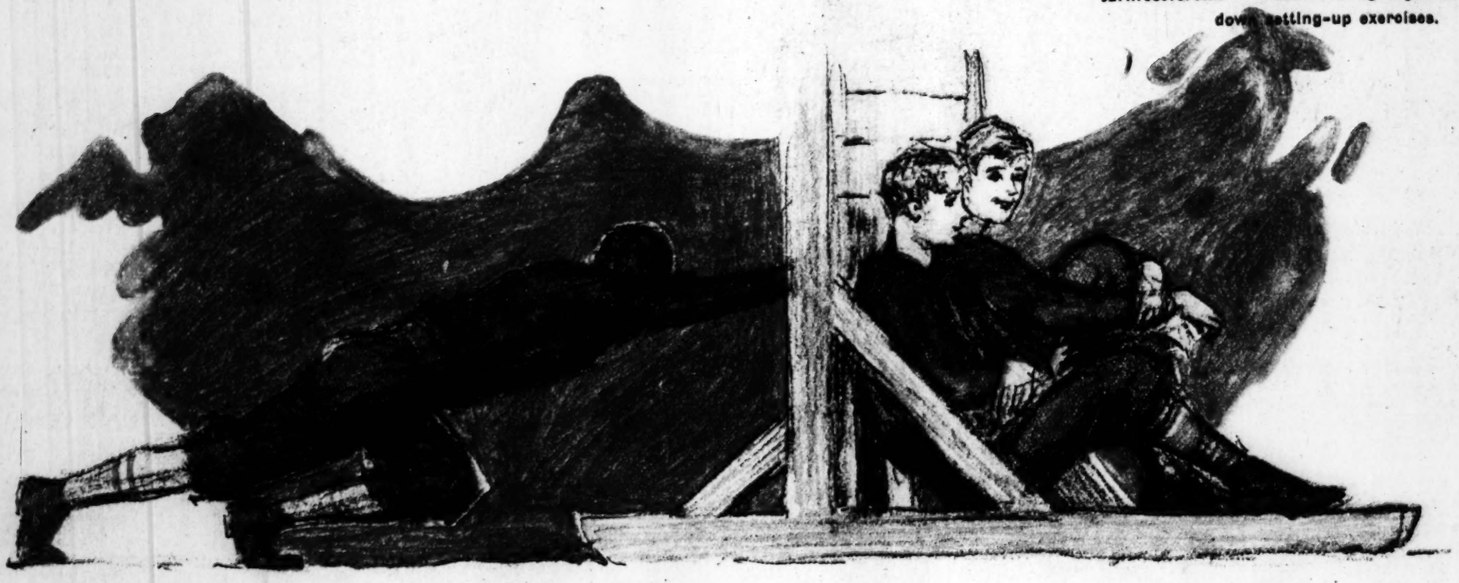
The Football Season Opens

Drawn for The Post-Dispatch By

W. A. Byrnes

"Say, I thought I was joining a football team, not a turnfestverein." Youth voicing objections to lying-down setting-up exercises.

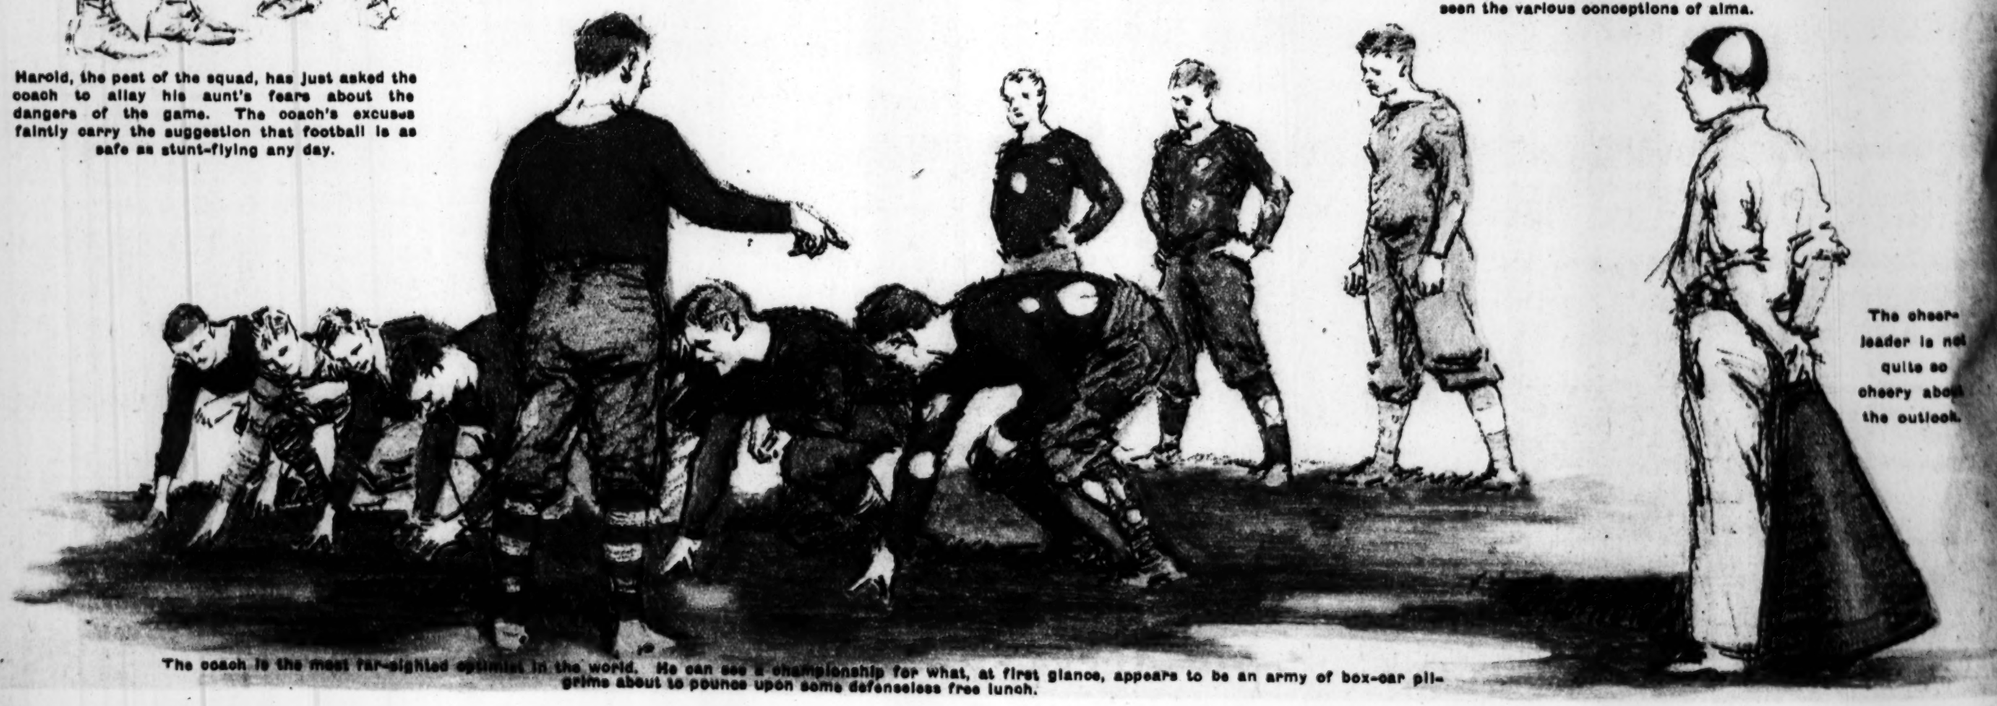


Moving picture of a young man who protested loudly when requested to push his little twenty-pound baby sister in her perambulator.

Edgar, the mental giant of the class, all puffed up because he's carrying the captain's outfit.

Harold, the pest of the squad, has just asked the coach to allay his aunt's fears about the dangers of the game. The coach's excuses faintly carry the suggestion that football is as safe as stunt-flying any day.

"Well, it's all for old alma mater," sigh the casualties of the first scrimmage of the season. Above may be seen the various conceptions of alma.



The coach is the most far-sighted optimist in the world. He can see a championship for what, at first glance, appears to be an army of box-car pilgrims about to pounce upon some defenseless free lunch.

The cheerleader is not quite so cheery about the outlook.

Put one on—the pain is gone

"I HAVE EATEN Fleischmann's Yeast for the last three years, one to three cakes daily. The remarkable improvement in my health is a matter of record based on a physician's examination. Three years ago some of the important physical findings in my case were: constipation, low blood pressure, headaches, poor complexion and pimples; my appetite was poor, I was underweight, and my staying powers were below par. I began to eat Yeast to overcome constipation. I spread it on crackers. My improvement was steady and permanent. To make a long story short: I am now fighting fit in every way. Overwork does not bother me. My endurance is there. I eat and sleep like a he-man. Constipation? Banished forever. Fresh air, exercise, and a few cakes of yeast a day did it." Walt Marsh, Belleville, Ill.

"ABOUT EIGHTEEN MONTHS AGO I was a complete wreck. Could not eat or sleep, was anemic and my color had faded to a sickly green. My friends began to exchange pitying glances and one day an old lady insisted on giving me her seat. That was the crowning humiliation . . . I decided to give yeast a trial. I started eating three cakes daily. In about six weeks I found I could eat a real meal once more; in two months my natural color began to return. I kept on and now, thanks to Fleischmann's Yeast, I am a well woman." Mrs. F. R. Conner, Florence, Ky.

"ABOUT THREE YEARS AGO I was very 'run down' and didn't have enough energy to do anything. The doctor said my system lacked vitamins. Finally, I discovered I was getting boils. As each boil appeared, it would be lanced; I became so weak I was compelled to remain in bed, and was a worry to the doctor and to relatives. I was bedridden just thirty days when my physician insisted on my taking Fleischmann's Yeast. I ate it on crackers as one would cheese, three cakes each day. After a time the doctor noticed a change; the boils stopped appearing, my appetite was better, I became more cheerful, and was able to get about. I have never had a recurrence of the boils, my intestinal tract functions properly, and I am in excellent health. I still keep on taking Fleischmann's Yeast." Mrs. Mildred Moeller, Bellerose, L. I.

A Story Told by Thousands

How they corrected their ills—regained the vitality of youth—through one simple food

NOT a "cure-all," not a medicine in any sense—Fleischmann's Yeast is simply a remarkable fresh food.

The millions of tiny active yeast plants in every cake invigorate the whole system. They aid digestion—clear the skin—banish the poisons of constipation. Where cathartics give only temporary relief, yeast strengthens the intestinal muscles and makes them healthy and active. And day by day it releases new stores of energy.

Eat two or three cakes regularly every day before meals: on crackers—in fruit juices or milk—or just plain. For constipation especially, dissolve one cake in hot water (not scalding) before breakfast and at bedtime. Buy several cakes at a time—they will keep fresh in a cool dry place for two or three days. All grocers have Fleischmann's Yeast. Start eating it today!

And let us send you a free copy of our latest booklet on Yeast for Health. Health Research Dept. 788, The Fleischmann Company, 701 Washington Street, New York.

"LIFE IS LARGELY a matter of keeping fit—of exercise: cleanliness, a good intestinal system. On September 12, 1924, I responded to the call of the War Department and found I was one of the many unfit, physically. At dinner I nibbled at my food, was nervous and irritated. When in other cities officiating at football games I was ashamed to take a shower in the same room with other officials because my back was broken out. My skin was sallow, I was not well; besides, I lacked optimism. Then I started using Fleischmann's Yeast. The results were remarkable. My appetite became normal, all traces of eruptions on my back disappeared, and I felt like a new man. It is a pleasure now to associate with other men in the locker room or club." Coach William B. Morgan, Senior High School, Sauk Centre, Minn.

THIS FAMOUS FOOD tones up the entire system—banishes constipation, skin troubles, stomach disorders. Start eating Yeast for Health today!

The Polarine Film is Perfect

While this film is only 3-1000 of an inch thick, yet it is tough, resistant to disintegration through pressure, it is not decomposed by heat, it remains unbroken.

It acts as a cushion between the fast moving metal surfaces of your motor in operation. It protects your car against excess wear and tear and undue depreciation.

Drain your crankcase every 500 miles, thoroughly cleanse your motor with Polarine Flushing Oil, and refill with the correct grade of Polarine for your particular car. Consult chart for the correct grade.

PARKING RULES OF TRAFFIC COUNCIL HELD INVALID BY JUDGE ROSSKOPF

Restrictions Declared Void in Decision Granting Attorney an Injunction Against Enforcement.

"NO-PARKING" ORDER DOWNTOWN UPSET

Court Refers to Vexatious and Oppressive Prosecutions Under an Invalid Ordinance."

Parking restrictions of the Traffic Council were declared invalid in the downtown "no-parking" area by Circuit Judge Rosskopf today in granting Charles A. Lich, an attorney, an injunction prohibiting the Police Department and Police Judges from enforcing against him, existing rules of the Traffic Council.

Lich, who was arrested for parking on Eighth street north of Olive street, from 3:15 p. m. to 4:40 p. m., contrary to Traffic Council regulations, halted trial Aug. 12 before Police Judge Roseean by the injunction proceedings. He sued for an order prohibiting enforcement of the rules upon anybody, the injunction was made applicable to him only.

Another Suit Pending.

Another suit, filed by the Franklin Avenue Improvement Association for a blanket injunction against the downtown no-parking rules is held up pending the filing by the city of an answer to plaintiff's amended petition.

Attorney Counselor Senti, defending in the suit, contended Lich had in the streets no property rights which might be infringed by the regulation. The Court's answer, in its decision, was that such injunction might be granted, notwithstanding, where "prosecutions under an invalid ordinance were vexatious and oppressive, and repeated attempts at enforcement might bring about a multiplicity of prosecution."

Judge Rosskopf held invalid the section of the traffic ordinance according to the Traffic Council power to regulate, restrict or prohibit traffic or parking, and hence held the downtown parking regulations of the Traffic Council and the penalties stipulated by the Council. However, he said, the four hour parking rule in the congested district, included in the ordinance, was valid and still in effect.

Judge Gayer's Ruling.

Judge Gayer, in the Court of Criminal Correction two weeks ago, imposed a $5 police court fine on a Traffic Council regulation upon appeal by E. J. Wallace, female coal dealer. Judge Gayer upheld the legality of the Council rulings upon the same basis as laid down by Judge Rosskopf in today's decision.

The Traffic Council regulation, which Lich excepted, prohibits parking between the hours of 7 and 10 a. m., and 4 to 6 p. m., in the district bounded by the east side of Twelfth street, north curb of Franklin avenue, south curb of Olive Street and west curb of Ninth street. Between those periods, however, it left unchanged the traffic ordinance's regulation permitting one-hour parking between 10 a. m. and 4 p. m.

The council was created as an advisory body early in 1924. Regulatory powers over traffic and parking, safety zones, one-way streets and the like were delegated to the council in section 4 of the traffic ordinance approved March 3, 1924. It is this attempt to delegate another body the legislative powers of the Board of Aldermen which Judge Rosskopf holds invalid, although he supports traffic regulations made first-hand by the board and laid down in other sections of the same ordinance.
